THE ZIONIZATION OF JESSE HELMS

Safety Valve

In keeping with Instauration's policy of anonymity, most communicants will be identified by the first three digits of their zip codes.

Months ago the prison here issued a printed warning about AIDS, telling us not to share razors, nail clippers, toothbrushes, tattoo needles, and to watch out for mosquito bites. Why are they telling us this if the only way you can catch it is through sex, dirty needles and blood transfusions?

Inmate

All things being equal, I would prefer a Majorityite to a minorityite when it comes to a job. Majority members have to overcome too many hurdles to be considered as having an equal chance.

102

For its 20th anniversary, Rolling Stone magazine issued a book of glossy pages with interviews of hip people. Daniel Ellsberg tells us that during the Nixon presidency he wrote in his diary that his worst fear was the possibility of racism rising in America due to success in Vietnam. Therefore, he did his best to sink any possibility of American success by publishing the Pentagon Papers. I get the feeling the Jews are acting the same toward Nicaragua as they did toward Vietnam. This is not to say I believe our military should invade the country, but I'm willing to hear the hawk side.

741

In view of this century's rapidly changing politico-racial realities, I offer these long-overdue updates of three old sayings: 1) Black man's heaven is a white man's hell; 2) You can judge a civilization by how well it treats its Nordics; 3) Poor United States! So far from God, so close to Mexico.

Psychology 101 teaches us that all animals seek pleasure and seek to avoid pain. Unpleasant facts are painful. Life would be simple if there were no racial differences. Grasp at any straw to avoid the reality. A friend of mine is one of those straw-graspers. He sent me a recent New York Times book review of Twice as Less by Eleanor Orr. This book blames the poor academic performance of blacks on black English. Thus, distance and location are treated as being identical. That nonsense can be shot down from almost any angle. How do we explain Asian kids who come here knowing not a word of English, yet in a few years win national spelling bees and scholarships? What the author has done is put the cart before the horse. Black English does not determine how blacks think. How they think determines the structure of black English.

European racists are hung up on the Super-leader syndrome. They are waiting for a man on horseback. They don't understand (as do the Greens in Germany and the Gay Liberation Movement here) that the new style in leadership is a collective with no one leader who can be discredited, and thus kill the movement. As for the various racist parties in Europe, it is the old divide-and-conquer tactic. I am sure all are heavily infiltrated with informers. All the major parties will combine to punish their leaders and buy off their followers with cynical promises before the elections. Of course, the promises will then be forgotten.

I am happy to see that Instauration has become the intellectual force in Britain's National Front. If our Limey cousins stress separation rather than emigration they will be making a contribution to the nation.

I think our best chance to solve the race problem is right now. In the future our chances will get worse. I do not think a depression or war will help us. People would be thinking about unemployment or the war, not about the white race.

Blacks have more freedom in South Africa than in any other African state, and have now been offered total political and territorial independence. But their total absence of personal autonomy has caused them to reject this generous offer. They insist on a forced symbiosis with whites. By means of superior laws and institutions, neither created for them or by them, they intend to subjugate their benefactors and steal their creation, which they only mismanage, corrupt and subvert, and destroy in every country where they are in the majority.

Material creativity and complexity of human relationships run in parallel, material production being somewhat in advance. (There are no philosophical savages!) The producers are the sine qua non of civilization and might be termed the true aristocracy. However, they are bound to their technology, and it is the task of the so-called leaders of a nation to provide systems of harmony in everyday interchange. But "social thinkers" who live by their wits usually bog down in their own pomposity and greed and are quite certain that they are the egg that precedes the chicken. It becomes a matter ever more conscious in the group mind as to where it all comes from, somewhat in the fashion of a religion. Consider that in history all possible forms of government have succeeded or failed at one time or another. This is where race enters the picture. Nothing is right unless race is right! We are immobilized until we are "born again" into a rational, self-preservative religion in place of the absurd, Jewishly vended lemmingism which we have espoused.

□ Le Pen is absolutely right. The whole Hebe soap opera, as I first called it in the Safety Valve, is just a footnote to WWII and is so regarded by others with much more knowledge of it than he has. The two best histories of WWII are by Britons: General J.F.C. Fuller (1948) and Capt. B.H. Liddell Hart (1970). General Fuller's nearly 500-page book, set closely in nine-point type, devotes one sentence to the whole mewling bawl. Captain Liddell Hart's book is an almost 800-page history of WWII and fails even to mention it at all. Fuller and Hart are not one-book freaks; together they authored over 40 volumes. Instauration's chronology is a little off in stating only a raving maniac would have publicly challenged the Holofoax (my word also) in 1950. Rassinier already had, and had been taken to court for it by Marie-Claude Vailant-Couturier, not a Jewess but a professional Communist, a member of the French Chamber of Deputies and the widow of a Red who was killed in a firefight with German soldiers while in the Stalinist French underground "resistance." She ended up in Ravensbruck and was the first French witness at Nuremberg. She engineered Rassinier's two bouts with French courts; the first ended in 1948, if I remember correctly, and Rassinier got a horrendous jail sentence and fine, later overturned on appeal. The second time the court threw out the complaint prior to an indictment. This, I believe, was in 1956. Le Pen's trouble is not that he has an historical problem: he has a religious problem. He doesn't believe. The Hoaxer crowd is not importuned by the hundreds of absurd discrepancies the revisionists find in their hilarious bunkum. You can't undermine a religion with facts no matter how preposterous it may be. There is no way to dissolve belief in something by demonstrating its imbecilic contradictions. One religion is as laughable as the next, but that has nothing to do with the proliferation of belief in one or the other. I suspect the day the thousandth revisionist book is published, Hoaxery will have a thousand time more shrines going than now. And by then it will be amassing trillions of dollars, not just billions.

□ I roared at the flap in the Cox newspapers about the infamous The Dispossessed Majority being mailed to all those poor defenseless white preppies in Atlanta. Some monk with an unpronounceable name made a lot of noise about it, and the ADL (natch!) had to get into the act. Who is the first group to be consulted on these types of occurrences? Give me an "A," give me a "D," give me an "L." What do these letters stand for? A(merica) D(estroyed) by L(evites).

□ In Texas one is always reading about the three-time offenders (felons) who get sent up for life, or used to. Many times these were petty thieves whose three heists failed to total $1,000 in cash or goods. Sometimes they stole food for their families. But then Ivan Boesky comes to court to be sentenced and what does he get for stealing hundreds of millions of dollars? Three years! If nothing else, that should tell Joe Six-pack all he needs to know about American jurisprudence.

□ I disagree with the statement in WASPishly Yours (Dec. 1987) that Bob Woodward's book, Veil, is a "monumental smear of the late CIA head, William Casey." If anything, it is a monumental whitewash. Casey, James Jesus Angleton and other pro-Zionist, anti-Commie zealots at the Agency, past and present, have probably done more to suborn Majority interests to the Chosen than any other group, with the possible exception of Congress. During the Casey post-mortems, Wolf Blitzer, Washington correspondent for the Jerusalem Post, allowed as how Casey was "the best friend Israel ever had" and had spent more time in Israel than he, Blitzer, had. The CIA is an evil institution -- rotten to the core. We should abolish it and start over from scratch.

□ Somebody recently sent Instauration an apology for jazz music. I admire Negro art too. Negro poetry bares the Negro soul, and I love the Negro soul. But I think we should see it as it is. I reckon Langston Hughes's "Evil Woman Blues" is an argument for white supremacy (see two stanzas of it below). Although I am a white supremacist, I am not for oppression, repression or annihilation.

I ain't gonna mistreat ma
Good gal any more.
I'm just gonna kill her
Next time she makes me sore.

I brought her from de South
An' she's goin' on back
Else I'll use her head
For a carpet tack.

I have a blues song on an LP record that begins, "I'm gonna leave you, baby -- Way out on the outskirts of town." These poems and songs seem to me to expose the death wish in white women who fancy Negro men.

□ I agree with John Nobull about fasting, but I think it is a bit tough for someone who is unprepared. A work-up period is needed to get the body and mind ready. We are physical and mental beings, not just one or the other. Working on just one side creates imbalance. First off, if you smoke, quit. Next, get into good physical condition. Strenuous aerobic exercise is best. As your circulatory system grows stronger, food, oxygen and waste products move more efficiently through your body. You will feel better, have more endurance and notice a sharper clarity of thought. Pay careful attention to your diet. Eliminate refined sugar as much as possible. To fight the effects of stress, pollution and poor quality food, vitamin and mineral supplements are essential. Also pay careful attention to the diet of the mind. Feed it with classical literature and classical music, since television and rock music are toxic. Only then will you be really ready for fasting, which is a very fine method of internal housecleaning. But always remember that to do any of these activities requires willpower, self-discipline and time.

□ I think Mayflower Descendant (Dec. 1987) missed the irony in my report on the rise in real estate values in a Chicago suburb when a Mafioso moves into the neighborhood. I'm pretty sure I know what's going to happen to you, Mr. Descendant, even though you have stocked your house with an armory of weapons. When all else fails, they will burn you out. Your pioneer ancestors avoided camping within Indian villages. You should too.

□ Let's be careful about Jews. Not all of them spend all their time discussing how to take over the world. Remember what Cholly (How I miss him!) said. Movements are launched and sustained, hostile to the Majority, as though they were conspiracies, but some groups maintain their cohesion more than the Majority. They need only a semi-coordinated effort to keep rolling and readily sense anything that will divide and weaken the Majority. They don't have to plot in dark corners.

□ I think Instauration subscribers should know of some harsh laws now in force in this so-called "free-est" country. Two states, Pennsylvania and Virginia, have laws meting out harsh punishments -- five to ten years in jail and heavy fines -- for burning two pieces of wood in the shape of a cross in an open field, even on your own property. These laws are meant to scare the Ku Klux Klan, which is not an illegal organization, into inactivity. Despite the stories spread about the evils committed by the Klan, surely the burning of a wooden cross on private property is hardly a crime. Cross-burning comes from the Scottish Highlands, from which area came many of the ancestors of the members of the original Klan. A local lord planning to go to war with a rival clan or to defend himself from impending attack needed a way to call his men together. For this purpose inflammable material, often in the form of a cross, was placed in a number of conspicuous spots high up on the mountainside. When men were called out for war, these inflammable piles were lit as signals for the clansmen to go fully armed to previously designated assembly areas. When the Ku Klux Klan was originally formed, the burning cross served the same purpose of notifying Klansmen to assemble for their nightly rides.

□ Instead of an ever-widening gyre, to include more and more people in our "movement," I notice the circle of people Instauration holds as "elect" seems to be contracting, under its own excessive qualifications for membership in the white race -- much like a "white dwarf" star collapses under its own gravity, to make an ominous comparison. The first controversy along this line was about Americans from Southern Italy and Sicily -- they were unassimilable and "weren't really with us." Then it was that ideally it is the blue-eyed, blond-haired Aryans that should be our artistic model. Most recently John Nobull has gone after Fats. My question is, where will the nitpicking end? Can Instauration afford to hold such high standards that it will exclude everyone at this late date? I imagine a time will come, after the Southern Italians, Mediterraneans, fags, uglies, brunettes, freckled and low-IQed are excised that when Instauration sounds the battle cry, there won't be anyone left to respond.

□ Democracy, far from being the ideal form of government, is in fact one of the worst. Our forefathers set up a republic, but the enemy in 200 years has turned us into a democracy, which is nothing more or less than mob rule. Some 2,500 years ago in Greece, a savant opined that democracy could never succeed, as the vote of the thinking man was cancelled by that of the unthinking man.

□ I have a friend who goes to Colgate. She is working on a paper on lesbianism for her Women's Studies course. If she even suggests that such a lifestyle is deviant, she will get a low grade. When I was in college in the 1950s, such a paper would come under the heading, Sexual Practices, Deviant. Only the Journal of Abnormal Psychology would have even thought of discussing the subject.

□ In any pressure we put on the USSR to influence its emigration policies, it is a matter of simple justice to give priorities to those ethnic groups which have suffered most from Soviet cruelty and genocide. Specifically, the Baltic nations and Ukrainians are the first victims who come to mind. Any group that played a large role in the origins and furtherance of Communist tyranny and barbarism deserves the least of our concern and help.

□ Le Pen's most important supporters remain the traditionalist Catholics, but I fear his former wife's book, which is scheduled to appear all over France just a couple of days before the general election, will talk about "partouze," which may horrify a considerable number of the traditionalists. Partouze is a current French word -- more than just jargon -- to describe couples having sex together. Quite a current thing here now within the upper-middle class -- about 5 to 10% of them, an enormous figure -- considering the Puritanism of the French middle class only 40 years ago. AIDS, however, is imposing some restrictions on these tendencies.

□ I am one of the not-so-few conservatives who support conservation, including the efforts of Greenpeace. That organization, formerly admirably apolitical, has been indulging in some heavy anti-establishmentarianism this past year. I got a properly disinfected and atheized "holiday" greeting card from them, with the following message stamped inside: "Peace on Earth -- from the staff and activists at Greenpeace." I thanked them on the back of the contribution form and added this postscript:

You might want to phrase things a bit differently in the future. We all want peace and of course are grateful for the peace we presently enjoy, but your terse Peace on Earth theme rings perceptibly of the cheap liberal "peace and justice" sloganeering we hear so much of these days. Your name is Greenpeace, not Peacegreen, and above all not Red-peace!

We must not forget that one of the most effective means of change, properly implemented, costs only 22¢.

□ Two friends, who used to live in my town, stopped in recently. They told of having attended a meeting where a female official from the IRS spoke about the new tax laws. When she had finished speaking, she asked for questions from the floor. The audience had many. The last one came from an obviously frustrated individual. "Why can't we get answers to our questions?" he asked. "Why do refund checks -- for that matter, everything -- take so long?" The IRS woman gave a few placable answers that were far from satisfactory, so the questioner bored even deeper. She hemmed and she hawed, and she ducked and evaded. Finally, she blurted out in exasperation, as she strode away from the podium, "To be really truthful, a lot of our trouble and mistakes come from those niggers we're forced to hire by quota." Alas, my friends couldn't remember her name. I'd like to have sent her a copy of The Dispossessed Majority as reward for her candor.

□ I spent three and a half years in Asian POW camps. In Thailand, where I worked for two years on the railroad that would link Bangkok and Rangoon, we were on 15-hour shifts. After work, the tools had to be cleaned and counted. One Saturday (Dec. 18, 1943), when the count was short by one tool, the Korean guards went berserk. We were lined up and the guards shouted for the culprit to come forward. Otherwise, all of us would be killed, which was no idle threat! For a while nobody moved. Then a quiet man, 40-year-old Franz Brilleman, took a step forward. He was savagely clubbed and bayoneted to death. Afterward we were warned this would happen to any of us who lost Imperial Japanese property. Before we were allowed to go to our barracks, the tools were checked again. The "missing" tool was found. It had been an accounting error! A totally innocent man had offered up his life to save us all from execution.

THE ZIONIZATION OF JESSE HELMS

MY ACQUAINTANCE WITH Jesse Helms goes back quite a few years. I was not at all surprised some time ago to hear that a copy of The Dispossessed Majority reposed on the shelf in his Raleigh (NC) residence. When I first came to know him, I believed Jesse to be a man of strong moral conviction. All outward indications were that he was. Ever fond of quoting the time-honored lessons of his father and his old school principal, Ray House, he even has a plaque on his office wall bearing his father's words: "Son, the Lord doesn't expect you to win, He only expects you to try." Upon his election to the Senate in 1972, I was confident he would go to Washington and stand up for the rights of the beleaguered white Majority, that this man was really a credit to his race -- or so I thought.

Veteran staffer George Dunlop, who has lived well off Jesse and was until recently an assistant secretary of agriculture, characterizes his boss and mentor as the personification of "Sibyl," the leading character of the book and movie of the same name, because he possesses multiple personalities, "and if you understand that, you can get what you want." I attributed Jesse's growing personal rudeness and inconsideration to the many preoccupations of an overworked politician, yet certainly not characteristic of those early American statesmen he is so fond of quoting.

I had always known our new leader could "charm a cat off a shrimp boat," as someone wrote of him, and right after the election I learned that he could turn the charm on and off instantaneously. In the course of my exposure to him and his operation, I encountered a great deal of double-dealing, which I was willing to overlook, thinking it less of an evil for a politician to be Machiavelian than to be a complete sellout like Ted Kennedy.

Helms, the private man, was the prey of numerous conflicting emotions. Most evident were his hangups about never having earned a college degree and his humble origins (humble perhaps to those with whom he now consorts). I should have realized his unabashed craving for respectability and legitimacy would have dire consequences someday for me and other Majority members. Jesse's personal secretary attributed her boss's problems to "a massive inferiority complex." His administrative assistant said the spotlight of the 1976 Republican National Convention put the finishing touches on the change. "Now you can hardly live with his ego -- or believe anything he says."

Wheeling and Dealing

In the hard-fought, tumultuous, down-to-the-wire 1984 Senate race in North Carolina, the embattled hero of the "New Right" fought for his political life. Some two years previously he had changed his mind at the last minute and cast the deciding vote for a 100% boost in the tax on cigarettes. A pack of Winstons or Salems in his home state, the nation's leading tobacco producer, would now be taxed at 16¢. Why, many wondered, did Jesse oppose the vital economic interests of his constituents?

Here's what happened. At 4:45 A.M. on the day of the vote in late summer 1982, President Reagan's tax package was certain to be defeated. Helms was against it because it included the tobacco tax provision. Minutes before the vote, Majority Leader Howard Baker and Finance Committee Chairman Robert Dole approached Jesse and cut a deal right on the Senate floor. If Jesse would switch his vote, the Republican leadership would see that his anti-abortion bill got to the floor, and the tobacco tax would be dropped in the Senate-House conference on the tax package.

Unusual? Not for most senators in this era of unprincipled legislative wheeling and dealing. Since he was chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee, as well as being from tobacco land, Jesse's vote was all the more surprising to those not privy to the deal. But the senator had his reasons. He no longer wanted to be chairman of the Ag Committee. His eyes were focusing on bigger game: the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, where he was chairman of the Subcommittee on Hemispheric (Latin American) Affairs. He wanted to be the top man of the full committee someday, and to get that plum he would have to begin playing ball with the boys who run the Senate. Years of hyperconservative tirades, parliamentary obstructionism and anti-establishment posturing had engendered among his colleagues a "perish the thought" attitude at the prospect of his ever landing such an important chairmanship.

The venomous, vehement political backlash against his vote was inevitable in the land of the golden leaf. Most colleges and hospitals in his home state had been weaned on tobacco money from the Reynolds, Dukes and lesser fat cats. The future of a host of small businesses in North Carolina was inextricably intertwined with the nation's smoking habit. The predictable outcry was fed by the liberal press, while the Democratic voting bloc chomped at the bit for Jesse's Republican scalp.

Even more distressing for Helms, no Senate-House conference was ever held on the tax package. Instead of being deleted, the tobacco tax became law. Jesse's anti-abortion bill got to the floor, only to be defeated -- as everyone, including its sponsor -- knew it would be.

I had always wondered about Jesse's preoccupation with abortion, given his privately stated views on "niggers" and their rate of procreation. It was whispered through his office that years before a member of Helms's family had been sent to a home for unwed mothers. True or not, the predominance of strict traditionalist Roman Catholics on his legislative staff no doubt re-enforced his feelings against abortion. Yet the state he supposedly represents has the lowest Catholic percentage in the nation.

As the 1984 election loomed, the stage was set for a showdown between the senator and the state's generally popular, ideologically flexible governor, Jim Hunt. What was Jesse to do? His standing with the voters had sunk to a new low.

In the nick of time an unlooked-for opportunity presented itself -- a god-sent issue that would, as Jesse predicted, "go down good" in North Carolina. The proposed Martin Luther King holiday was on the Senate docket. Before the fight began, Jesse's longtime pollster, Arthur Finkelstein ("He's a Jew, but he's good," Jesse allows),¹ had his client almost 30 points down in the opinion polls, with a seemingly insurmountable 30-plus-percent negative rating. Historically, when a politician tries to placate people who won't support him for any reason, it's a calamity at the ballot box.

