Bills in Congress are usually named for their sponsors. Why the "Brady Bill?" Did they think a Schumer or Metzenbaum Bill might hit too close to home?

174

One Majority character trait precludes organized action. That is the "isolated individual syndrome," which causes most white Americans to view themselves and others as isolated, atomized grains of sand. They can't imagine working together for a common goal. They don't see tribes, races or groups—only individuals. When they do belong to something, they try to get personal advantage over other members in one way or another. Women neglect or even abandon their children because they interfere with the endless "partying" they believe life should be. Many don't care if civilization collapses because "I'll be dead and gone by that time." Many don't care if we are ruled by an alien minority. "If they can get here, more power to them."

740

The real reason nothing changes is