Damning the torpedoes, Jesse followed his shrewdest instincts and turned up the burner on Rev. King. He did it not only because he had no use for the civil rights saint, but because it was politically expedient. The harder the liberal-minority coalition attacked his "racism," the more popular he became. Pundits of all stripes who had previously consigned Jesse to the political graveyard now fell strangely silent.

1. In 1981 Jesse's political action committee, the National Congressional Club, opened a Washington office for purposes of clearing all federal patronage in North Carolina. A Finkelstein protégé and blood brother was appointed to that strategic outpost.

Something was afoot. Jesse was orating what most folks felt and thought, and the folks were responding. To most of the electorate -- and not only in North Carolina -- the King holiday was a bad and insulting joke, and "Jesse's the only one with the guts to come out and say it."

But there was still that negative rating. Aside from the appointment of campaign spokesman Claude Allen, a black, much more had to be done.²

A combination of intestinal fortitude, jugular instinct, money and common sense would be required to win the 1984 Senate race. Jesse's creator, gray eminence and commander to the faithful, Tom Ellis, and pollster Finkelstein got their heads together and unleashed one of the most furious and hard-hitting campaigns ever seen in U.S. politics.

One stumbling block was Jesse's designs on the Foreign Relations Committee. If Senator Charles Percy of Illinois, the committee chairman, lost his seat, and Jesse kept his and the Republicans retained control of the Senate, then the North Carolinian would be in line for the chairmanship. Accordingly, he became the #2 target of the pro-Israel lobby in the 1984 election, the #1 enemy being Percy, who had made the grievous error of recommending that the U.S. tone down its warmongering pro-Zionism. If Jesse was re-elected, would he "desert tobacco" and give up his Agriculture Committee chairmanship? He promised his farming constituents he would not.³

2. The appointment was somewhat hypocritical in view of Helms's attitude towards blacks. For years he referred to Negroes as "Fred's," a code word coined by his staff during his first Senate term so his anti-black talk would not be understood if overheard. When Helms invited Bishop Abel Muzorewa of what was then Rhodesia to the U.S. to plead his case, the senator arranged a red-carpet trip to Asheville so the black churchman could see an elderly former teacher. In the course of his visit there, the bishop wrote $2,000 worth of rubber checks. "That nigger!" Helms commented. Once when a Negro driver suddenly swerved in front of him in traffic, Jesse said, "All right, be a nigger!" Such talk from him is commonplace in private.

In spite of his opinion of Negroes, Jesse was never too strong on race. He took the side of Argentina in the Falklands war. He was the Senate's chief opponent of the Genocide Treaty and for years had single-handedly held it up in the Foreign Relations Committee. As a test of his conversion to the Zionist cause, the Jewish lobby approached him and pointed out how important the treaty was to Jews. They acknowledged his longstanding reservations on its infringements of national sovereignty and on the scary prospect of U.S. citizens being subject to the rulings of an international tribunal. All they asked him was to give it a fair chance. Just let it out of committee, that's all.

Jesse knew if the treaty got to the Senate floor it would be passed, but he let it go. Before the full Senate, the country's "most conservative senator" fought the Genocide Treaty tooth and nail and was soundly defeated, as he was sure he would be. Many of his gullible supporters, unaware of his committee cave-in, praised his "courageous" stand.

3. Perhaps the earliest indication that Jesse would one day play ball with the Zionists was his 1980 sanction of the so-called "Madison Group," a foreign policy roundtable headed by Helms's kosher conservative minion, John Carbaugh. Taking its name from its meeting place, American-based Israelite Marshall Coyne's Madison Hotel, the group's primary mission was to funnel information to the Reagan campaign's foreign and defense policy apparatus, in the process favorably positioning its members for jobs in a Reagan administration. Decidedly pro-Israel, the only adherents of the group to be awarded jobs were Mark Schneider at the National Security Council and Richard Perle at Defense, both of the Chosen persuasion. Much of the remainder of the group eventually wound up on Jesse's Senate payroll rather than in the administration to which they had so assiduously groveled.

Finkelstein and Ellis reminded the senator of his "Jewish problem," which was not altogether dissimilar from his Jim Hunt problem. Yet the last thing Jesse had on his mind was appeasing Hunt. So, he ruminated, why appease the Jews? (His only prominent Jewish contributor was Ivan Boesky.)⁴ But he couldn't help but envy the lavish Jewish fundraisers in Palm Beach and Beverly Hills that were netting the Hunt campaign massive sums. At that point in time, Michael Kleiner appeared on the scene.

Soon the senator was spending a great deal of time with Knesset member Kleiner, a "conservative" Israeli politician who belonged to the Herut Party. Kleiner, with an assist from Peter Goldman of the pathologically Zionist group, Americans for a Safe Israel, was busy convincing Jesse that Israel was America's only ally in the Middle East. Although he had been the Senate's loudest anti-Israel voice (practically a minority of one), Kleiner and Goldman didn't need to twist Helms's arm too hard.⁵

By hunkering down and spending some $25 million on his race, and with the help of Claude Allen, pollster Finkelstein and numerous conferences with Kleiner (to ease the pressure from the Israeli lobby), Jesse squeaked by with 51.95% of the vote. Once re-elected, he immediately set about attaining his dream chairmanship of the Foreign Relations Committee, even while assuring the pundits that "It is my intent to remain as chairman of Agriculture." Some weeks later, from his Raleigh office, Jesse had his entire Washington staff⁶ on the phone in a conference call and gave instructions not to talk to the press about what he would or would not do regarding the chairmanship. He warned staffers, "If you do, it will be your job."

The Sanctity of a Helms Promise

Chief legislative aide James P. Lucier, an ultramontane Catholic with a Ph.D. in English literature (an odd kind of braintruster for a Baptist college dropout), was instructed to conduct discreet interviews in preparation for hiring a Foreign Relations staff.⁷ Meanwhile a plan was hatched to orchestrate a statewide grass roots campaign calling upon Jesse to take over the Foreign Relations chair.

Among the religious potentates enlisted, Rev. Jerry Falwell was the pivotal figure. His job was to get the "born agains" on the bandwagon, as he had done so successfully in the Senate race.⁸

4. The Senator's personal hero is and has long been Winston Churchill, whose grave he visited with great reverence during a U.K. junket. Political lackeys once gifted old Jesse with a truckling biography of their shared hero.

5. The Senator's opinion of Jews, before he saw the (financial) light, was definitely negative. When Senator Howard Metzenbaum's office declined a gift Jesse's office was distributing, Helms joked, "Maybe I should send the Jew a ham."

6. Helms's present staff includes Deborah DeMoss, the sister of Mark DeMoss, a top Falwell aide. Their mother is a country girl from North Carolina; their late father, Art DeMoss, was a Greek who made millions in insurance and became one of Falwell's financial angels. Jesse and Falwell often hitch rides on the DeMoss family jet. Deborah, who lives in the expensive Watergate apartment complex, is bright, fluent in Spanish and very born again.

7. Lucier, despite his current political and religious leanings, once wrote a glowing obituary of white supremacist Earnest Sevier Cox while serving as Jack Kilpatrick's understudy at the Richmond News Leader. It was in this capacity that Lucier came to know Helms, prior to the days of his free trips to Israel and service as Jesse's contact man with Michael Kleiner, Meir Kahane and a host of other Israel-first luminaries.

8. Falwell still phones Helms about once a week. The fundamentalist senator also keeps in close contact with other prominent Bible beltters. Pat Robertson and his wife have spent at least one weekend with the Helmses at their Lake Gaston home. Mrs. Helms, by the way, stuck a prayer for her husband's victory in his 1972 Senate race in Jerusalem's Wailing Wall.

North Carolina tobacco and agricultural magnates were being approached with the rationale that Jesse deserved the Foreign Relations chairmanship because of tobacco's prominence in foreign trade.

Bunker Hunt agreed to bankroll the effort, reportedly promising to shell out "Whatever you need." Senator Richard Lugar, second in seniority to Helms on both the Agriculture and Foreign Relations Committees, would get the chairmanship of the former, and Jesse would stay on at Agriculture by chairing a new Subcommittee on Tobacco. Accordingly, Jesse's promise not to desert tobacco would be fulfilled. "For the first time in history we would have an entire subcommittee just for tobacco," boasted one aide.

Newspaper ads were composed; TV story boards were produced. "We know you promised, but we need you" was the theme. Professional conservatives Howard Phillips and Paul Weyrich were deeply involved in the prospective campaign. Many prominent Christian fundamentalists added their voices to the chorus of those who demanded that Jesse should be forgiven for renegeing on his most solemn campaign promise.

The press relations juggernaut was just beginning to gain steam, and was preparing to go public when Senator Rudy Boschwitz (R-MN) suddenly threw what might be described as a Jewish curve. The lumber millionaire and member of the Foreign Relations Committee announced that if Helms attempted to become chairman, he would call for a vote of the committee and cast his ballot against Jesse. Under the rules, any member could call for a vote to approve or disapprove of a chairman, and the vote was binding. Boschwitz's threat was enough to derail Jesse's best-laid plans.

Senator Paula Hawkins (R-FL), another committee member, responding to questions from a south Florida Jewish group, said that if Jesse persisted in his bid, she too would call for a vote. With a 9-8 balance in favor of the Republicans, all that was necessary was one GOP defection, and two were already certain.

Despite his latter-day palling around with Kleiner, Jesse's pro-Israel track record was pretty dismal. In a CNN interview during the invasion of Lebanon, Jesse had said that if Israel did not clean up its act, "We've got to shut down diplomatic relations." With that statement on the record, it was hard for him to do the necessary spine-bending required of politicians who have not proved their unswerving loyalty to Zionism and need to get back in the good graces of Jewish organizations. As the press bored in on Jesse's predicament, Lucier asked his boss what he was supposed to tell the people who were ready to go public with the ads and the "grass roots" campaign. The answer was, "Tell them anything you want to."

Because of the threatened defections of Boschwitz and Hawkins, the only remaining way Helms could get the chairmanship was through seniority, a semi-sacred Senate institution. If Lugar was elected Majority leader, he would automatically lose his chairmanship. Next in seniority was Charles Mathias (R-MD), who had experienced some mild turbulence with the Jewish lobby. Mathias's left-wing voting record engendered the hope that if Lugar did get the Majority Leader's post, the White House and others would see that Jesse got his dream.

Helms maintained a strange silence about his plans. Three minutes after Bob Dole, not Lugar, was elected Majority Leader, minions of the fourth estate camped outside Jesse's office, waiting "for the announcement on the chairmanship." Lucier, totally in the dark, stormed over to Jesse's hideaway office in the Capitol in search of his master. The moment Lucier left, Helms sprang out from around a corner (one of his favorite tricks) and announced before the cameras that he was keeping his promise to the people of North Carolina. "I will remain as chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee."

Moments later, while consoling two tearful female and one shocked male foreign policy aides in his private office, Helms said some "good things" would happen on the committee. One "good thing" was that Claude Allen, Jesse's token black, was hired by Chairman Lugar to handle some Africa legislation and press relations work.

The accolades from North Carolina were overwhelming. Jesse had kept his word to the folks back home and turned down "all that power." "Jesse is honest, Jesse is true," could be heard at many church and political gatherings. Bunker Hunt's reaction was less enthusiastic: "I didn't spend a million dollars to protect tobacco in North Carolina." Though many involved in the foreign relations gambit had wanted Helms to go ahead and fight it out with Boschwitz and the liberals, Jesse knew better.

But he didn't give up. After the Republicans lost control of the Senate in the 1986 elections, Jesse defeated Lugar for the post of ranking minority member on Foreign Relations in a hotly contested battle.⁹

A Toady of Israel

Today Helms, a late-blooming but zealous convert to the cause of Zion, is one of Israel's best friends in the Senate. He has stated that the U.S. should "never pursue any plan that envisions a separation of the West Bank from Israel." During a trip to Israel in 1985 -- arranged and paid for by Senator Chic Hecht (R-NV) and Robert Jacobs, the moneybags of Meir Kahane, Jesse treated the press to a daily output of pro-Israel massaging.

Writing for the pro-Zionist Heritage Foundation's Policy Review magazine, in an article entitled "Keeping Faith: A Baptist Deacon Reflects on American Policy Toward Israel," Jesse said

Israel is really our only reliable ally in the Middle East. Only Israel can oppose Soviet hegemony over the entire area.

In September 1985, Jesse advocated moving the U.S. embassy

9. Jesse's Foreign Relations Committee staff, aside from Lucier and DeMoss, includes Zionists Bob Friedlander and Darryl Nuremburg, the former a counsel and the latter his Middle East and Israel issues expert. Nuremburg served for years as the dairy expert on Jesse's Ag Committee staff, and is the boyfriend of Senator Hecht's daughter. Others include one staffer repeatedly dismissed from previous positions for intelligence leaks, another investigated by the FBI for too cozy relations with the pussyfooting South African government, and yet another who was forced out of a previous staff position because of trouble with young ladies.

from Tel Aviv to Jerusalem. The following month he went on record against an arms sale to Jordan. In February 1986 he endorsed and raised funds for Bruce Herschensohn, the Jewish candidate in the Republican primary for a California Senate seat. It was both impolitic and discourteous for the senator to make such an endorsement with so many conservatives still in the primary race, which was eventually won by Ed Zschau. Congressional Club staffers in North Carolina were dispatched to California to work around the clock for Herschensohn.

In an unusual move, Jesse went out of his way to remain neutral and remove himself (to the point of disowning) his own political action committee's candidate for the Senate seat of the retiring John East of North Carolina. The candidate, David B. Funderburk, a Fulbright scholar and former ambassador to Romania, was no favorite of the Jewish lobby. He had openly solicited the support and cooperation of Jewish leaders, in both Romania and the U.S., to help speed the emigration of persecuted Christians from the Soviet puppet state. In his solicitation he had been so impolitic as to remind Jews that they were not the only ones who had been oppressed by Communist regimes.

Since an army cannot hope to win without the support of its commanding general, the Funderburk campaign was doomed from the start by Jesse's repeated refusal to endorse or even put in a good word for the candidate. In the end Funderburk lost the primary to Congressman James Broyhill by 67% to 30% (with 3% going to White Patriot Party leader Glenn Miller). Broyhill lost in the general election to left-leaning Terry Sanford.

White Patriots Betrayed

But the desertion of Funderburk was piddling compared to what Jesse did to the White Patriot Party. Back in late 1980 Jesse and staffer Sam Currin met to plot pre-election strategy. As they looked ahead to 1984, Governor Jim Hunt seemed all but unbeatable. Wise in the ways of political warfare, Jesse managed to get Currin appointed U.S. Attorney for the Eastern District of North Carolina. With the help of two other pro-Helms U.S. attorneys, Currin was then in a strategic position to find the skeletons in Hunt's closet.

Numerous politically inspired prosecutions failed to damage the governor directly, though they tainted some of his cronies. Dovetailing with the negative campaign against Hunt, the cooked-up investigations certainly had an impact. If nothing else, the governor had to spend more time looking over his shoulder and assuming a defensive posture. Currin and Jesse met privately -- and frequently -- in Raleigh during the height of the campaign. Both were politically active Baptists and were, understandably, members of the same social circles. But they must have had more to talk about than church socials. The targeted probes against Hunt & Co. must have been discussed -- not an altogether uncommon abuse in U.S. politics.

Following Helms's 1984 victory, a dual use of the U.S. Attorney's office was devised. Jesse wanted to put Currin, a rock-ribbed conservative, on the federal bench. But he also needed to ingratiate himself with the Jewish lobby. He was not surprised that when Currin's name was submitted, all hell broke loose. Not only were Senate liberals determined to block the nomination, but more than 25 prominent Raleigh area lawyers publicly announced their opposition, including Jesse's old friend and poker-playing buddy, Judge James H. Bailey.

The upshot was that Currin needed to placate the liberals and Jews on the Senate Judiciary Committee, and he needed to placate them fast. So what case did Currin personally prosecute? What better high-profile bootlicking assignment than to go after the White Patriot Party? Night after night Currin could be seen on the evening TV news talking about the "evil" White Patriots. Nothing could have played into Currin's hands any better than Glenn Miller's widely publicized death threat against him.

Currin pursued the White Patriot Party, before and after the death threat, with a zeal that surpassed his 1984 electioneering for Jesse. When the Currin nomination for federal judge had to be withdrawn, after the Democrats won back control of the Senate, there was some consolation for his sponsor. One pro-Israel lobbyist was quoted as saying, "Helms's man [Currin] is doing a good job with that bunch [the White Patriot Party] in North Carolina."

Some of the most severe jail sentences for the White Patriots were handed down by Judge Terrence Boyle, a New Jersey native who presides over the federal bench in Elisabeth City (NC). He was nominated for the post by Helms and is the son-in-law of Tom Ellis.

As of now, Helms, the champion of Christian values, the defender of South Africa, the Senate's chief opponent of foreign aid and Soviet imperialism, and the onetime archenemy of Jewish expansionism, stands as the most slavish lackey of the Zionist lobby. He has completely sold out and turned his back on his own people -- all for a leadership position on the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and whatever other pieces of silver he can accumulate. There are plenty of Majority renegades, but most never pretended to be anything else.

Journalist Joe Maynor once said of Jesse, "Papa was the first teacher that Jesse Helms Jr. had, and the lessons he taught were based on a strict code of hard work, justice and moral conduct." Wonder what Papa would think of Jesse's modern day pandering to his new masters?

Though saddened, angered and betrayed, Majority activists should not be disheartened. Any present-day U.S. politician, no matter what his public pronouncements and party affiliation, will swallow whatever principles he has left and turn against his own people in order to get campaign funds and a friendly nod from the media.

Helms's actions are par for the American political course in the late 20th century. They should remind us once again never to put one iota of faith in any present-day legislator or government official who attains "national status." To reach a high position on the political totem pole, the politician must become a walking, talking, voting renegade. Whatever he does in the White House, in Congress or on the Supreme Court will be for himself and the minorities -- and against us.

Those who wish to fight for the survival of the American Majority must start with a clean slate -- and this means a clean political slate. Anyone who has attained any high political office in this country in these times must have played by the rules of "politics as usual," which by definition makes him a mortal enemy.

Ponderable Quote

Senator [Richard] Russell [of Georgia] once remarked to me that Congress should only meet to legislate on basic domestic problems every ten years and that it should "pass everything in sight" at such meetings. In between, he thought, it should come together each year only to handle the appropriations. His fundamental concept was that a stream of social legislation year after year was bound to be upsetting to the Executive agencies who are charged with carrying out the laws. In his judgment, they needed time to learn how to make the laws work. Furthermore, laws should not be passed before the public has really had a chance to become familiar with the issues.

BLOOD GROUPS AND RACIAL DIFFERENCES

DOES A DIFFERENCE between blacks and whites in the progress of a disease that targets blood cells make sense? Most people are poorly prepared to understand this dissimilarity because schools teach that racial differences are only skin deep. Biology and anthropology textbooks frequently feature world maps with shaded-in areas showing the worldwide distribution of ABO blood groups. Unfortunately, the areas of blood group distribution don't match areas of racial distribution, the most glaring example being the almost worldwide distribution of blood group A. All of which seems to indicate that there are no serological differences between human races. After all, it's argued, blood transfusions can be made from a person of one race to another race. Blood can be separated into types A, B, AB and O and, once sorted out like that, generally exchanged.¹

The ABO blood group(ing) system, however, is basically a system of categorizing and keeping tabs on some biochemically active substances (antigens and antibodies) that are carried either on the surface of the blood cells or in the plasma. But there are 19 other blood group systems, each of which keeps tabs on different substances. It's true that human races have some of the blood substances that the ABO system keeps track of. But the blood of all races isn't the same. Several of the 19 other blood group systems identify and keep tabs on substances that naturally occur in the blood of one race but not another.²

1. Blood transfusions began in 1665. For centuries doctors had mixed results. Sometimes they saved a patient's life, at other times they ended it. It wasn't until this century that Austrian pathologist Karl Landsteiner began to separate human blood into chemically identifiable groups or blood types. If these are mismatched, they will coagulate or show other bad transfusion reactions. By 1902 Landsteiner had identified four blood types, which he called A, B, AB and O. In 1927 he discovered the MN blood groups. Three years later he won the Nobel Prize. In 1936 he wrote the scientific classic, The Specificity of Serological Reactions. Working with Alexander Wiener, Landsteiner discovered the Rhesus factor in 1940.

2. For instance:

Rhesus: The Rh blood group system clearly discriminates between races. Within the Rh system, besides the Rh negative, there are actually many different kinds of Rh positive blood (that is, various Rh+ antigens). The unique African Rh positive substance is unlike the Rh positive substances of other races. Sixty-five percent of all Negroes have this African Rh blood type, which can properly be called either Ro or cDe (according to two different classification systems). In addition, in the remaining 35% of the black African population the distribution of the other Rh types occurs in proportion different from those of Caucasians or other populations.

Duffy: The Duffy blood group system also sets Negroes apart. It is based on three distinct genes called Fy^a, Fy^b and Fy. The Negro gene, Fy, is substantially different from the two shared by other races. It gives rise to a unique blood substance.

P: Negroes have the world's highest frequency of type P blood, over 80% of which is found in Africa.

Mismatches under the relatively important blood group systems listed above can result in serious transfusion reactions. Several other blood group systems also identify substances that are racially specific. For example, the Diego system identifies a blood substance limited to Amerindians and Asian Mongoloids.

Moreover, although all human races have some kind of ABO blood type, how "human" are the ABO blood types? What pedigree do they prove? Are they really prima facie evidence of humanity? It's not generally known that apes and monkeys have ABO types, too. The blood of various species of anthropoid apes is so similar to human blood that it's hard to tell one from another.

Tests have been made using reactions to the sera of the ABO, MN and Rh blood groups in order to compare humans to all apes and many species of monkeys. In terms of general biochemistry, man's closest relative is the chimpanzee, followed in order by the gorilla, the orangutan and the gibbon. The common chimpanzee has blood groups A and O; the pygmy chimp only A. Gorillas have blood groups A and B, but the mountain gorilla has only A, and lowland gorillas only B (and in this case the B substance is distinguishable from the human B substance). Orangutans and gibbons have blood groups A, B and AB.

The MN system is the second most important human blood group system. Three human blood types within this system are M, N and MN. Members of all species of apes have been found, like humans, to carry the M substance. Chimpanzees carry both the M and N substances.³ (The plasma of apes, it so happens, is like human plasma.)

After a considerable gap in evolutionary grade, man's next nearest relatives in the Old World are monkeys. However, in monkeys the ABO substances aren't found in the blood itself, but in body fluids and tissues.⁴ Two examples: the Rhesus monkey (Macaca mulata) has the B substance; the Java macaque (Macaca irius) the A, B and AB substances.

To return for a moment to the theory that the widespread distribution of "human" blood group A proves we are all "one" (any ABO group could be used), it might be noted that A is also distributed through Africa and Asia in the apes. ABO blood group maps and textbooks that suggest all human beings belong to the same race because they

That human races can differ in the genes that determine their blood chemistry is illustrated by the fact that 8% of all blacks have the abnormal hemoglobin that distorts and elongates red blood cells, causing sickle cell anemia. Organic racial differences can be found in almost all parts of the blood. The greatest racial dissimilarities occur in the most important portion of the gamma globulin -- immunoglobulin G.

The presence or absence of the African Rh blood type has been used to measure the percentage of Negro admixture in Brazil (Encyclopaedia Britannica, 1980, vol. 15, p. 353). The presence of Duffy's gene Fy^a was used by William Shockley to measure the percentage of Caucasian admixture in the black population of Oakland (CA). (Proceedings of the National Academy of Science, 1973) The presence of the (Mongoloid) factor, Dit, may be similarly used to measure Amerindian admixture in the New World Hispanic populations.

3. It would be erroneous to think that the absence of the N substance in some species of apes separates them serologically from humans. Amerindians also lack the N substance.

4. Many humans also carry the ABO blood group substances in their saliva and other body fluids. Such people are called secretors.

have the same kind of blood is just so much rhetoric.⁵ ABO blood groups exist in all hominoids.

In the 1970s, biologists working with new methods determined that an astonishing 99% of human blood and body proteins are identical to those of the chimpanzee.⁶ We are much alike, the apes and us. But we are also manifestly different and civilization exists within the scope of that difference. A scant 1% was the organic blood difference at birth between Ronald Reagan and his old co-star, Bonzo. Creationists to the contrary, humans are formulated more or less like apes. Thereafter a pinch and a peck are important. The ingredients for humanity come in very small amounts. Major racial differences derive from minor differences in the recipe.

In The Origin of Races (Knopf, 1962), the late Harvard anthropologist Carleton Coon cited a 1960 article by two biological researchers, Alexander Wiener and E.B. Gordon, who found at least three unique similarities in the blood of Negroes and chimpanzees.⁷ The researchers determined that although the chimpanzee has blood groups A and O, the chimpanzee's A substance is of a special type called A^{1,2}. Even in humans, more than one type of A blood exists. More often than not, type A blood falls into one of two common subcategories, types A¹ and A². As a third possibility, although it's less common, some humans do have blood type A^{1,2}. This latter type is found most frequently in Negroes. It is very seldom found in Caucasoids and may be limited to those of North African ancestry.⁸

5. What's worse, such maps often group unrelated races together in odd fraternities based on the presence of a particular ABO blood type. By focusing only on limited aspects of ABO chemistry, a variety of crazy maps can be made. Amerindians don't have type B blood. Since Asian peoples and orangutans do have B, an ABO blood group map could be constructed to "prove" that Asians are more closely related to orangutans than to Amerindians!

How far do falsifications about the ABO blood brotherhood of man really extend? Very far. Many kinds of bacteria that live in the human stomach and intestines have antigens that closely resemble and cross-react with the active substances of blood groups A and B. Such bacteria often leave the gastrointestinal tract and live in water. Should they be included in the next census?

6. We also share 99% of our genetic material with chimpanzees. By comparison, horses and donkeys have only about 97% of their genetic material in common. Yet crossbreeding between them produces mules. Scientists have spoken seriously for many years of mating a human with a chimpanzee. In 1987 the media buzzed for a while because an Italian doctor suggested that he had created such a half-breed (Instauration, Aug. 1987, p. 31).

The Pygmy chimp (Pan paniscus) has a high forehead, is especially intelligent and mates face-to-face. The female is sexually receptive for almost all of her estrus cycle. Pygmy chimp infants look hauntingly human. For more about such chimps and genes, see "An Uncommon Chimp," Science 83, June 1983, pp. 40-47.

7. "The Blood Groups of Chimpanzees, ABO Groups and MN Types," American Journal of Physical Anthropology, Vol. 18, No. 4 (1960), pp. 301-11.

8. These sources don't differentiate between kinds of Caucasoids, but the background pattern is that some Semites and ethnically mixed Mediterranean populations occasionally add Negro traits to Caucasoid statistics: e.g., among European Jews and in some areas of Southern Europe the frequency of the African Rh blood type reaches 5% (Encyclopaedia Britannica, 1980, vol. 14, p. 842). The Negroid gene of the Duffy system, Fy, occurs in high frequency in some Yemenite Jewish populations (op. cit., vol. 3, p. 694).

While studying the MN blood group substances in chimpanzees, Wiener and Gordon also worked with an organic chemical called anti-U factor, which is found in the blood of all Caucasians. By contrast, none of the chimps tested carried it. The researchers pointed out that although some Negroes carry the anti-U factor, other Negroes don't.

With the help of his partner Gordon, Wiener, whose background as Karl Landsteiner's co-worker in the 1940 discovery of the Rh factor certifies his authority on Rh chemistry, discovered that the blood of Negroes and chimpanzees show a similar reaction to a certain antigen of the Rhesus blood group system called Rh-Hr.

Laboratory work discovered Negro/chimpanzee similarities (A^{1,2}, anti-U, Rh-Hr) within the parameters of the three most important blood group systems, ABO, MN and Rh. This is a well-rounded biochemical relationship.⁹ It is also one of the forbidden topics of current establishment anthropology. For openly discussing the provocative biological differences between races, among them the identical characteristics of Negro and chimpanzee blood in The Origin of Races, Carleton Coon, then a senior professor with several well-known books to his credit, was attacked and hounded by the liberal power bloc in academia with such virulence that the old scholar's health suffered and he had to take early retirement from Harvard. Since that time, public education policy has been to teach that one has only to prick the surface of Caucasian skin or Negro skin to find out that there is a close, deep and abiding blood relationship. When the subject of racial dissimilarities in blood composition does unavoidably come up, the self-appointed censors of public information stress that "human" ABO blood types are the same everywhere and any other differences are so minor as to be without importance.

Ironically, after so many years of actively obstructing public recognition of the links in blood chemistry between Negroes and one lower primate, the equalitarian lobby is being tormented by the visible prominence of a link between Negroes and another lower primate, the African green monkey. The emerging record of racially differential transmission of the AIDS virus, which attacks the blood's T-helper cells, exposes the folly of any assessments that racial differences in blood chemistry are unimportant.

BRIAN SCOTT

The Mongoloid race, which has comparatively little A blood, is without Type A^{1,2}. As a general circumstance of blood chemistry Caucasoids have fewer serological differences from Negroes than from Mongoloids. This is probably due to historic proximities. On the other side of the world, eastern proximities have resulted in the Mongoloid race having fewer serological differences from Australoids (Aborigines) than from Caucasoids.

9. What is the reason for these Negro/chimpanzee biochemical factors? One possible answer is that they came about through parallel evolution because this particular organic chemistry is advantageous in the African environment. (People who champion this view have difficulty denying that the similarities between Negro and chimpanzee behavior might have evolved the same way.) Professor Coon, while reporting that others had speculated this way, did not commit himself to this interpretation. He probably noted the absence of any hard evidence of an evolutionary benefit to this particular blood chemistry. The other possibility is that Negroes and chimpanzees share a common ancestor who passed the substance on to both.

KURT WALDHEIM: THE CASE FOR THE DEFENSE

ON APRIL 17, 1987, Austrian President Kurt Waldheim became the first head of state to be legally banned from coming to the United States. A Justice Department spokesman announced that "the evidence collected establishes a prima facie case that Kurt Waldheim assisted or otherwise participated in the [Nazi] persecution of persons because of race, religion, national origin or political opinion."

Bruce Levinson, national chairman of the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith, promptly hailed the decision, accusing Waldheim of "a past record of complicity with the Nazi effort to exterminate the Jewish people and persecute other groups." World Jewish Congress chief Edgar Bronfman praised Attorney General Edwin Meese's "courageous" decision, which "sent a clear message: Nazis are not welcome here."

What was the legal basis for this ban? What was the moral basis for it? Even a cursory examination of these questions shows that the ban was a hypocritical, short-sighted mistake. It was based on bad law, selectively enforced -- a law that puts foreigners to a moral test that many Americans would fail.

In spite of the ban and all that has appeared in the media about the Waldheim affair, no hard evidence has been produced to implicate Waldheim in even a single atrocity or war crime. "It must be stressed that there is no proof that Waldheim has committed any war crimes," declared the director of Austria's official press and information service in New York. Even Time magazine observed (May 11), "there is no definitive proof that the Austrian President committed war crimes."

Famed "Nazi hunter" Simon Wiesenthal, who lives and works in Vienna, has emphasized that no proof has been presented to show that Waldheim was a criminal. Wiesenthal told the New York Daily News, "there is absolutely no evidence the man was involved in crimes." He cautioned, "when you call a man a criminal without evidence, you let people say that it is only a Jewish accusation." In a November 1986 interview with reporters in Vienna, Wiesenthal stated, "I have seen no evidence that he was involved in a crime, ordered a crime or proposed a crime."

Waldheim has been falsely accused of lying about his wartime record by allegedly failing to mention in his autobiography that he served in the Balkans. He supposedly implied that his military service ended after a period of hospitalization and university leave in Vienna. This accusation is based on a misleading passage in the American edition of his memoirs. The German original contains this sentence, which was deleted from the American version by the publisher: "After my university leave and after my leg healed, I was called back into army service. I was stationed near Trieste shortly before the end of the war."

Some of the charges against Waldheim have already been quietly dropped. Last November, the Israeli government acknowledged that there was no real evidence that Waldheim was involved in atrocities or war crimes against Jews. An official inquiry discounted the "evidence" of Israelis who claimed to have witnessed Waldheim's involvement in such crimes. An Austrian government investigating team that researched Waldheim's wartime record in Yugoslav archives announced last May that it found no evidence there to implicate him in any atrocities.

A few days after the Waldheim ban was announced, a high-level Justice Department delegation tried to justify the move to Austrian officials. The Americans reportedly stressed that Waldheim was "in a position to know" about war crimes in the Balkans. But the delegation presented no evidence directly linking the Austrian President to atrocities or war crimes. The New York Times reported (May 17, 1987) that one senior Austrian official was so angered by the presentation that he nearly broke off the meeting.

Waldheim himself categorically dismissed charges of criminal behavior and announced in a televised address that he had a "clear conscience" about his wartime activities. In fact, he is so confident that the charges against him are baseless that he has filed a slander suit against World Jewish Congress head Edgar Bronfman, who has played a key role in the character-assassination campaign. Waldheim also approved a blue-ribbon commission of six internationally respected military historians, including an Israeli and an American, to carefully investigate the charges (see below).

If there is no real evidence that Waldheim was personally involved in atrocities or war crimes, why was he banned? One answer lies in a peculiar U.S. statute. The legal basis for the banning order is the October 1978 "Holtzman amendment" to the Immigration Act, named for former Representative Elizabeth Holtzman of Brooklyn who, together with former Representative Joshua Eilberg of Philadelphia, a convicted felon, was primarily responsible for pushing the law through Congress. This is also the key statute used by the Justice Department's Nazi-hunting Office of Special Investigations.

The statute specifies that anyone who "ordered, incited, assisted or otherwise participated in the persecution of any person because of race, religion, national origin or political opinion" under "the direction of, or in association with, the Nazi government of Germany" or of any government allied or associated with it is to be excluded from the United States.

It doesn't take a professional civil libertarian to realize that this law's vague language could cause mischief. Just what do "incitement," "assistance," "participation" and "persecution" mean in the above context?

In a letter to the Washington Post (July 28, 1986), Ms. Holtzman and former U.S. Supreme Court Justice Arthur J. Goldberg pointed out that, according to the statute, it is "immaterial" whether Waldheim actually participated in any war crimes or atrocities. Merely by serving in the German army during the war, Waldheim "at least 'assisted' Nazi persecution and under our law this is enough to require that he be excluded. It is not necessary to prove that he is guilty of what is commonly known as war crimes."

Under that interpretation, the Holtzman amendment is so vague that it could theoretically be used to bar every surviving honorably discharged veteran of Germany's armed forces in WWII, including West Germany's former Chancellor Helmut Schmidt, a Luftwaffe officer, and current West German President Richard von Weizsaecker. By barring Waldheim, the Reagan administration held the Austrian President to a standard it does not apply to the leaders of even hostile nations.

If the Holtzman amendment, which applies only to Nazis, was broadened to cover non-Nazis, scores of foreign leaders could easily be prevented from coming to the U.S. How many Communist and Third World officials have "incited, assisted or otherwise participated" in the persecution of people on the basis of their "political opinion"? How many Israeli leaders have "incited, assisted or otherwise participated" in the persecution of Palestinian Arabs on the basis of their "national origin" or "political opinion"?

Nor is the United States without sin. In early 1942, Americans of Japanese ancestry living on the West Coast were forcibly rounded up and deported to internment camps. President Franklin Roosevelt signed the executive order and a number of prominent Americans, including a majority of Supreme Court justices and liberal columnist Walter Lippmann, publicly supported the move. Thousands of Americans who "ordered, incited, assisted or otherwise participated in the persecution" of Japanese Americans during the war years because of their "race" or "national origin" are still alive. Imagine the indignant reaction if, let us say, the Soviet Union chose to bar such Americans from the USSR.

The people of Austria have generally stood by their democratically elected head of state, in spite of -- or perhaps because of -- such provocative statements as World Jewish Congress general secretary Israel Singer's warning last year: "It should be clear to the Austrian public that if Waldheim is elected, the next few years won't be easy for the Austrians."

The daily organ of Austria's People's Party, the Neue Volksblatt, commented:

Is there anyone who is really so primitive that he believes he can outlaw the democratically elected head of state, the representative of a nation, without at the same time also outlawing the people who elected this representative? Do people in the United States really believe that a president can be slapped in the face without also slapping the people?

In West Germany, the prestigious and sober daily Frankfurter Allgemeine Zeitung editorialized: "In order to pacify the World Jewish Congress and the East Coast press, which has steadily criticized the Reagan administration in recent months, a small country which cannot defend itself has been rudely smacked in the head." One of the FAZ's publishers, Johann Georg Reissmueller, accused the U.S. of hypocrisy for having received a number of foreign politicians over the years who had been involved in "bloody mass crimes." Reissmueller added, "No one has so far proved that President Waldheim did anything dishonorable, but the superpower America thinks it can deal with little, neutral Austria as it likes."

Here in America, politicians of both parties and most of the press have uncritically accepted the Reagan administration's decision to ban Waldheim. Only a few dissident voices have been heard. Denver Post Associate Editor Leonard Larsen noted (May 15, 1987) that Waldheim was many times accused by the Israelis and the U.S. Jewish lobby of being "pro-Arab" during his tenure as Secretary General of the United Nations. Larsen denounced the Holtzman amendment as "a legal disgrace" and went on to say,

The sorry and embarrassing point is that this law and its use against Waldheim can be seen across the world as another obvious response by the entire U.S. government to demands of the Jewish lobby.

President Waldheim was diplomatically isolated until his dramatic June 25 meeting at the Vatican with Pope John Paul II. "All of your activities in international life, as a diplomat and a foreign minister for your country," the Pope said to Waldheim, have been "dedicated to safeguarding peace among peoples." Since the Vatican reception, Waldheim has met officially with Soviet Prime Minister Nikolai Ryzhkov, made a state visit to Jordan as the guest of King Hussein, and has been invited to West Germany for a so-far unscheduled "neighborly meeting" with President von Weizsaecker.

Waldheim Is Banned -- Shamir Is Honored

Jewish leaders around the world promptly condemned the Vatican meeting, calling Waldheim an "unrepentant Nazi." Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir was particularly emphatic in his criticism -- a classic case of the pot calling the kettle black. Shamir has a well-documented past as a terrorist. As chief of the Jewish terrorist group known as the Lehi or Stern Gang, he was personally involved in organizing the November 1944 assassination of British Middle East envoy Lord Moyne,¹ and in the September 1948 murder of Swedish UN mediator Count Folke Bernadotte. But none of this kept official Washington from rolling out the red carpet for Shamir during his state visit last year.

American Catholic leaders have been particularly concerned over the often strident and emotional criticism of the Pope's Vatican meeting with Waldheim.² The Public Affairs Director of the Catholic League for Religious and Civil Rights, Kevin Long, sharply criticized "all the ranting and raving" about the Vatican meeting, and he charged that "the Waldheim affair is merely one more opportunity to smear Catholics with the charge of persecuting Jews."

Kurt Waldheim is the freely elected president of one of the world's most peaceful and civilized countries. As Secretary General of the UN from 1972 to 1982, he was widely praised for his efforts on behalf of world peace. The decision to bar him from the U.S. was based on an aberrant law that embodies a highly selective and one-sided kind of "justice." It is a legal double standard that has no place in American jurisprudence.

There was a time not too many years ago when the entire campaign against Waldheim would have been all but unthinkable. Times have changed, but the decision to bar the Austrian head of state from setting foot on these shores will be remembered by future Americans and by most foreign-

He is a minister of state, the representative of the London Government in Cairo for the whole of the Near East. Even more than the High Commissioner for Palestine, he is the incarnation of England's anti-Zionist policy. He is the one we must destroy. Kill the minister!" — Yitzhak Shamir, quoted in The Untold History of Israel by Jacques Derogy and Hesi Carmel (Grove Press, 1979)

ers as hypocritical and arrogant. It has further diminished America's tattered reputation as an ethical and fair-minded nation.

FRANK EDWARDS

Editor's Comment: It's amazing that Kurt Waldheim has remained president of his country as long as he has. The age-old Jewish tactic of removing their perceived enemies, a relentless accumulation of charges that pile up and pile up until even a Hercules would crumble under the strain, has been working at full force. The latest charges are that Lt. Waldheim's army unit was directly involved in atrocities in Yugoslavia, and he was so high up in the Wehrmacht hierarchy that he was one of only two German intelligence officers in the Balkans to receive a secret briefing on the foiled 1944 plot to kill Hitler.

In the midst of this Jewish backbiting, the head of the Austrian Social Democratic Party, Fred Sinowatz, and Hans Pusch, his chief aide, were accused of leaking state secrets to foreigners by the Austrian attorney general. On the conservative side, the general secretary of the Austrian Peoples Party, Michael Graff, resigned when it was learned he had told a French magazine, L'Express, that Waldheim is no problem for Austria, "so long as it's not proved he strangled six Jews with his own hands."

The last piece of news was widely reported in the Western press, but not the news that three separate investigations by the British ministries for defense and foreign affairs were unable to dig up any incriminating evidence whatsoever against Waldheim. Neither did a 500-page "white book" compiled by the Austrian foreign ministry, which was sent to all Austrian embassies abroad. Another investigation of Waldheim has been undertaken by an international commission, chaired by Swiss historian Hans-Rudolf Kurz. Its most prominent members are West German historian Manfred Messerschmidt, Israeli historian Yehuda Wallach, left-wing British academic Gerald Flemming and General James Collins, an American. Though somewhat critical, it absolved Waldheim of any complicity in war crimes.

In February, Der Spiegel, West Germany's imitation of Time magazine, published a telegram linking Waldheim to the deportation of some 4,000 Yugoslavian citizens in 1942. It turned out to be a vicious forgery.

The talkingest numbers of all

AFRICAN APOCALYPSE

IF EVER THERE WAS an instance where "Talking Numbers" should be given the freedom to talk and talk and talk, it is now in Black Africa, with the runaway rates of AIDS infection. Instead, readers of America's periodicals are immersed in mega-articles where, amidst unbridled speculation about AIDS and the African future, it is briefly noted that "X percent of the prostitutes in Nairobi tested positive for AIDS in 1985." A week or two later, the same publication will run another windy treatise with much the same weary speculation, but this time the reader will be teased with the tidbit that "X percent of all blood donors in Kinshasa, Zaire, tested positive for AIDS in 1986."

Scientists have strongly depended on numbers to illuminate their understanding of natural phenomena. Once the numbers are available, the understanding falls rapidly into place. Journalists are a different breed. They imagine their readers can grasp what is transpiring epidemiologically on the dusky continent by giving them a mixture of 99 parts hot air to one part "just the facts, ma'am."

Since Instauration would prefer to see these ratios reversed, we have pored over several dozen recent news reports on the African plague, extracted from some of them the occasional hard number, and tried to arrange them in a comprehensible fashion. One figure here, and two or three there, have gradually added up to the first truly meaningful picture of the spread of AIDS in Africa.

Not a single number has been dropped for being "too low" and therefore "undramatic" -- though undoubtedly the reporters on whom we've depended did choose selectively. Nonetheless, it is impossible to survey the following data without wondering if the "three major races" may not soon be reduced to two.

But first a few notes. Percentages refer to rates of infection with the AIDS virus. All of the cities listed are the capitals of their respective nations, except for Entebbe, Uganda (cited twice). Some of the reporters were more vague about the nature of the samples described than they might have been. On the other hand, most reporters gave their medical sources, some of which were impressive: the World Health Organization, the Red Cross, Harvard University, and so on. The numbers given in the right-hand margin refer to the bibliographic sources, which are listed at the end of this article. Finally, many of the medical sources also gave doubling times -- usually eight months -- for the growth of the infection rates.

Ponderable Quotes

The relationship of language to thought is an old and hotly debated issue. At one pole are those who assert that thought and words are coextensive At the opposite pole are those who argue that we think without words, and that words are simply the labels we attach to our thoughts. One piece of evidence offered in support of this view concerns the words for colors in various languages. Anthropological studies have shown that in many other cultures, people do not have the same boundaries for color categories that English-speaking people do; some have fewer basic color terms than we, and one people, the Dani of New Guinea, have only two color terms -- mili ("dark") and mola ("light").

Racial Camouflage

The Unassimilable just can't resist rubbing it in. A current TV ad has Mexicans on a visit to the U.S. praising a patent medicine cure for diarrhea. This is Montezuma's Revenge with a capital "R."

A Jewish cosmetic company ran a full-page ad in the New York Times magazine (Feb. 22, 1987) with the headline, "The Most Unforgettable Women." Four women were featured -- two from America, one from Czechoslovakia and one from Sweden. Incredibly, the Swede was a rather unattractive nonwhite.

A Jewish firm called Recycled Paper Products puts out a postcard which is obviously intended to demean Nordics. An Instaurator subscriber found it in the Auburn University bookstore. The artwork was the creation of one Rusty Mann, whose race can only be surmised.

But while they deride us, insult us and throw racial barbs at us, they still try to capitalize on us. Israel's travel folders feature Nordic-type women with the familiar touristy "come hither" look.

Michael Jackson submits to repeated plastic surgery to acquire a more "Majority" look. Oprah Winfrey and Whoopi Goldberg, who make negritude their profession, wear colored contact lenses, not because they have impaired vision, but because such lenses make their eyes appear blue or green.

A leading Majority ad agency has produced a TV spot showing a black male infatuated with a Negro female who "wears" green eyes. Black magazines are full of ads for DuraSoft Colors as the $200-$300 optical gadgets are called. The company conducted a poll of black women and found 43% were interested in hazel lenses, 24% in blue, 14% in green.

The Missing Photos of Julius Streicher May Be a Time Bomb

As with all of Hitler's "Old Fighters," Julius Streicher had the privilege of going straight to the boss whenever some problem threatened to overwhelm him. By 1939 he was faced with just such a problem. He had been brought before the highest party tribunal and charged with corruption. Reichsleiter Buch presided over the court which investigated charges that Streicher had enriched himself (and others) by somehow getting control of confiscated Jewish property.

Rudolf Hess, Hitler's Deputy Führer, and Mayor Willy Liebel of Nuremberg were the two persons chiefly responsible for having Streicher hauled before the bar. Hitler, blindly faithful to his old comrades, deplored what his deputy and the mayor were doing, and considered it nothing less than gross disloyalty. Hess and Liebel, for their part, felt that Streicher had betrayed the National Socialist revolution. With an entire nation acting on the principles of sacrifice and self-denial, they felt that Streicher was subverting the Volksgemeinschaft ideal by diverting assets that rightfully belonged to the German people.

After the court found Streicher guilty, Hitler protested and complained, pronounced the whole affair ridiculous, and said he would have Reichsleiter Buch's decision overturned. But in the end he took no action and let the decision stand. Secretly, he knew Hess was right.

Streicher was allowed to continue as head of his publishing ventures, but was stripped of his position as Gauleiter of Franconia. The court also penalized him in another way. He was prohibited from reentering the city of Nuremberg. He remained, in a sense, under house arrest.

The story goes, according to Albert Speer, that as the Americans were closing in on Nuremberg, Streicher sent an agent into the city and had Mayor Liebel murdered. If this is true, then Streicher could have been charged with an authentic capital crime instead of being executed for the specious ones invented by the Allies for their show trial. But no one was interested in Streicher's real offenses. The International Military Tribunal sentenced him to death because of what he thought and wrote, not because of anything he did or acquiesced to. None of the other "major war criminals" were convicted for disseminating their views.

Streicher was condemned by the victorious Allies because, as a vociferous anti-Semite who identified Jews as the source of Germany's misfortunes, he stooped to the crude racial stereotypes which aroused the lumpenproletariat, thereby pleasing Hitler, who had complained for years that German propaganda was too genteel and intellectual.

Der Führer observed how the venom of British propagandist Lord Vansittart, the atrocity-mongering of unprincipled journalists and the vile productions of Hollywood movie-makers had inflamed -- and united -- Britain and America against Germany. He wanted his publicists to be as effective.

It is perhaps a tribute to the importance of war propaganda that Julius Streicher was the only IMT defendant to be systematically tortured before he was hanged.

The Journal of Historical Review (Spring 1984) reported the vicious treatment accorded Streicher was not sanctioned by the IMT, but was a simple case of "low-level revenge and sadism." But there are too many facts that point to a larger pattern.

Before his death, Streicher wrote a seven-page handwritten complaint to an unnamed U.S. Army officer -- who held it for 37 years before having it auctioned off in October 1982 at the Charles Hamilton Autograph Gallery of New York City for $1,200. In it, Streicher describes his arrest in the village of Waidring, after which he was moved to Salzburg, where he was "put into handcuffs by a Jewish police-officer." If he had not identified the officer who took charge of him in Wiesbaden (May 27, 1945) as also being Jewish, and as having "acted correctly," it would be tempting to dismiss Streicher's statement as fantasy.

It was no fantasy, however, that when the prisoner arrived in Wiesbaden, he required medical attention. Instead he was moved to a jail cell in another town, where he claims to have had some bad experiences:

In Freising I was put in a cell, where there was no possibility of sitting or lying down. The window was removed and the cell was cold. During my three days stay in there (23 May afternoon to 26 May afternoon) I was subjected to the following treatment:

1) After being stripped of my clothes, two Negroes tore my shirt into two pieces. Dressed only in my underpants, and barefoot, I spent three days in the cold room. During the night and during a few hours in daytime, I was handed an old military coat. It was taken away immediately, whenever I tried to resist the torturers.

2) Two or three times daily I had to stand against a wall, with my handcuffed hands held above the head, whereupon a Negro or the police officer kept hitting me on my genitalia, with a leather whip for up to a minute. Whenever I made a resisting move with my handcuffed hands, I received a blow with the foot in my testicles. My testicles and genitalia were badly swollen.

3) Two or three times daily I had to open my mouth, whereupon the white police officer or the Negroes spat into it. If I kept my mouth closed, it was forcefully opened with a wooden stick.

8) I was repeatedly photographed by people of the press, while wearing underpants and my genitalia were visible. The photographers were Jews.

On trial for his life before the IMT, when Streicher told the court he was tortured, no one wanted to listen. His words were stricken from the official record.

Standing on the gallows, Streicher observed, "This is Purim fest 1946!" British journalist Douglas Reed also thought that the October 16 date was significant. In his book, The Controversy of Zion (1978), Reed says, "After the Second World War the Nazi leaders were hanged on the Jewish Day of Judgement in 1946, so that their execution was presented to Jewry in the shape of Mordechai's vengeance on Haman and his sons."

Now it could be a case of plain bad luck that Streicher was handcuffed by a Jew and then tortured. That other Jews photographed him during his ordeal might also be described as a coincidence. But when an international tribunal removes all mention of this from its records, and then sentences the torture victim to be hanged on the Jewish Day of Judgment, is that also a coincidence?

No one blinked an eye when Streicher dropped through the trap door of the gallows and into history. That's why the stage managers of the Nuremberg trials never bothered to cover their tracks. But there may be some delayed explosives in the "unpublishable photographs" that Streicher mentioned. Should some investigative reporter ever discover that these pictures have circulated privately among prominent persons in the upper reaches of the world Zionist movement, then the gullible public may finally have reason to believe that something more than the pursuit of justice was on the docket at the Nuremberg War Crimes Trials.

Shocking Difference

Anyone these days who talks about racial differences is by definition a racist and by further definition a white racist. If a black talks about racial differences, pro or con, he is simply a black talking about racial differences, pro or con. Whatever position he takes he is always right, or at least uncriticizable.

Instauration would like to present a case for racial differences that stems from behavior, and has nothing to do with buoyancy or thigh bones.

- Shelly Carter "sold" her six-year-old illegitimate daughter for a few doses of crack. The selling consisted of holding the little girl firmly as two black males raped her. Ms. Carter pleaded guilty on Dec. 1 and was sentenced to jail for a maximum of 12 years. Her incredible act of child abuse was repeated three other times in the fall of 1986.

- Then there was that other black mother, Darwin Britt, who locked her nine-year-old daughter in the attic of a condemned house in Gary (IN) for five days. The girl was discovered only by chance when a white worker who was boarding up the house heard her pitiful voice crying for help. Since the mother had departed several days earlier, since it was freezing weather outside, since there was no heat in the house, the girl was half-frozen and had to have both of her legs amputated at mid-calf.

Is it correct to say that this peculiar attitude toward motherhood is common to all races or could it be described as a valid racial difference?

Forbidden Word

Government-issue bumper stickers? That's what you can have in states that allow you to order "personalized" license plates. Anything goes but "fighting" or obscene words.

No bureaucrat objected when Mary E. Carr of Black Jack (MO) requested that ARYAN-1 be imprinted on the plate for her gray-blue Ford Tempo. But when she started to drive around her one-horse town, someone tipped off the ADL, which immediately defined "Aryan" as an incitement to a new Holocaust. "I see it as terribly offensive because it promulgates Nazi racism and anti-Semitism," roared Stanley J. Anderman, the ADL's regional director. "It is my belief that such an obscene license plate -- which proudly advertises by its very name hatred, bigotry and anti-American revolution -- should not be in circulation."

Since government and state agencies have learned to cave in instanter to Jewish complaints, the Missouri Board of Revenue ordered Mrs. Carr to return the license plate. A woman with a spine, she refused. Denying it had any evil connotation, she said, "It's just a good Indo-Iranian word."

The ADL wouldn't let it go at that. Neither would the media. Mrs. Carr was promptly described as a "leader of the Ku Klux Klan" and a white supremacist. "Aryan" was said to be a favorite word of Adolf Hitler. Since the license plate is good until July, it's possible that Mrs. Carr, by means of a constant barrage of appeals, will be able to keep it until then. But it certainly won't be renewed.

The currently accepted meaning of Aryan is somewhat blurry. In the Third Reich it more or less stood for a white who was not Jewish and whose skin was not too dark. Historically it describes the fair-skinned people who invaded India in the second millennium B.C. Linguistically it means someone who speaks an Indo-European language or is a descendant of an Indo-European speaker. In right-wing circles in America, it generally stands for a non-Jewish white. Since Semites are not Indo-Europeans, Arabs and Jews are excluded from the Aryan designation.

Not only because of Hitler, but more recently because of the Aryan Nations group in Idaho and various Aryan brotherhoods in prison, formed to protect whites against Negro violence and rapes, Aryan, once a proud term for a proud people (Arya means noble in Sanskrit), has degenerated into something no better than a swear word.

Chipping Away

In the last several months in these less and less united United States, no noticeable let-up was detected in the ongoing war against Western culture. Steve Allen and wife Jayne Meadows finished taping, "Shakin' Loose with Mother Goose." And how they shook her! Remember Mary, the little girl with the lamb? She has now been transformed into a pickaninny (if Governor Mecham's critics will forgive the word). Remember Peter, Peter, Pumpkin-eater, who had a wife and couldn't keep her? Well, Peter is no longer a misogynist. He "learned to read and spell and then he loved her very well." Remember the Old Woman Who Lived in a Shoe, the one who had so much trouble with her brood that she "beat them all soundly and put them to bed"? She's had a change of heart. She "kisses her kids sweetly and puts them to bed."

David Zaslav is the producer of this sorry nursery rhyme rewrite. He turned down "Rock-a-Bye Baby" because of its "violent image." He didn't like to hear that little boys are made of "frogs and snails and puppy dog tails" or that little girls are made of "sugar and spice and all that's nice." These old favorites smelled of rank sexism.

Peter Rabbit is also being gutted. The latest edition of the classic children's tale by Beatrix Potter omits the death of Peter's father and various violent encounters with other animals. The Inner London Education Authority, a part of Britain's loony left, was the first to demand the book be censored. Peter, it was charged, is a "middle-class" rabbit.

Muffler Department

Aside from the squelching of Jimmy the Greek, the following incidents of First Amendment trashing appeared in the news in recent months:

- William C. Verity Jr., who became secretary of commerce last October, used the word "japs" in his remarks about Japanese methods of inventory control. Hit hard by the Japanese American Citizens League, Verity kowtowed very low, saying, "It was just a slip and I very much regret it."

- Although Tim LaHaye, an evangelical preacher, had been a hard-working supporter and longtime friend of Jack Kemp, he was dumped as national co-chairman of Kemp's presidential campaign when it was revealed that years ago he had written that Roman Catholicism was a "false religion" and that some Jews "have often yielded to a secularistic, even atheistic spirit." At first Kemp decided to stand by LaHaye -- an act of friendship, trust and courage most unusual for a contemporary American politician. But he didn't stand by him for long.

- When Dwight D. Eisenhower became Supreme Allied Commander in 1943, he wrote wife Mamie he "would miss the darkies that live in my house." Moving from Algiers to London to organize the invasion of the European continent, Ike was apparently referring to the Negro soldiers who had been assigned to him as servants. These comments were carefully expunged from the letter in John Eisenhower's book, Letters to Mamie. The expurgation was revealed when Ike's epistle was put up for auction in New York on December 20.

- The memoirs of T.H. Bell, secretary of education during President Reagan's first term, recorded racial slurs supposedly emanating from various White House staffers. Martin Luther King Jr. was called "Martin Lucifer Coon" and a law guaranteeing equal educational opportunity was dubbed the "lesbian's bill of rights." This "sick humor and racial clichés," in Bell's words, were uttered by "mid-level, right-wing staffers at the White House and at OMB [the Office of Management and Budget]." Reagan's men quickly denied this gratuitous talemongering by a man who, having returned to the groves of academe (professor of educational administration at the University of Utah), apparently wants to get back in the good graces of the liberal establishment that rides herd on American education.

- Talk show host Mike Levine suggested a couple of months ago on Pittsburgh's KDKA radio that shipping flash-frozen cats to the hungry might be a way of solving the world's endemic famine problem. When Bill and Patti Burns, the father and daughter team that hosts a KDKA-TV talk show repeated the idea, the Pittsburgh chapter of the NAACP demanded that the Burnses -- but not Levine -- be fired.

- "It's Martin Luther King Day. Let's break out the watermelon and fried chicken!" That's how disc jockey Frank Turck of WBEC-FM, Pittsfield (MA), greeted the only federal holiday named for an American. Next day he was given a permanent holiday of his own.

- John Roland, the anchorman of WNYW-TV, Zoo City, got a little too wound up while interviewing Joyce Brown, a local "homeless" heroine who was forced into a hospital for 83 days of treatment after turning her street turf into an open-air toilet. When a couple of Jewish lawyers kept moaning about how her civil rights had been violated, she was released by court order. For bringing up Ms. Brown's habit of relieving herself in public and for emotionally demystifying some of her other peculiarities and quirks, Roland, who had been with the station for 19 years, was suspended without pay for a week by owner Rupert Murdoch.

Flag Flap

Flags are symbols of power. Striking the flag is generally viewed as the act of a conquered, powerless or abject people. Today, in the South, a concerted campaign is underway to force the four states that still have the Stars and Bars in their flags to get rid of them. The Confederate flag, says Earl Shinholster, regional director of the NAACP in Savannah (GA), is an "odious symbol of a bygone era." Shinholster has collected 16,000 signatures from people who supposedly agree with him and has sent stern letters to the governors of the four recreant states. Georgia Governor Joe Frank Harris has been urged to design a new state flag so "Georgia can move into the 21st century with a symbol that . . . is not divisive."

In Alabama, State Representative Thomas Reed, a black publicity hound, vowed that on Feb. 2, he would climb to the top of the capitol dome in Montgomery "like a cat" at "high noon" and pull down the flag unless the legislature ordered it removed before that date.

Alabama Governor Guy Hunt, on his weekly talk show, warned Reed to keep his feet on terra firma. One caller guessed that Reed would never make it because the flagpole had no branches. Another caller recommended that the capitol dome be greased. On D-day, Reed was arrested as he was climbing over the fence surrounding the capitol.

The New Trinity

Jerry Harrison owns a gas station in Pensacola (FL), one of the thousands of Exxon pumperies throughout the land. What makes Jerry's station special is that he gives a 10% discount on labor to "those who [sic] Jesus loves." At first he affixed a notice to his pumps that was more specific, "For Christians only, 10% discount on labor." But then the ADL got on his tail and forced Exxon to tone him down. However, he is now resisting any further compromises. He claims he is not discriminating because "Jesus loves everyone."

I run my station, live within the law and have paid my debt to society like anybody else. I don't need Exxon breathing down my neck. Jesus Christ represents me, and he's bigger than Exxon.

It is Instauration's opinion that in the year of our Lord 1988, Exxon is pretty big. So is Jesus Christ. But the ADL, unfortunately, is the biggest of the three.

Christian Wimpery

Jesus is still pretty big (see above), but he is not as big as he used to be -- as demonstrated by a recent happening in a fifth-grade classroom in Accomac (VA). One day not so long ago, representatives of Gideons International, the Bible distributing group, walked in, led the class in prayer and gave the pupils copies of the New Testament. A local rabbi, Israel Silver, was terribly offended, as was the Virginia branch of the American Civil Liberties Union. The upshot? The Gideons were banned from the Accomac school.

Jesus is also losing some of his steam in Alaska, where writer Dan Bloom published just in time for last Christmas a Santa Claus yarn for Jewish kids. It was an outright literary smack in the face to Christians, since it reduced Jesus down to size, naming him Joshua. "Some people believed that Joshua was the son of God but we all know this isn't true, because God has no sons or daughters."

Not a peep out of Christians. But strong, exceedingly strong, criticism came from Jewish fundamentalists, who attacked Bloom for claiming Jesus was Jewish. Many Orthodox Jews believe, still without a peep from Christians, that Jesus was the offspring of a Roman centurion and a prostitute. Since Jesus came from "Galilee of the Gentiles" (Matthew 4:15), Jews may have a point. It's quite possible he was not a member of the Chosen. Or, if he was, he may have been a very recent member. Historian Arnold Toynbee advanced the proposition that the Galileans were forcibly converted to Judaism only a generation or two before the Nativity.

Spurious Demotion

In what can only be considered a theological public relations stunt, Rabbi Leon Klenicki has opined for the benefit of the Religious News Service that Jews are not the Chosen people. He is willing to settle for the indefinite article -- a Chosen people. Since "a" can mean one of several, what other population group does the rabbi have in mind for Chosen status? Apparently, "all people who live a religious life, who have chosen God, are in turn God's people."

Rabbi Klenicki hardly speaks for all Jews. In point of fact, he is only speaking for the ADL's Interfaith Affairs Department, of which he is the director. To Orthodox Jews and the Jewish man in the street, his words are likely to be blasphemous. Most Jews would rather give up their stock portfolios than their Chosenness.

No longer Chosen, what would a Jew do these days if he agreed with Rabbi Klenicki? This is a purely rhetorical question, because the venerable rabbi was, of course, not talking to Jews but to the press. Totally unfazed, Joe Blowstein will continue to think and operate like his people have thought and operated since the very first day a jingoistic Jew had the hubris to dream up the "Master Race" idea.

Racist Fantasy

A company called Dynamic Design Industries of Anaheim (CA) has taken the game of Monopoly and transformed it into something called Blacks & Whites. A more accurate name should be Blacks Trample Whites. Every shake of the dice is slanted against what the game's promoters call "the land-hungry majority type."

Players try against all odds to buy into white suburbs, to overturn the status quo, to redistribute the wealth. While allowing whites to wallow in self-hate, the game gets blacks in the mood to grab by force what they cannot gain by merit.

Blacks & Whites is not only for sale to the public, but has been found in various public libraries. It's minority racism at its most banal. If you can't beat whites in the game of life, then beat them in a game that imitates what present-day blacks perceive to be life -- namely a giant 24-hour-a-day conspiracy to keep them down. It's a strange conspiracy, considering that a sizable cut of the taxes of every white American is being spent for no other purpose than to push blacks up.

Millions for French Jews

Senator Daniel Inouye's legislative coup that gave $8 million to build schools in France for Sephardic Jews from North Africa was so outrageous that even the Jewish-oriented media opposed it both editorially and reportorially. It was one way that Inouye had of repaying a $1,000 campaign contribution from a New York real estate magnate, Zev Wolfson, who is an official of the American-Jewish group supporting the French-Jewish project.

As Instauration noted previously, Inouye has made a political career of massaging Jews. His Senate offices have a lot of Jewish regalia on display; he was once an Israel bond salesman; he did a masterly job of keeping the Israeli connection out of the Irangate hearings in his capacity as chairman of the Senate Investigating Committee.

Inouye's pork-barrel gift to a people who won't eat pork is simply a case of one unassimilable minority member greasing the palm of another. It is relatively easy for a Japanese-American senator to raid the treasury of a country to which he has no special attachment or feeling. To him it is not so much American money as "other people's" money. Outsiders of one kind often harbor a secret affection for other outsiders. Biting the hand that feeds them is a way of establishing their outsider status, while winning the support of other hand-biters.

The Office of Management and Budget was strongly opposed to the deal, as was the State Department, which claimed the French Jews for whom the buildings would be built were not even classified as refugees by any agency of the U.S. or any other country. That Inouye's ploy was also a flagrant violation of church and state separation (the Jewish schools will put a heavy accent on religious teaching) never even came up. Such things seldom do when there is a Jewish connection.

Jewish PACs, incidentally (or not so incidentally) gave $49,825 to Inouye for his successful 1986 reelection campaign.

Howard Beach Fallout

The Howard Beach trial, which ended in the sacrificial offering of three young white teenagers on the altar of black racism, has left a bad taste in almost every New Yorker's mouth. The verdicts of the jury were considered too lenient by most blacks -- and too severe by most whites. Jon Lester, one of the defendants, got 10 to 30 years.

Two others got 6-18 and 5-15. The fourth teenager was acquitted. The "racial strike" by blacks, which brought much of the Manhattan-Brooklyn commuting traffic to a jarring halt for several hours, was a not so subtle message to the jury to produce a guilty verdict. Ironically, one of the leaders of the massive subway shutdown was Rev. Al Sharpton, who some days later was revealed to be an FBI informer.

Leaping headlong into the post-trial controversy was Rev. Lawrence Lucas, a black priest, who accused Jews of "killing us in the classroom" and Catholics of "killing us in our homes, falsely arresting us . . . murdering us in the streets." Although the New York City Board of Education has only one Jew, Father Lucas charged, "It looked like the Knesset in Israel." Jews, however, do call the tune in the powerful teachers' unions. As for Lucas's second charge, it was based on the preponderance of Irish Catholics in the police department.

The subway tie-up, accomplished by accusations that the masters of Zoo City were incapable of protecting blacks, roused Mayor Koch to utter a long-concealed truth. "You know, there are more whites assaulted in this town by blacks than the other way around."

It took the racially mixed jury (one black, six whites, two Hispanics, one Filipino, one Chinese, one Indian from Guyana) twelve days to reach its verdict, during which time members participated in, as one alternate juror described it, "a sort of impromptu, interfaith lighting of a Hanukkah candle."

After the trial, jury foreman Nina Krauss announced she would sell her story to the highest bidder. Her agent-boyfriend, Mark Friedman, a TV news producer, claimed one paper had already offered his Jewish innamorate $10,000. The defense attorneys alleged that Friedman told Krauss that a "light verdict" would result in her being confronted with "a lot of anger from the black community." Judge Thomas Demakos denied all motions for a mistrial.

Black Teflon

Liberal-minority coalitioners have been grinding their teeth over Ronald Reagan for the last seven years. Almost all the zillions of accusations they have piled on him, although some have been well founded, simply won't stick. They peel off like rime ice from the wings of a jet.

The lib-mins, however, stoically refuse to be discombobulated by the emergence of a super-Teflon man, a presidential candidate so thoroughly non-adhesive that he can commit an exact replica of an act that ruined one of his foremost rivals, yet remain serenely in the race and watch his ratings actually climb.

The gentleman in question is Jesse Jackson, who can utter words that would be wormwood in the mouths of Dukakis, Hart, Babbitt, Gephardt, Simon and Gore, but which turn to NutraSweet on his tongue. It's a magical semantic transmutation whose secret is known only to Jesse -- and, of course, Instaurationists.

When Biden's plagiarism of the speeches of British Labour Party honcho Neil Kinnock was bruited about, the Delaware senator had to bow out of the presidential race before he was laughed out. But Jesse, a practitioner of the same verbal thievery, when asked to turn in an essay for a freshman English course at the University of Illinois, simply tore out an article from Time magazine, inked in a couple of minor changes and told Glenna Cilento, a part-time student and university secretary, to re-type it.

His copycatting discovered, Jesse quit Illinois and went to North Carolina A&T. Illinois won't release Jesse's records, though it was known that toward the end of his second and last term, Jackson's grade point average had fallen below a C, which automatically put him on probation.

Aside from posing as Jimmy the Greek's father confessor (see following story), Jesse had another news-grabbing trick up his sleeve late last year. He claimed that he had received 314 death threats during the 1984 campaign and that 14 people had been arrested for plotting to kill him. Funny, none of this made the news at the time. Citing those numbers, whether true or simply more Jesseana, he was the first candidate to get Secret Service protection.

Jimmy the Loose-Lipped

Ancient Greeks have often been deemed the most intelligent and most handsome people who ever walked the earth. Greek Americans seem to have lost many of those qualities, aesthetic and otherwise, but in their place they -- or at least a few prominent members of their ethnic group -- have substituted a penchant for anthropology, Negro anthropology, that is.

Al Campanis lost his cushy job as vice-president of the Los Angeles Dodgers for sounding off about the lack of Negro buoyancy and the dearth of Negro "necessities" for management jobs. More recently Emertios Synodinos, born in Steubenville (OH) and now known as Jimmy (the Greek) Snyder, a $500,000-a-year CBS sports "analyst," was sacked for discussing the physiology of Negro thigh bones and Mandingo-type breeding programs back in slavery days. Both Campanis and Jimmy had a right to air their opinions -- after all, they had been watching black athletes very closely for years -- but, as courts have ruled in various criminal actions brought against upholders of racial differences in Britain and Canada, truth in these matters is no defense. Anyone who talks about raw anthropometric data in public is likely to find himself in dire jeopardy, in the direst if he happens to be white.

Blacks, of course, can say whatever they like about racial differences, even a flat-out statement like that of Jesse Jackson, who insisted that blacks were superior athletes by birth. All is forgiven when Negro racism raises its black head, the forgiveness even extending to a black, openly racist presidential candidate. Greek Americans can lose their jobs and be pilloried for a few innocent remarks, but a professional black racist, after saying the same thing, can become a highly touted and highly influential Democratic Party power broker.

White political cravenness has reached such a point that Jimmy the Greek ran to Jesse Jackson in the hope of being absolved of his crimes. Bill Cosby actually forgave the cringing, groveling transgressor, while the people at CBS trembled in their boots and dared not even consider the possibility of a pardon for their longtime employee, who is 70, has a blocked artery and has already lost two sons to cystic fibrosis.

By the way, we've been hearing a great deal about Jimmy the Greek lately, but somehow we never hear about Freddy the Jew, Bobby the Negro or Juan the Hispanic.

One Picture Is Worth

Every once in a blue moon Israel's 40-year-old rape of Palestine breaks out of the media's file-and-forget basket and gives the kept-in-the-dark American public a glimpse or two of what is really going on in the Middle East. The "impact press," even while the TV pictures were burning into viewers' eyeballs, could continue to cover up, extenuate, temporize and rationalize. But when it comes to pictures, they speak for themselves and it's a waste of time for the anchorman or reporter to pretend the club descending on the Palestinian's head is not a club.

There are no pictures of Holocaust gas chambers in operation. To the despair of media-manipulating Zionists, miles of film exist of Palestinians being beaten, shot, humiliated, starved and jailed. The only other lifting of the Israeli propaganda curtain came in the invasion of Lebanon, when the TV audience was treated to the daily spectacle of Jewish air attacks on Beirut, topped off with phosphorous bombs on hospitals and the grisly sight of the Israel-supervised Sabra and Shatila massacres.

The British press has more or less kept in step with the television coverage, not parroting the Israeli propaganda as so much of the U.S. press has done. The headline in the London Times (Jan. 5, 1988) read: Mellor Starts a Stir Over Gaza "Shame." Israel Condemned for Affront to Civilization.

Mellor is David Mellor, minister of state at the Foreign Office, who on a visit to the violence-torn Gaza Strip blew his stack at the Jewish military's treatment of the Palestinians. The above headline in the Times, a Rupert Murdoch paper, would never have appeared in the New York Post, the pro-Zionist hate sheet also owned by Murdoch.

Mellor, however, was not home free. After his statement had been published, Britain's Jewish Board of Deputies marched over to the Foreign Office, condemned his "criticism of Israel and the manner in which it was made" and grilled him for an hour and a half. Now formally inscribed in the Zionist rogues' gallery, Mellor has probably put an end to his career, much as the same courage and forthrightness put an end to the careers of Americans like ex-Congressmen Paul Findley and Paul McCloskey and former Senator J. W. Fulbright.

Sneak Attack

Senator Edward Kennedy, protected and pampered by the press like no other 20th-century American politician -- his brothers and FDR excepted -- wounded the goose that laid his golden media eggs in December when he sneaked a below-the-belt punch against Rupert Murdoch into Congress's continuing resolution to keep the government from going broke.

Though long considered the Senate's leading liberal, Kennedy's "midnight" amendment forces Murdoch to give up either WFXT-TV, his station in Boston, or the Boston Herald, the only daily with the will and the guts to go after Fat Face in his own bailiwick. In New York, Murdoch can keep either WNYW-TV or the New York Post, but not both. Since it is now forbidden for a newspaper and a TV station in the same city to have the same owner, Kennedy has the FCC on his side, although many of the media barons have waivers that allow them to bypass this regulation. No advantage will accrue to the Majority from such a dispute, but it is amusing to watch two of America's biggest pseudos have a go at each other.

Murdoch, the Aussie press lord who is now a U.S. citizen, has been playing a two-faced game so long, it's a wonder he still gets away with it. In England he sees to it that a topless model appears in every issue of his tabloids and scandal sheets. The exception is the London Times, which he bought to salve his conscience and to prove that once in a while, if so inclined, he can put out a civilized publication.

During the recent Palestinian uprisings, the Times came out strongly against the Israelis, in the very same week the New York Post, Murdoch's Zoo City outlet, seethed with more Jewish racism than ever. A Zionist in New York, an occasional anti-Zionist in London, a Kennedy enemy in Boston, a liberal in Australia, Murdoch has been an accomplished media juggler, keeping various political balls in the air during various political windstorms.

But the juggling can't go on forever. He's bound to make enemies, powerful enemies -- like Kennedy -- who will sooner or later bring him down. The lib-min crowd has brought down much more powerful press lords in the past -- William Randolph Hearst, to name one -- and the crowd is much stronger today. It probably won't be long until it does a similar job on Murdoch, most of whose papers are yellow journalism at its yellowest.

Jewish Nomenclature II

Instauration (Nov. 1987) had a piece about the naming of Jews in Austria in the days of the Hapsburgs. As a follow-up, we quote excerpts from a book, Heart of Europe, by Norman Davies, that explains how Jews got their names in Poland. Davies is the history professor who is suing Stanford University for not granting him tenure because his writings offended the sensibilities of Jewish faculty members.

From 1795 to 1807, after the Third Partition of Poland, Warsaw was a part of Prussia. Presiding over the Prussian Registry at that time was E.T.A. Hoffmann, the German writer of those fanciful tales which ended up in the overrated operetta by the French-Jewish composer, Jacques Offenbach (geboren Wiener). Hoffmann's task was to give Polish Jews surnames, which up to then they had largely eschewed. The names often depended either on Hoffmann's mood or on events and happenings of the day. When Frau Hoffmann, a Polish Catholic, served him fish, Jewish applicants emerged with names that had to do with fish.

[H]aving visited the district of Warsaw where cage-birds are sold, he came back to the office and created a mass of Vogels. Once, when Hoffmann had been playing the organ in church, he issued a string of surnames with a religious flavour, such as Helfgot, Himmelblau, Kadzid Lo (Incense), Paniebozedopomoz (Help-Us-Good-Lord), Bozakrowka (Ladybird, or literally "God's Cow"), and so on.

Or again, one night Mr. Hoffmann went drinking with a Prussian Colonel. In the morning he ordered cold water to be poured over his head, arrived in the office in a fine humour, and started issuing military surnames such as Festung, Fojer, Pistolet, Szyspulver, Trommel, Trompeter, Harmata. That's as far as he got because the rest of his clients fled.

Notes from the Sceptred Isle - John Nobull

The double morality of modern liberalism stamps it unmistakably as an ideological disease, the intended effects of which are all calculated to weaken and destroy people of European origin.

Take the liberal attitude towards crime. Environmentalist assumptions were already evident during the Enlightenment, when Jeremy Bentham assumed that criminal tendencies could be cured by means of solitary confinement in a "Panopticon" (a prison in which the inmates could be observed at all times). Solitary confinement of those without sufficient mental resources merely demoralises, and the whole concept of prison as a sort of reformatory was correctly condemned by Bernard Shaw in his review of the Webbs' study of prison conditions in 1921-22. Unlike the Webbs, he recognised the existence of incorrigible recidivists and toyed with the idea of putting them down humanely. The Webbs, on the other hand, while theoretically against capital punishment, regarded the "reformatory" Soviet labour camps with complacency. It is perhaps significant that Sidney Webb was a froglike Jew, while his wife, Beatrice, was an intense crusading feminist.

Nowadays liberals are concerned above all to hold the ring while the Majority are victimised by criminals and, paradoxically, punished by the law if they dare to resist. "Society" (i.e. white society) is the assumed criminal, and the real criminal is treated as a mere symptom of the disease. Minority criminals are considered to be special objects of compassion on the ludicrous principle that, since all people are inherently equal, the existence of a larger proportion of minority criminals relative to population (and indeed overall) must indicate discrimination on the part of the police and society in general. In practice this means that the police are forced to ignore much minority crime for fear of creating an "imbalance" in the number of arrests. Meanwhile, the media constantly remind us that blacks are much more likely to be victims of crimes than whites, without consideration of the fact that, since blacks are much more likely to commit crimes, other people avoid their company. Blacks therefore tend to live in ghettos and prey upon each other even more than on the general population. This fact is so glaringly obvious to the meanest intelligence that dissemination by the media of such partial "information" can only be explained as intended to mock and demoralise law-abiding whites in the absence of any publicised attempt to interpret the evidence in accordance with the facts.

The double moral standard applied to crime also makes a mockery of the common claim of Western whites to live in a free country. What "freedom" is there in a society where a single false move (or even just staying at home) can lead to robbery, rape or murder? New Yorkers are not free in any meaningful sense, and the inhabitants of other minority-plagued cities are rapidly losing their freedom. How free is a poor old pensioner in a British city today, afraid to walk outside because of the ugly muggers? Only the tough survivalist, relying on his own resources, is able to retain some of his freedom, while every possible effort is being made to criminalise his activities. Under such considerations, our police forces, whatever the goodwill of individual officers, are objectively becoming the means whereby the liberal establishment prevents whites from dealing effectively with crime.

Take the liberal double standard as applied to immigration. On the one hand, every possible effort is made to legalise the position of millions of illegal immigrants, whether in Europe or North America. On the other hand, bona fide tourists with perfectly good homes of their own are subjected to harassment by passport officers on suspicion of being illegals. To some extent a middle-class double standard is operating here. The bourgeoisie (I use this word in its exact sense to refer to the money-minded middle class) see some benefits in the influx of cheap labour, but are quick to react when professional livelihoods are threatened. In other words, they are quite happy to allow a decisive deterioration in conditions of life for the white working class, provided they can get some cheap Filipino servants. But since the children of the new arrivals will be encouraged to regard service as degrading, the problem of a feckless, welfarised proletariat will merely grow -- not to speak of the resentment of white workers.

The most obvious application of the liberal double standard is to the field of race relations. Whites are no longer expected to behave as though they were colour-blind. Instead they are expected actively to favour the minorities at their own expense. A whole legal apparatus exists, the object of which is to punish whites if they do not conform. On the one hand, race is supposed to be a figment of the imagination (because the characteristics of subspecies overlap to some extent). On the other, whites are supposed to recognise differences of race immediately so as to favour those who differ from them. The absurdity of this is evident to the meanest intelligence, but the absence of any public criticism induces the average Majority member -- locked away in his pathetic claim to individuality -- at best to keep his opinions to himself, at worst to doubt his own sanity.

There is a great deal more to be said about the double morality of liberalism (especially where the key position of the Jews is concerned), but I think I have said enough to make my point. To those who feel that the phenomena I describe are scarcely news to readers of Instauration, I can only reply that it is occasionally good to state the obvious, if only because -- as Chesterton used to say -- some things are too big to be seen by most people for what they are.

* * *

As the father of a girl who has decided to devote her life to the chimpanzees of West Africa, I am often asked, "How would you feel about your daughter marrying a chimpanzee?" Well, of course that isn't an easy question to answer. I must guard against prejudice in a very real sense, for I know relatively little about chimpanzees -- apart, of course, from the fact that it is considered demeaning to refer to them as "chimps."

I suppose the only possible answer, in the last analysis, is that if the chimpanzee had a nice nature, at least in the opinion of my daughter, there could be no possible objection to the match. On the other hand, cultural problems might arise. English girls married to Moslems have sometimes found the autocratic rule of their husband's mother rather hard to take; Australian girls with New Guinean husbands have sometimes found the habits (particularly as regards cuisine) of their new in-laws a wee bit strange. However, that objection would hardly arise with respect to chimpanzees. I understand, for example, that they are very fond of bananas. So are other West Africans, not to speak of Central Americans. In fact, I am rather partial to the odd banana myself (and who would dare to make fun of the Reverend Banana, former President of Zimbabwe?). Again, like many northern Australians, chimpanzees are crazy about living grubs picked out from under rotting bark. That might be described as an acquired taste, but who are we to take exception? I, for example, like smelly cheeses.

I don't want to sound snobbish, but chimpanzees do strike me as superior to the common herd in a number of ways. To begin with, they don't mug people. Nor would I regard them as in any way inferior from the aesthetic point of view to some of the otherwise wonderful people we have welcomed into the New Britain since the war. Then there is their undoubted acrobatic dexterity. I wouldn't like to go so far as to imply that this was built in, because any such suggestion would carry a whiff of racism. Let us just say that the circumstances of their fascinating culture have predisposed them to a greater degree of physical fitness than the average city dweller.

A big plus is their delightful spontaneity -- perhaps their most marked characteristic. I remember once seeing a film about a chimpanzee tea party (no, not the one in which Ronald Reagan acted opposite Bonzo). I was struck at the way all the guests just did what comes naturally, without any of that scary deliberation which characterises WASPs. Maybe chimpanzees don't do quite so well at mathematics, maybe they don't always finish their sentences, but are we seriously going to judge other primates by such arbitrary (and therefore racist) standards?

It is true that in the U.S. and Europe chimpanzees have a high incidence of AIDS, but that is because misguided scientists are deliberately infecting them so as to get a lot of buggers and junkies off the hook. In West Africa, chimpanzees keep to themselves, and therefore have the lowest incidence of AIDS of any primate group in the world.

No, the more I think about it, the fewer objections I can find to her marrying the chimp of her choice. In fact, I'm rather looking forward to splitting a coconut with the newlyweds at the wedding reception.

WJR Reader Survey
2233 Wisconsin Avenue, N.W., Suite 442
Washington, D.C. 20007

Anyone who reads this questionnaire will quickly understand why the Instaurationist who completed it declined to sign his name before returning it to the Washington Journalism Review. Any bets as to whether the information was tabulated in the final results?

Having been saturated with Holocaust shows for the past several decades, we are now in for a spate of putdowns of down-home neo-Nazis, all carrying the warning label, "Yes, folks, Holocausts can happen here."

The first such show was Into the Homeland, an HBO doctored drama "loosely" based on the doings of the Aryan Nations in Idaho. A boozy ex-cop who has left his wife (or vice-versa) and operates a surfboard shop, is roused out of his Budweiser anomie when his nubile daughter disappears into the thin northwestern air. He follows some tenuous leads to the neo-Nazi compound, her last known address, where to learn more about her whereabouts he signs up and becomes a goose-stepping, sieg-heiling American Hitlerite on the outside, while remaining a true-blue liberal on the inside.

To get the viewers into the proper mindset for the film's message, a "good Jew" is beaten up at the beginning of the show and killed at the end, as a lot of evil blond beasts run around committing a lot of evil. It finally turns out that the daughter has been chained in a cellar by the homespun Nazi leader. As the FBI attacks the compound in a burst of fire-power, the girl is rescued, she and her father return home, the family and marriage are saved, and all the good guys live democratically ever after.

The moral bankruptcy of Into the Homeland is not demonstrated by the show itself, but by its producers and writers, who couldn't get their propaganda across through the use of character. They had to resort to turning the Nazi leader into a sadistic abuser of a young woman and, at the very end of the film, a filicide. This kind of pro-Jewish hype is so tawdry and contrived that, at least for me, the movie makers come across as more degenerate than their villains.

Into the Homeland was based on the experiences of a woman named Anne Hamilton Phelan. Posing as a white supremacist, she was welcomed by the Aryan Nations bunch and spent nine days with them. She showed her gratitude for their hospitality by returning to Hollywood, where she made a small fortune by composing a movie script that accuses her previous "Nazi" hosts of every crime in the book.

P.S. In real life, actor Paul Le Mat, who played the pathological neo-Nazi leader, is married to a Negress. Good luck!

The second anti-white TV "attraction" to hit my tube in early January was Evil in Clear River, an ABC TV movie based on the Keegstra affair in Canada. It came at a rather opportune moment for the minorityites who are trying to do Keegstra in, since his appeal was under consideration at air time. Perhaps the well-timed release date was a gentle reminder to the Canadian judges to turn the appeal down.

Actually, Evil in Clear River was not as bad as it could have been. The moribund art of subtlety was resurrected in a surprising number of scenes. The dramatic tension went beyond Hitlerism into a struggle between a mother and her teenaged son, the former trying to convince the latter that what an anti-Zionist teacher was telling him was b-a-d. The film version of Keegstra portrayed him as a more or less decent type, a little too much of a Christian fulminator, perhaps, but one who got along famously with his students in and out of class. His cardinal sin was that he didn't buy the present-day theology that sanctifies Jews and their Holocaust industry. The Jewish side of the argument, the received and hallowed opinion, was clinched by a few photos from the Holocaust horror file, including the one of that little ghetto boy who was supposedly being rounded up for the gas chamber, but actually was about to be questioned for some petty thievery. Today he is a prosperous businessman in England, according to the London Jewish Chronicle.

As the villain in Evil in Clear River loses his teaching post, is fired as the town mayor, is reduced to a part-time mechanic to earn his bread and is finally arrested for "spreading false news," the viewers' sympathies perforce turn away from the mother and the indoctrinated kid. The only way the film can solve this embarrassing point is a sudden and inexplicable change of character, which ruins what could have been above-average TV fare. At the very last moment on the witness stand, the villain who up to now had been portrayed as a more or less civilized human being, becomes 100% villainous, loses his cool and spouts forth a torrent of venomous racism. Even worse, teacher's pet suddenly changes his mind and testifies against his onetime mentor and prairie Svengali.

After these convenient turnabouts, the court finds the defendant guilty and fines him $5,000, the same fine slapped on James Keegstra. The enemies of free speech win. The advocates of free speech lose. Yet somehow we are supposed to believe that democracy has been served and saved.

The TV Keegstra, of course, is nothing like his flesh-and-blood counterpart, who is a gentle, non-pushy type, compared to the extraverted, assertive, hail-fellow-well-met character in the TV movie. Where the facts about the Aryan Nations were distorted in Into the Homeland, the dramatic personae in Evil in Clear River only barely resembled the real life characters. But since the characters even in their distorted role were credible until the last 15 minutes, Evil in Clear River rates one star. Into the Homeland was starless in every sense of the word.

An ironic note: Smack in the middle of Evil, Sam Donaldson broke in with an ABC News Brief to report that two more Palestinians had been killed in the Gaza Strip. The news was a little out of tune with the bare-faced pro-Jewishness sprinkled so thoroughly throughout the film.

The Contras got $3.7 million worth of arms as a result of Irangate. The congressional hearings that pried into Irangate and whitewashed the Israel connection cost $4 million. The Independent Counsel's investigation, headed by Lawrence Walsh and aided by 28 lawyers, 20 FBI agents and 8 IRS investigators, has already spent $3.5 million.

Vermont is the whitest U.S. state, says Ebony magazine, as if it had uncovered a crime. Out of the state's 541,000 population, only 0.25% or some 1,350 Vermonters are black. Even more alarming, whinnies the biggest black magazine, is that the state has not one single black lawyer, policeman, reporter, editor, judge or state department head. Yet the annual income of the Vermont blacks is the highest of any state. Though Ebony was careful not to say so, the message is obvious. Blacks do better when there are fewer blacks around.

Canada. Last spring, the word "brainiac" briefly entered the American vocabulary. That was when the latest theory about poor black achievement in school was being trotted out. Peer pressure was to blame was the cry. Whenever a black student did well, his peers ganged up and labeled him a "brainiac" who was guilty of "acting white."

Obviously, there's a grain of truth to the idea. No less obviously, there's at least a grain of truth to the idea that peer pressure from dumb blacks suppresses the school performance of many integrated white students.

A related story surfaced last October in the once-staid city of Vancouver, British Columbia. There, the city's chief of police has described vicious young Asian crime gangs as "our most serious problem." (No, not all Asians are computer geniuses.)

On October 9, a well-spoken high-school girl phoned the regular open-line radio show hosted by Pat Burns (on CJOR) to describe daily life in her school, which she declined to name for fear of voice recognition:

Serious students can't learn any more. We are in fear every day. All our concentration goes into trying to avoid the gangs. They're frightening. If you go against them they'll beat you up. I've been beat up twice and they still threaten all sorts of things. I'm afraid they'll rape me next. Once they threatened me with terrible things if I didn't sell a bag of grass to a boy. I did. I did what they told me.

My mother wants me to quit, but I want to graduate. I have to be driven to school and back. We always keep together in the halls and the Asians watch us all the time.

Go to the principal, suggested Burns.

"He's just as frightened of the Asians as we are," came the reply (and Instauration believes it).

"Then you must all go to the school trustees," said Burns, adding:

This is one of the most disturbing calls I've ever received. The situation is now out of hand. The police can no longer fulfill their contract and protect the citizenry. So we have the philosophical and moral right to now take matters into our hands and protect ourselves.

For 50 years, Western Canadians watched films and attended lectures on the twin topics of It Can/It Can't Happen Here. "It" always meant "godless Communism" or "hunnish Nazism." Instead, the "it" being described should have been multiracialism, and the scare films should have pictured teen gangs at war in places like Brooklyn, USA.

Now the public schools in Vancouver are almost like those in Brooklyn. Yes, it did happen there!

A similar tale comes from the once very staid city of Victoria, situated directly across British Columbia's Strait of Georgia, on Vancouver Island. There, last spring, some conservative Christian activists got the idea of installing a "prayer room" in the provincial legislature building. Things were fine for a few days -- until the area's burgeoning minority population got wind of the development. A local Instaurationist vividly described the transformation:

For a while all was sweet devotion as the pious paraded in quietly . . . Now it is a babel. Hot-eyed Asians with prayer mats scream unintelligible abuse at turbaned East Indians, whose tongues in rising decibel shout down the Muslims who, in turn, elbow protesting Christians aside. Prayer duels are being fought. As one radio announcer put it, "All hell broke loose in the prayer room today."

A spokesman for Prayer Canada, Ray Jansen, told a Vancouver Sun reporter that henceforth only those "in unity" would be allowed into the prayer room. "The only agreement needed in praying with us is [to pray] in the name of the Lord, Jesus Christ," said Jansen. "We're not limiting prayer, we're just saying that we want people assembling of one accord."

Latin Americans are replacing French Canadians in Quebec churches. A French priest said on British TV that his old congregation found the newcomers were rather noisy, but having large families, they were "morally pure." French Canadians are losing both their faith and their large families. Not only Latin Americans but Vietnamese and blacks are now filling the churches once attended almost entirely by franco-phones. The priest said how good it was, in spite of a few troubling tensions, that Catholicism in Quebec had ceased to be xenophobic.

The B'nai B'rith may be all-powerful in the U.S., but it took a few punches in Canada recently. A Winnipeg jury ordered the Jewish organization to pay $400,000 to Luba Fedorkiw, a Progressive Conservative candidate in a 1984 election. Up to their old tricks, the B'rithers indicated she was an anti-Semite, their only foundation for the charge being a rumor passed on by an anonymous source. Until the B'nai B'rith smear, Fedorkiw was given a good chance of being elected.

The B'nai B'rith, of course, will appeal, and a spokesman said the organization would not change its ways. Taking his words literally, this means that the character assassination will continue whenever the B'rithers see fit to use the weapon. The only form of apology the organization would make was that it would try not to leak its investigations to the press until all charges could be substantiated.

The Reichmann brothers, who left Tangiers after WWII and then became Canadian billionaires in a few short decades, are suing a Toronto magazine for slander. The article hinted that some of the Reichmanns' wealth may have been accumulated as a result of financial deals with the Axis powers. The Reichmanns, who already own Gulf Canada Corp., Abitibi Ltd., the world's largest producer of newsprint, and Olympia & York, the world's largest real estate developer, are now moving into Britain. They are trading their 49% of Hiram Walker Distillery for 10% of Allied-Lyons PLC. Their 10% will give them effective control of Tetley Tea, Teacher's Scotch, Baskin-Robbins ice cream and 7,000 British pubs.

Britain. When the Daily Mail reported the mugging of news reader Jan Leeming in her BBC offices in London, her attackers, who sprinkled her with acid, were described as blacks. Immediately a complaint of racism was filed with the British Press Council. After some deliberation, the Council decided that because the newspaper had only reported the victim's own words, no offence had been committed.

But when the Sun, another British paper, came out with the headline, TV JAN IN ACID ATTACK, followed by the subhead, THREE BLACKS MUG HER AT BBC, the Press Council upheld the complaint, ruling that such headlines overemphasized the race of her attackers.

Britain put on a massive telethon with thousands of individuals and groups participating in various ways to raise money for Children in Need. What was most striking was that not a single colored face was seen. Not one of all the wealthy Asians gave a penny. Nor did the vociferous black and brown groups contribute anything. No one watching the program would have realized that Britain is now a self-advertised multiracial state. On the evidence of the tube, viewers would have believed that present-day Britain is snow white.

Europe. Instaurationists on the move in foreign climes often see things missed by the ordinary tourist. Reporting what is generally unreported frequently leads to bursts of iconoclasm and stereotype-smashing, some of which seems purposely designed to shock. Peripatetic Instaurationists also have the habit of digressing from their travelogues into far-out musings that go well beyond jotting down their impressions of foreign lands, peoples and cultures. For instance:

France is an underrated act in the English-speaking world. I am a northern Michigan native, hard to impress with the beauty of other planetary parts, but I have never seen anything to equal the striking loveliness of the Alpes Maritimes, although all of France is lovely almost up to the outskirts of Paris. The French are consistently amiable, straightforward and generous, not at all the rude French of tourist mythology.

The Germans are the only Europeans who strike an American as Midwestern normal, the only Europeans willing to strike up an acquaintance and offer to split a carafe of wine and pizza on a moment's notice in a strange restaurant in a strange country. Good ole boys, not Huns by any means.

The Irish? More Nordic, more reserved and quiet, much more sober than the Irish tribesmen of east coast U.S. cities.

The Scandinavians, whom I had never before encountered in their native habitat, were horrifying drunks. I saw few Greta Garbos among them, nor did I note any redeeming aesthetic virtue in the men. I am not at all sure these people could not benefit from being mongrelized up to the hilt. It might stop them from falling down plastered in mid-afternoon in three-piece business suits. (In the Midwest we wear overalls.)

To be brutally frank, the English appear to supply most of the rednecks of Europe. Whether it is the Labour Party's beloved Untermenschen rioting at a soccer game or the middle-class, mid-level UK military with whom I shared a bottle of scotch in a misplaced spirit of NATO unity and who then robbed me blind (a repeated occurrence), the English are not the English of John Nobull or other wistful illusionists. If they fought two world wars to keep the dratted Jerries from getting their surly heads above that of fair Britannia, I can only murmur diffidently that the Germans have been ahead of the English since Henry the Fowler, along with damn near everybody else north of the Tiber and the Tagus.

On the racial front I found grounds for cheer and woe. The Wogs were fewer, cleaner, more acculturated, more segregated and more under control than I had expected. The only ones I saw much of in Paris were either almost white and Europeanized or on their way to the Montmartre bastille at five in the morning. The woeful news is that very few individuals and no groups I've seen in Europe match the physical beauty of Northern Europeans in the American Midwest. Did all the really handsome ones move across the Atlantic? If so, it's bad news, because they are miscegenating rather rapidly in the States. If North America skimmed the cream of the European yeomanry and bourgeoisie and is now mixing the skim with the scum, it adds up to a racial setback of thousands of years.

The Holocaust and relativity are making their strongest stands in North America. Europeans, leaving aside a few free-speech prosecutions, generally regard the Holocaust as skeptically as Le Pen. Einstein is considered in no way superior to relativity's co-producer, Poincaré, or to De Broglie and Heisenberg, who simply out-thought him on quantum theory and the uncertainty principle. Relativity, modern music, modern art, pop culture and anti-hereditary society are all of a piece. You wind them up, put them on the floor and they go nowhere. Jewish intellectuals have made a fetish, and tried to make a virtue, out of propositions that don't make an ounce of sense and out of art that nobody can stand to look at or listen to.

If music is structurally derived from mathematics, the modern garbage of Cage and Schönberg, heavy metal and Congoid caterwauling is the child of relativity. Relativity demands a total suspension of common sense, especially in regard to two mutually accelerated and mutually observing systems observed by a third system. What is hopelessly senseless to the human brain is also pretty likely to be out of sync with the real universe.

Music is supposedly the artistic effort to find and arrange sound pleasing to the human ear, and, through it, the mind. Accordingly, it usually consists of an effort to make structures of consonance and melody. Modern music deliberately seeks major dissonance in minor keys, a fail-proof formula for jangling the ear. Racial anti-aesthetics seeks genetic dissonance and facial disharmony. The modern public is peremptorily ordered to accept all of this as necessary and "proven" in some never explained way. Meanwhile, the less hoodwinked or merely inattentive simply go right on producing consonant, melodic and harmonic folk music, while preferring comely blondes as mates. Relativity's twin paradox and late 20th-century musical indeterminacy tell the uncaring, uncomprehending bluegrass musician that Whoopi Goldberg is equal to Pallas Athena. Twelve-tone and pentonic music, the Jewish worship of the ugly, and Marxist obscurantism will still be telling him the same thing when his grandchildren have violated Einstein's dogmatic speed limit and landed on a planet of Alpha Centauri.

Sweden. A farmer named Sven-Olle Olsson, who resides in Sjöbo, a town at the southernmost tip of the country, has won over the town council to his campaign to stop making Sweden a haven for refugees. He has received so much notoriety and criticism he is thinking of quitting the Center Party, of which he had been a faithful member for many years, and starting up his own political organization. He has learned from experience that the established parties in Sweden will never have the courage to take a strong stand against the alien influx. When he persuaded the town council of Sjöbo to refuse to accept 15 refugees, the Swedish media and the liberals raised such a ruckus that out-of-town churchmen set up a special school in Sjöbo to induce the townspeople to change their minds. Some selected refugees were paraded in front of the town council and related the horrors that awaited them if they were returned to their homelands.

One newspaper has predicted that Sven-Olle might well turn out to be the Swedish Le Pen.

France. Foreigners in France comprise 8% of the population. The national police has now published a study showing that 16.14% of all crimes are being committed by the 8%. The percentage rises to 36.14% in Paris. More specifically, immigrants are the culprits in 20.03% of the shoplifting offenses, 43.72% of drug trafficking cases, 19.35% of stolen goods incidents, 19% of rapes and 71% of false identity cards.

The right-wing newspaper, Présent, threw some cold water on the left's glowing celebration of the bicentennial of the French Revolution. The hard-hitting journal unearthed a law promulgated in the tenth year of the republic (1802) forbidding any foreigner to bring "any black, mulatto or other people of color of either sex" into France. Violators would be jailed pending deportation. An exception was made for nonwhites who entered France with the permission of the Naval and Colonial Ministries.

Présent had previously discovered another law, issued on July 4, 1794, that forbade Jews under penalty of death to follow the French armies. This was similar to Grant's short-lived Civil War order for Jews to keep their distance from his army. Apparently both in French armies in the late 18th century and in the Union army in the mid-19th century soldiers had more important work to do, such as fighting, than to enrich Jewish camp followers, hucksters and speculators.

Thierry Paulin, a homosexual mulatto drug addict, who dyes his hair blond and sports a diamond in his right ear, was arrested and charged with robbing and killing upwards of 21 French women, all over 70, in the last three years. Paulin confessed to seven of the murders, some of which he accomplished with the help of another nonwhite named Jean-Thierry Mathurin. Both Paulin and Mathurin come from French overseas possessions, the former from Martinique, the latter from French Guiana. The murderers did not kill their victims quickly. They would stick screwdrivers into their bodies, kick them in the stomach and practice various other tortures until they revealed where their money was hidden. After that, in most of the grisly crimes, they would be strangled and stuffed into garbage bags.

Paulin didn't seem to be too worried by his arrest and confession. He told his captors, "In any case, I'm risking nothing because there is no death penalty." He explained why he had gone on his killing spree: "Because by looking at me with hate, all these old women reminded me of my mother who never loved me." But it was no big deal. "After all," he shrugged, "they were only white women."

One reason it took so long to apprehend the pair was the media's reluctance to identify them as mulattoes, despite information provided by the few old women who had survived their murderous embraces. Also, France's fingerprint system is so archaic and disorganized that, though Paulin had left his prints at several of the murder sites, though his prints were on file in southern France, following previous run-ins with the law, no one bothered to match them up.

Jean-Marie Le Pen is still going strong, despite the transcontinental outcry at his definition of the Holocaust as a footnote of WWII history, despite a trip to the French island of Guadeloupe, where he may have escaped an assassination plot, despite an invasion on December 30 of the offices of his weekly magazine, National Hebdo, by a bunch of Jewish hooligans who vandalized the place and caused immense damage. The vandalism resembled a similar incursion of Jewish hoods into a gathering of members of GRECE, a right-wing think tank, some years ago.

The French press did not condemn the Jewish violence. No one was arrested, though the Jews left a note that might provide a clue or two:

We will have nothing to do with Le Pen's "footnotes." Le Pen is an anti-Semitic guttersnipe disguised as a candidate for the presidential elections, a candidate who denies the Holocaust. His Front National is a cesspool where all the offal of France is gathered. National Hebdo is Der Stürmer of the 80s. A Fascist dishrag directed by a racist, anti-Semitic louse . . . Jewish youth will no longer accept the banalization of genocide. Anti-Semites, tremble!

A prominent lawyer in the picturesque southern town of Grasse was indicted for some shady behavior in the bankruptcy case of the famed Chaumet brothers, France's toniest jewelers. It was quite a shock to the locals because the lawyer, Richard Banon, is a vice president of B'nai B'rith and a close associate of the Minister of Culture, Jack Lang, a fellow Jew. Banon had apparently acted unethically by pretending to be an ordinary creditor in an attempt to regain 450,000 francs ($76,500) worth of jewels that belonged to his mother. The judge cited him for "illegally exercising the profession of banker."

West Germany. The Germans filtering back from the USSR (Instauration, Jan. 1988) have an 18th-century accent, their ancestors having emigrated to Russia in the 1700s. It appears, however, they are not too popular with many West Germans. They are considered too nationalistic!

East Germany. Screaming "Jewish pigs," "Jews out of German churches," and "Sieg Heil," seven skinheads attacked a punk rock concert held in a church in East Germany last November. They belong to a group of about a hundred skinheads who were proclaiming nationalist sentiments in last August's demonstrations at the Berlin Wall. Such slogans as "We are Germans . . . We are proud to be Germans" are not supposed to be heard in a Russian satellite.

Neither are anti-Semitic utterances. It is a

Marxist "law" that when capitalism is ended, anti-Semitism, an evil outgrowth of class warfare, will also wither away -- as fast and as witheringly as the dictatorship of the proletariat. This law is apparently not holding in East Germany, whose authorities have welcomed hybrid punk rockers to their workers' paradise. Race still makes a difference to some East Germans, even after 43 years of concentrated Marxification.

Austria. American Ambassador to Austria Ronald Lauder -- the Jewish envoy who was succeeded by Henry Grunwald, another Jewish envoy -- left his post last autumn with a redwood-sized chip on his shoulder. In an interview published in the New York Times on October 9, Lauder suggested that many Austrian people remain anti-Semitic. He characterized the Austrians as "feeling envy for anyone who is successful," adding, "They feel that the Jewish people have always been successful."

A few statistical comparisons may be in order:

Literacy rate: Austria 98%. Israel 88%.

Daily newspaper circulation (1982): Austria 780 per 1,000 people. Israel 416 per 1,000 people.

Per capita income: Austria (1980) $8,280. Israel (1978) $3,332.

Tourists (1981): Austria 14.2 million. Israel 2.2 million.

Inflation rate (1983): Austria 3.3%. Israel 145.6%.

One could go on . . .

The Austrian government protested to the U.S. State Department, saying it was "taken aback and astonished" by Lauder's remarks. A State Department official announced on October 15, "We don't think the protest calls for a response."

Sicily. Last summer Anna-Karin Skjaer, a 24-year-old Nordic knockout from Norway, arrived in the town of Partanna (population 15,000). A college student, she wanted to improve her Italian and signed up for a drama course. All was well and good until one bleak evening last November when two young men grabbed her and took her to an abandoned house, where they were joined by two other males. Then began a gang rape that lasted all night. After the culprits had been found and jailed, the entire town of Partanna turned out to beg Anna-Karin's pardon. The mayor gave her a bunch of roses and offered her a six-month job at the Archaeological Institute. She indicated that she might stay.

What more will it take for her to understand that a blonde, blue-eyed beauty from the cold north is anything but an iceberg to the darker-skinned whites of the hot-tempered south?

Greece. A subscriber writes. I enjoyed my recent trip to Greece. What I saw of the modern country confirmed my opinion that it is a derivative culture existing on the periphery of modern Western civilization. What I saw of the remains of its ancient predecessor were even more glorious than I had imagined. The modern cannot bear comparison with the ancient.

Today's Greeks are not very attractive to one biased in favor of Northern European beauty. In contrast, the statues of the ancient gods and goddesses are sublimely so. Nordic beauty is also in abundant evidence at the common tourist attractions, thanks to the presence of numerous German and Scandinavian vacationers. It is interesting to note that among the Italian tour groups, Northern European racial types were much more common than they are among the Italians in the U.S., most of whom trace their ancestry to Sicily and southern Italy.

Nordic feminine beauty shares equal billing with the Aegean Islands as the favorite illustration for postcards. A series of cards features Greek gods descending from Olympus to ogle and cavort with scantily clad blonde tourists. This may symbolize the unsettling effect handsome Northern European voyagers have on the sexual fantasies of Greek men, and on the jealousies of Greek women.

An ancient illustration of this beauty/ugliness dichotomy is the statuary grouping of Aphrodite (Venus), Eros (Cupid) and the satyr god, Pan, from Delos (circa 100 B.C.) in the National Archaeological Museum in Athens. It is a work that is both aesthetically beautiful and eugenically instructive. Pan is shown grabbing Aphrodite with obvious intentions. She, however, rather than submit to his panmixian urgings, modestly attempts to cover herself and raises a sandal to fend him off. The little winged infant Eros is the real surprise. He is portrayed coming to Aphrodite's rescue, grabbing one of Pan's horns and bending his head back, clearly superior in will if not in strength to his bestial adversary. He is informing the satyr in no uncertain terms that the radiantly beautiful goddess is not for the likes of him. Pan's look of fierce anger and frustration is directed at this chubby ancient champion of racial hygiene. I suspect the unknown sculptor shared many values in common with Instaurationists.

Eros to the rescue

Israel. Last year, the majority of Israeli Jews finally became obsessed with the issue of racial demography. They have been interested in the subject for years, but in 1987, according to many news reports issuing from the Jewish state, such recondite matters as "differential fertility" and "population doubling time" became the normal stuff of headlines and public debates. The "battle of the bedrooms," a familiar phrase for some years, gave way abruptly to "the demographic war." Both Jews and Arabs could be heard everywhere describing their newborns as "contributions to the demographic war."

Panic is the only word for it. Confronted with the certainty of an Arab majority in the not-too-distant future (since Israel will not surrender the conquered lands of 1967), many Jews suddenly embraced the option of expelling the Arabs. Formerly mentioned only by blood and thunder racists like Rabbi Meir Kahane, expulsion became a topic of daily conversation, just like the Arab birthrate. The Arabs grasped at once that a brave new agenda was looming just over the Israeli political horizon -- and panicked about the idea of expulsion just as the Jews had panicked about becoming a minority in Zion.

The Palestinian explosion began in December, touched off by one specific incident in Gaza. Abundant evidence, however, suggests that the charged climate of Israeli public discourse had caused the rioters and strikers to sense vividly that the hour for them was growing late.

A Palestinian today must feel something like a Silesian in 1945. The heart-wrenching book, Gerhart Hauptmann and Silesia by Gerhard Pohl (West German edition, 1953; American edition, 1962), describes how the natives of that ancient German province watched warily in the months following surrender as first a tiny trickle of Poles, then a stream, and finally a torrent, came to co-occupy their beloved villages and farms. At each stage of the dreadful supplanting, the Germans were officially reassured that Silesia would be left (at least in large part) to them and their posterity. The deceit was intended to forestall panic and rebellion, and it worked. In the end, of course, the Poles stole everything, even the great playwright Hauptmann's beautiful estate, which the sympathetic and literary-minded Russian overlords had tried to preserve for German culture.

Advance indications of a coming "Silesian Treatment" for the Israeli-occupied Arab lands are not hard to spot.

The dissident Jewish writer, Israel Shakhak, described an ominous opinion poll in the Washington Report on Middle East Affairs (Oct. 1987). When the survey was made in August of last year, retired Israeli General Rehavan Zeevi had recently proposed that the Palestinians be "transferred" to Jordan. The pollsters found that 50% of Israeli Jews agreed with Zeevi's proposal, 35% rejected it, and 12% had no opinion.

At least four major Israeli leaders called for an Arab expulsion during 1987. Besides Zeevi they were Yosef Shapira, a full minister (without portfolio) in the Shamir cabinet; Michael Dekel, a deputy defense minister; and Yuval Neeman, who leads the right-wing Tehiya party.

Shapira said the government should pay each Arab willing to emigrate $20,000 (which money would doubtless come largely from U.S. taxpayers). Zeevi and Neeman, in their expulsion proposals, called the public's attention to a secret Israeli Army scheme from the 1950s -- the Ishmael Plan -- which had the Jews conquering the West Bank and expelling all inhabitants.

It's clear that all the expulsion talk helped to fire up the Palestinians for the December riots, which continued on through January and February. Sari Nusseibeh, a moderate Palestinian academic, told American reporter Glenn Frankel that his people see public expulsion proposals as "the possible beginning of a racial and religious war" (Washington Post, Oct. 31, 1987).

Reporter Thomas L. Friedman offered New York Times readers a similar picture 12 days earlier. "Among West Bank Palestinians," he wrote, "there is a growing school of thought . . . that believes the 'demographic struggle' -- not the 'armed struggle' -- is the best strategy . . ." In response to this, he noted, many Jews were joining Rabbi Kahane in the call for a mass expulsion.

Friedman described the scene in the maternity ward of the Remal Health Center in Gaza.

[Forty-two-year-old Suad al-Hadidi] proudly folded back some thin white sheets to show off her tenth child, a handsome girl named Ayat, who was born the night before.

Ten children is nothing unusual for Palestinians in the occupied Gaza Strip, said Dr. Zuhni Yusef al-Zahidi, head of maternal health care at the clinic . . .

"Many people here say, 'We must have more babies to compensate for our losses in Lebanon and to put pressure on the Jews to come to the negotiating table,'" Dr. Zahidi said in Arabic as Mrs. Hadidi and other women in the maternity ward nodded approval.

In 1985, for the first time, wrote Friedman, the number of Arab children under the age of four in "greater Israel" exceeded the number of Jewish children under four -- 370,000 Arabs to 365,000 Jews; and differential fertility was "rapidly becoming the central issue in the political debate here."

A "calamity" is what Jews call the Arab demographic threat. In many cases, these are the same Jews who see the Third World conquest of the U.S., Canada, Australia and Sweden as a "beautiful thing." Consider the ending of a letter which one Mark G. Levey of Washington wrote to the Washington Post (Nov. 6):

To Mr. [Leon F.] Bouvier and the rest who want us to turn away the stranger at our door, I say it is a good thing that America will change a lot in the coming years. Immigration does guarantee that a very different society develops. The alternative is that America stays as bland and pale as a bottle of Miller beer, vintage 1987.

This is the new Martin Mull (The History of White People in America) Treatment for white people's fears: derision and mockery. Levey is surely also delighted that non-white immigrants to the U.S. maintain a high birthrate -- but dismayed by the high Arab birthrate in Israel.

Majority activists sometimes take an almost perverse delight in the impending Arabization of Israel, reasoning that turn-about is fair play and "Now they're going to be destroyed by believing the same pluralism propaganda they put out for the goyim all these years."

Zimbabwe. The national airline of this black dictatorship has ordered its stewardesses to go on a diet or be grounded. A company directive declared it was "unacceptable [to] have these big, ugly Amazons pretending to be air hostesses. Some of them are so big, their thighs knock against the passengers as they are moving between the aisles."

Sub-Saharan Africa. Western churches are more active than ever in this area, but the winds of change are now shaking the very foundations of centuries-old Christian teaching. The issue is polygamy. Increasingly, monogamy is being branded in African pulpits, press and parliaments as an inappropriate Western import foisted on Africans in the colonial era by missionaries.

Seventy African bishops of the Anglican Church have prepared a report for London which says that the church's traditional insistence on monogamy is based on a willful misinterpretation of biblical texts by missionaries unduly influenced by their own Western cultural upbringing. The report also says that monogamy tends to encourage prostitution and that polygamy is the marriage pattern most "natural" for Africans.

The African churches are aligning themselves with the growing number of political leaders and theologians who blame the continent's social ills on "foreign" ethical values inherited from their colonial rulers. A Presbyterian minister from a leading Kenyan school of theology points out that 90% of the African clergy have roots in polygamous households. The reverend believes there is no biblical authority for excluding people from Christian worship because of non-European forms of marriage. A Jesuit missionary in Zaire complained that it's not just celibacy that is a problem among the African Catholic clergy. Unlike the marrying priests in the U.S., who are satisfied with one wife, African divines want two, three or more.

South Africa. From a subscriber. The massacre of a community of 16 white missionaries in Matabeleland near Bulawayo -- men, women and children -- was predictable. They owned a ranch and had been having trouble with black squatters who claimed the land was rightfully theirs. The squatters contacted a gang of "Marxists," well-armed thugs who pitched up at the ranch in the early hours of the morning, summoned the ranch-hands to watch what they were going to do (which is their custom), then roused all the whites and bound their wrists behind their backs with wire. Instead of shooting them, they then proceeded to hack them to death one by one with axes and pangas (machetes). One of the murderers, probably taught by the missionaries to write or scrawl, left a note blaming Mrs. Thatcher and dictator Mugabe for not having kept the agreement that after independence all white "capitalists" would be made to leave the country. This argument might explain why so many whites in Matabeleland are being murdered, except that reason plays no part in black behavior. Negroes here just have a lust to kill. That is really all there is to it.

The African National Congress, like someone with a guilty conscience, has been quick to blame South Africa for the massacre, and Mugabe's newspapers have echoed the accusation. Ordinarily, the newspapers' credibility would be seriously shaken by making such a charge. Surely no one in the West could possibly believe that South African troops would butcher their own kind. Though the local press knows quite well that the charge is too absurd to be supported, the massacre places reporters and editors in a quandary. Now that Zimbabwe has black majority rule and there is no apartheid, how can they explain or excuse the butchery? In plain language, it is the inevitable outcome of the West's African policies. There has been no civilized rule in Zimbabwe since Macmillan and Harold Wilson, pressed on by the Americans, betrayed their own kindred in the name of democracy, showing yet again that our race will have great difficulty surviving under the governments that are supposed to represent and protect them. The massacre forms a part of the race war which is directed unerringly at whites, and which as such has no political solution and no economic solution.

It is clear from the photographs in the newspapers that the missionaries formed a happy community, happy in serving the Lord by helping their black brothers and sisters. Most of them were Rhodesians of British extraction. All were Nordics, including one extremely attractive golden-haired girl of 15, Glynis Keatley, a radiant beauty full of life and character. She should be honored as a white martyr and her photograph displayed throughout the West. In spite of the systematic murdering of whites taking place all around them, the missionaries had no fear and carried no weapons of self-defense. They knew that God would shield them. At least their deaths should warn us that our salvation depends solely on ourselves, the very opposite of what the missionaries believed. If the mass slaughter helps to teach us that, then the whites will not have died completely in vain.

At the time of the massacre, and also in Zimbabwe, a 27-year-old South African woman, Odile Harrington, was tried and sentenced not for spying on Zimbabwe, but for spying on the African National Congress. She had drawn a sketch of a house occupied by ANC officials and had posted it. In court she described in detail how she had undergone torture and degradation, including sexual assault, during detention and interrogation. Nevertheless, she remained unrepentant, saying that the ANC and other so-called liberation movements in South Africa were "evil" and should be "put out of action." She was so unrepentant that she "even admitted she was a strong supporter of the South African regime." The African baboon judge jumped up and down and called for the death sentence, but finally settled for 25 years. The South African police deny emphatically that they had anything to do with this young woman's spying activities. I am inclined to believe them because she was so amateurish. Whatever her motives and whoever is behind her, the question remains: Will the British government leave her to rot her life away in an African hellhole or will it try to get her out? Or will it continue to send Mugabe more locomotives?

White racialists sometimes imagine South Africa in the 80s as being a bit like

Georgia in the 50s. One problem with that analogy: Atlanta then wasn't full of multiracial discos, like Johannesburg and Cape Town are now. Another problem: the American South was never so full of "cultural bolsheviks" as South Africa has always been. (The explanation: South Africa's white population is more disproportionately Jewish than any country except Israel.)

Janet Suzman, a London-based Jewish actress who happens to be the niece of Helen Suzman, a leader of South Africa's leftist Progressive Federal Party, says that she "has a dream" to match that of Dr. King:

I imagine this great flotilla of troop carriers and inside them are hundreds and hundreds of actors, writers, artists -- being parachuted into the [Orange] Free State like an army. It's the beginning of a Fifth Column of ideas.

Perhaps Ms. Suzman has forgotten that the Orange Free State is the Iowa of South Africa, and that its terribly non-ideological men and women must keep their shoulders to the wheel if tens of thousands of sensitive, arty types in Jo'burg and Cape Town are to eat!

The biggest theatrical hit of the year in Cape Town is about as subversive as most other recent hits. Called District Six -- the Musical, it's about a "vibrant [mixed] inner-city neighborhood" in Cape Town (you know the type) which was bulldozed by the ruling National Party to create a sterile all-white area. The co-authors are David Kramer and a racially-mixed musician named Taliep Petersen.

In part a paean to miscegenation, like Lenny Bernstein's West Side Story, the play ends with an inflammatory chorus, "The children will revenge us . . ." The Associated Press reports that "critics have been unanimous in their praise for the show" -- and the AP doesn't mean foreign critics, either.

Up in Johannesburg, the latest thespian sensation is a retelling of Othello, with the chief blame externalized, as Shakespeare never intended. Now Iago is an evil Afrikaner, spoiling an otherwise perfect black-white match. John Kani, who plays Othello, has told the worshipful South African press, "If I weren't acting, I'd be carrying an AK-47."

Japan. In the past 18 months or so, 86 books with the word "Jews" in their titles have been published in Japan. With the exception of two or three, they have all been classified by the Western media as anti-Semitic, including The Protocols of the Elders of Zion. Some of the titles are quite intriguing: The Secret of Jewish Power to Control the World and To Understand the Jews Is to Understand the West, for instance.

It is reasonable to surmise that Jewish organizations in the West are beginning to entertain serious doubts about what is going on in Japan. Any Western nation that went on such an anti-Semitic literary kick would quickly have a worldwide boycott slapped on its exports. Japanese foreign trade, however, is so huge and so many Western Jews are involved in it, particularly in the U.S., that any reduction or boycott might hurt Jewish importers as much as the Japanese themselves.

On the other hand, Congress is getting ready to pass or at least try to pass various protectionist bills aimed primarily at Japan. The recent outburst of Japanese anti-Semitism may give the powerhouse Jewish lobby a reason to support such bills, which would guarantee their passage.

Liberals point to Japanese anti-Semitism to prove that it is irrational, if only because there are no more than 1,000 Jews in Japan and most of these are there on short-term assignments as agents of Western companies. This argument, however, can easily be turned around. It's just as logical and true to say that Japanese are interested in anti-Semitism because Jews are a phenomenon of historic importance and their influence is worldwide. What they manage and have managed to do in the West -- help stir up WWII and bring chaos to the Middle East -- affects the destiny of every nation on earth, whether such nation has millions of Jews or no Jews at all.

Philippines. Nationalism is surging here, while American influence and the use of English wane. An earlier generation of Filipinos memorized poems like Hiawatha. Today, the use of English is restricted to the teaching of science and mathematics. Criticism of the U.S. abounds across the political spectrum. New York Times reporter Seth Mydans described a scene which says it all.

At a demonstration outside the American Embassy recently, 200 protesters against the [U.S. military] bases stood on one side of Roxas Boulevard while an equal number of applicants for United States visas, waiting in line across the road, watched them.

Let's we forget, one of the major reasons given for opening the floodgates to Asian immigration was that valuable personal links would be forged between the U.S. and important Third World countries. Those links, it was said, would cause entire nations to tilt in America's direction.

Sacrificing a nation's racial makeup to foreign policy considerations was criminal and idiotic in any event, but it so happens that liberal strategists were dead wrong.

Not only in the Philippines, but throughout Southeast Asia, the non-Communist nations are turning to Japan for economic guidance, and to Red China and/or the Soviet Union for solutions in geopolitics. New York Times reporter Barbara Crossette attended the ASEAN summit conference held in Manila in December -- the organization's first summit in more than a decade -- and found "profoundly" changed regional perceptions. "For many Southeast Asians," she wrote, "the United States has ceased to be a favorite." The pullout from Vietnam was a shock which destroyed old feelings of trust and confidence.

But what about the millions of Filipinos and other Asians who now live in the U.S. and have relatives back home? What about American exports of TV shows and popular music? According to Crossette, Cultural and political gaps have also grown between the United States, where many Southeast Asians are educated, and some of the nations once thought of almost as Washington's protégés.

As democratic practices have eroded in Indonesia, Malaysia and Singapore, where detentions of political opponents have increased, those governments have been critical of both the Western press and European and American-based human rights movements.

Are you listening, Australia? The race blenders who now run that country have publicly stated their determination to make it racially "Eurasian." And one reason they always give is "to improve foreign relations with the nearby Asian nations."

Instauration will go out on a limb by predicting that if the European masses of Australia do become Eurasian, the real Asians will spurn the bastard nation as they never did the pure one.

Australia. The people of Perth have been exposed recently to placards threatening, "Asians out or racial war!" They were composed and affixed here and there by the Australian Nationalist movement led by Jack Van Tongeren, an import from Holland. Van Tongeren told the press that if Australia's economy went into a tailspin and if white culture was perverted beyond all recognition, his group was ready to take over. Whether the Australian Nationalist movement is a serious attempt to stop the racial hybridization of the continent or just another letterhead group thrown together by a hot air merchant remains to be seen.

In Western Australia a vigilante "grog squad" rounds up drunken Abos and drags them 80 miles into the desert to a "dry out" camp of tin shacks. Explained Don McCleod, 80, the chief vigilante:

When you get drunken Aborigines lying around it creates an eyesore. It upsets a lot of the white residents. If no one picked them up, they would just lie there until they were sober enough to head off to the pub again.

A Dispatch from the Front Lines

The following was written before the Aryan Nations Hour was forced off radio station KZZI in Utah.

Lonely. That's the first impression one gets whenever activists are making their stand. Maybe that's because there's so few of them.

Here in the Land of the Mormons, Dwight McCarthy, a 37-year-old soft-spoken Majority activist, is fighting to keep the light of truth shining despite the ever-deepening darkness. His one-hour Free Speech radio program airs in a suburb of Salt Lake City, and also reaches parts of Ogden and Provo. Listeners constantly call in with expressions of support, but from what this correspondent can see, the only genuine support he's getting is from the staff of the small radio station carrying his program. Majority members are doing nothing as the forces of ZOG gather to crush him -- and them.

It was in Vietnam that McCarthy began to realize something was fundamentally wrong with his own government that was sending troops to kill or be killed by Communists in one country, yet making economic deals with Russia and other Communist states that were sending supplies to North Vietnam. He witnessed many eye-opening events during his two tours there, including race wars between American troops. These went unreported by the media that was otherwise doing its best to report every negative thing possible about the war. Another memory is that of Jewish troops in rear-echelon areas not being required to work on their Sabbath, while Christian troops were expected to do so on Sunday.

Honorably discharged, carrying the physical scars of a shrapnel wound and psychological scars from a sense of betrayal, McCarthy drifted back to his home state of Louisiana. At the University of New Orleans he spoke out against the anti-war protesters. More years of drifting found him finally in the Land of the Mormons.

Over time he came to consider his nation belonged to the race that created America. Obviously, he doesn't accept the modern grouping which places the Majority right in there with Hispanics, Arabs, Jews and (at last report) even Australian aborigines. McCarthy's decision to start a radio program -- with all the attendant dangers of assuming a high profile -- was made because it had become clear that every white eventually has to make a stand or all whites will go under. First called the Counter-Marxist Alliance, he later changed the program's name to the Aryan Nations Hour.

Like trained watchdogs the local media have kept up a constant howl about the Aryan Nations being a white supremacist hate group. McCarthy always emphasizes that he is a separatist, not a supremacist. During my visit to the station one caller with a heavy Hispanic accent asserted that McCarthy had never advocated hate or violence, but his opponents had!

Other tactics of suppression employed against him include advertiser boycotts against the entire radio station, demonstrations in parks during which his life was threatened, harassing calls and menacing statements about the security of the station staff and their families. The JDL threatened to march around on their lawns at midnight, and Irv Rubin promised to eliminate anyone connected with the show. Somebody sabotaged the station's satellite dish, but so far the FBI's only response to all this terrorism has been to investigate McCarthy!

Utah's governor, the Latter-Day Saints, the Ogden city council and the local mayor -- among others -- have issued statements condemning the Aryan Nations. Interestingly enough, none of them has issued statements condemning those who would deny McCarthy his constitutional right to freedom of speech. In fact, a state representative named Prodtzman is sponsoring Joint Resolution #3. This enabling legislation says the people of Utah do not want anything to do with the Aryan Nations, and would like to see criminal penalties applied if the movement "intimidates" or "harasses" any minority group. Prodtzman openly crows that the legislation is aimed at one specific religious group, and has not the slightest twinge of concern about the constitutional questions involved. Even those members of the radio station staff who do not support McCarthy's separatist philosophy are up in arms about Prodtzman's efforts, because of their ominous implications.

One brief note of good news: Local police have offered McCarthy all the protection he needs. They'll no doubt be invited to Israel for sensitivity training, as was the local sheriff, who has thus far failed in his duty to harass McCarthy for daring to exercise free speech.

Because of threats to family members of the station staff, McCarthy had to change his Aryan Nations Hour to an open talk show format called the Free Speech Hour. Acknowledging that the end is in sight for his broadcasting career, he is now bending his efforts in other directions. He hopes to establish a dialogue with representatives of Hispanics, whites, blacks and American Indians on the subject of separatism. He even wants to organize a congress in the spring to explore the possibilities, and also discuss the methods by which ZOG keeps them at each others' throats.

The obstacles are enormous, of course, but as the Chinese say: "The longest journey begins with but a single step."

Do Whites Have Civil Rights?

Generally, if a black knocks a white to the ground and threatens him with a field hockey stick, the incident makes no more news than a dog-bites-man story. Surprisingly, this is exactly what happened last October on a high-school athletic field in Brookline (MA), and it did make headlines. A non-student black, William R. Tucker, was attempting to steal a leather jacket from a white student when Armand Mora, a fellow student, intervened. He was promptly knocked to the ground, kicked and threatened with a field hockey stick by Tucker. After being rescued by other white students, Mora was sent to the hospital for treatment.

Next day Tucker was charged with violating Mora's civil rights in one of three counts of assault and battery. The charge specifically stated that the black had attacked Mora because he was white.

For decades black assaults on whites, which far outnumber the reverse, have been rated as ordinary, run-of-the-mill crimes. But white attacks on blacks have been considered more serious. Civil rights violations have often been added to the charges, which means a much heavier fine and a much longer stay in jail for the accused, if he is convicted. The increasing numbers of blacks and other nonwhites on juries haven't made it any easier for white defendants.

De-Holidaying King

The Anchorage (AK) municipal assembly voted ten to one to name the city's nearly completed performing arts center after Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. But when the politicians' decision was put to a vote of the people of Anchorage, Alaska's largest city, 73% of the 51,124 who voted rejected the proposal. That's about the way voters divide on most of the really important social issues in the country at large. What the politicians or courts are overwhelmingly for -- forced busing, racial quotas, affirmative action, Middle Eastern warmongering, nonwhite immigration -- the people are solidly against.

This is further proved by a King street-naming contretemps in San Diego. Market Street had been renamed Martin Luther King Jr. Boulevard by the city fathers. But when the people were allowed to vote on the matter, a large majority wanted -- and got -- the street's original name restored.

Even such an issue as legalizing white and black marriages, approved several decades ago by the Noxious Nine, just squeaked by, 52% to 48%, in a recent Mississippi referendum. If all Mississippians had voted, and if many of those who did vote had not been afraid of economic retaliation against the state, the percentage would probably have been reversed. In West Virginia, the politicians are actually afraid to let the public vote on a similar referendum. The results might show a majority of the state's population still approves of what in more sensible and in more progressive evolutionary times was once one of the most honored laws of the land.

Back to Dentistry

While the nation's eyes were carefully and forcefully focused by the media on Governor Mechem of Arizona and his travails (indictment, impeachment, recall election), Mayor James W. Holley III of Portsmouth (VA) was quietly removed from his job by a decisive vote -- 13,438 (57.7%) for recall, 9,861 (42.3%) against. That the city is 47% black meant that more than a few "brothers" had shrinking confidence in brother Holley. It's now up to the Portsmouth City Council to pick a mayor pro tem, who will officiate until the regular mayoral term expires June 30.

Holley, it may be remembered, mailed "racist" and "sexist" letters to a white newspaper editor and a dozen or so black community leaders who had opposed his closing of a predominantly black high school.

The ex-mayor, a dentist by profession, did not take his defeat with good grace. Even before the successful recall, he told his critics, somewhat ungrammatically, "You won't be satisfied until you have a white mayor and all the city council persons white for another 200 years."

Holley was particularly angry at the Virginia Populist Party, which played an important part in sending him back to private life.

Book Speaks Up for Arthur Rudolph

One of the most depressing episodes in U.S. history and one of the most egregious examples of America's pandering to minority hubris and vengeance was the shameful treatment dished out by the Department of Justice to Arthur Rudolph, the German-born American citizen whose brilliant engineering feats were vital to mankind's greatest feat -- the manned moon landing.

For his pains and his incomparable work, just as he was beginning to enjoy his well-deserved retirement in California, the Jewish inquisition, which pulls the principal wires in the Office of Special Investigations, clamped down and threatened him with deportation for "war crimes" unless he returned to West Germany of his own accord.

Unwilling in his old age to be put through the demoralizing meat grinder of media hatred and slander, Rudolph pulled up stakes and returned to West Germany, where his German citizenship was restored. He now lives quietly in a modest home in Hamburg.

Thomas Franklin, an American writer, has now published a book about Rudolph, based on months of research, three days interviewing Rudolph, and the active cooperation of Rudolph's daughter, Marianne. The result is a 350-page hardcover book entitled An American in Exile.

Some of the most interesting parts of the book record the WWII experiences of German scientists at Peenemünde in northern Germany, where the V-1 and V-2 missiles were developed and built. One ghastly RAF night bombing attack came close to killing Rudolph and his entire family. The purpose of the raid was to catch the scientists in their beds, and it was successful in the sense that many rocket experts and their wives and children -- altogether a thousand people working on the project -- were killed before they could make it to their shelters. The only damage to the Rudolphs came from an incendiary bomb that landed near the entrance of their bunker, causing Marianne's hair to catch on fire.

Rudolph and the surviving scientists were eventually forced to move their operation to an underground factory near Dora. It was there that he was supposed to have committed war crimes by overworking some prisoners of war. Allied intelligence services long ago cleared him of these charges. NASA gave him its highest medal for his invaluable input into the American space program.

But Jews, whose DNA is loaded with genes for vengeance, have little interest in the accomplishments of a great space engineer on behalf of a country he had come to love.

An American in Exile may be ordered for $18 postpaid from Christopher Kaylor Co., P.O. Box 737, Huntsville, AL 35804. (Note that only a small, relatively unknown firm had the courage to publish the book. The big publishers, who with their large promotional budgets would have given it a much more extensive sale, won't touch a manuscript that praises any person or thing Jews prefer to dispraise.)

Who's for Free Speech?

Who's for the First Amendment? Most often the person with something unpopular to advocate. Who's for curbing the First Amendment? Most often the person who wants to muzzle opinions he opposes. The honest First Amendment booster is the one who, like Voltaire, fights hardest for the airing of those ideas he most detests. Does the ADL fight for the right of someone to criticize Jews? Do the television networks fight for the right of an Al Campanis or a Jimmy the Greek to say what they want to say about Negroes?

There are a few honest First Amendment advocates left in this land -- members of the Minnesota Newspaper Foundation, for instance. They got together and sponsored a TV commercial that shows a lineup of wooden dolls. Each doll represents some shade of public opinion. One is dressed up in sheets and a hood -- a Ku Klux Klan doll.

Suddenly the sheeted doll is knocked over. As it falls, all the other dolls fall with it. The punchline is obvious. If you silence the KKK, you silence everyone else. Free speech is not selective. If one tongue is tied, all tongues are tied.

It's a nice political lesson and it's in line with the best elements of democracy and liberalism. The trouble is, the best elements of democracy and liberalism in this country have gone with the wind. All that is left are the worst elements -- personified by such political frauds as Senators Kennedy and Metzenbaum. The media, which should be championing free speech, are in the vanguard of those who try to stifle it.

Instead of apologizing and groveling, Jimmy the Greek and Campanis should sue their onetime employers for violating their civil rights. They would, of course, if they were Jews, Negroes or Hispanics. But they are only whites.

Extraordinary Marches

Hosea Williams has now led three marches into Forsyth County (GA). The first had some 200 marchers, the second 25,000. The latest one (in mid-January) was down again to 200 and was such a put-up job that even Atlanta Mayor Andy Young went on television to badmouth it.

Hosea, a professional con man, is apparently taking a leaf out of Jesse Jackson's book on extortion. Jesse threatens, demonstrates and boycotts (though it's usually unnecessary for him to go beyond the threat of the last-mentioned) until the targeted corporation surrenders and pays him off by hiring more blacks, establishing more black franchises or dealerships, putting more money in black banks and giving black ad agencies more advertising. Hosea is applying Jesse's tactics at the county government level. Because Forsyth has no blacks and because the last black skedaddled many decades ago after one of those Negro-on-white rapes, Hosea wants some Wiedergutmachung. Failing cash reparations, he wants the county to create a lot of jobs for blacks, despite Forsyth's black vacuum.

A committee of blacks and whites was formed to study Hosea's demands after the second march. It got nowhere. The whites refused to agree to any compensation for heirs of the long-departed Negroes. The blacks refused to compensate white businesses in Forsyth for the losses incurred because of the 25,000-strong, locust-like invasion. Blacks said very little substantial progress was made in convincing whites to set up a program to move Negroes back to Forsyth.

Since Hosea couldn't get his way by arbitration, he ordered the third march. He says he will march again and again and again until the people of Forsyth give in. If some of the biggest corporations (such as Coca-Cola) surrendered to Jesse Jackson, Hosea figures he won't have too much difficulty bringing Forsyth County to heel.

“Thy Kin Select, Thy Race Protect

Instauration somehow overlooked “The Gospel According to Sociobiology” by Douglas H. Boucher of McGill University, which appeared in Perspectives in Biology and Medicine (Aug. 1981). “Thanks be to E.O. Wilson,.” wrote Boucher in a credit, “for the idea of a ‘genetically accurate and hence completely fair code of ethics.’”

Picking up the narrative in the second paragraph, one reads:

But the dwellers of Academe became clamorous, and frictions did prevail, and great was the heat thereof. And the dwellers began to speak in many tongues, and strange were their words, each unto the other. Some spake in Anthropology, and some in Psychology, and some in Economics, and some in Sociology, and some in Music, and some in History, and some even in Literature. And the people of the Lord Gene spake in Biology, but none would heed them.

So the Lord spake unto the people of Biology, saying: “Unto these shall be given a New Synthesis, that shall be a mighty Synthesis, that shall reconcile all the peoples of Academe, the ones unto the others. And no longer shall they speak in Anthropology, nor in Psychology [etc.] but that all shall speak in Biology, every one. And their tongue shall be Biology no longer, but they shall be born again, and their words resynthesized, and their tongue shall be called SOCIOBIOLOGY. The people shall know their true natures, and they shall all behave, each according to his nature

The Ten Commandments begin:

I am the Lord thy Gene, which brought thee to life out of the slime of the ocean primeval.

Thou shalt have no other gods before me. Thou shalt not bow down to church, nor state, nor love, nor money, nor the needs of thy fellow creatures, but shall act only so as to Increase thy Fitness. For I the Lord thy Gene am a jealous god, visiting the maladaptiveness of the fathers upon the third and fourth generations of those that do not look out for their Fitness.

The Sermon on the Mount might have tickled Nietzsche:

And seeing the multitudes, he went up unto a mountain, and his graduate students came unto him. And he opened his mouth, and lectured, saying,

Blessed are the Strong in Will, for theirs is the alpha position, and the right to many mates.

Blessed are the Rich, for they shall inherit the goods, and survive well, and reproduce greatly.

(Daniel R. Vining Jr., a brilliant sociobiologist at the University of Pennsylvania, would demur at this point. His writings show that many of the otherwise most empirically minded people in the field become slack-jawed dogmatists here. Who says that the economically successful will also be biological successful? It's true for animals and for primitive man, but the history of Western civilization in its decadent phase shows a much stronger tendency in the dysgenic direction.)

The prophet Boucher concludes on this inspired note:

After this manner pray ye: Our Genotype, which art in Phenotype, Maximized be thy Fitness. Thy kin select, thy race protect, on earth as it is in theory. Give us this day our Parental Investment, and forgive us our Altruism, as we deceive those who are Altruistic to us. And lead us not into Maladaptiveness, but deliver us from Unfitness. For Thine is the Behavior, and the Selection, and the Reproduction, for ever and ever. Amen.

Rasputin

Are the aristocrats fascinating because they are forbidden to me? I am old, dark and deformed, yet I refuse to be deprived, I will not be banished from them. I ingratiate myself, almost against my will. The strategy is to seduce them without conspicuously courting them. I must be careful, my ill-considered comments seem to frighten them. But they always return again with their regal blue eyes. They hug their cowardly cats against their silk-brocaded breasts. They beam brightly with their big, clean Cro-Magnon teeth. Are they even faintly aware of the fantasies they inspire? Their proud-blooded way of carrying themselves is a constant provocation. Secretly, I screen them through my murky memory. Precious destinations, holy vessels, blessed northern islands.
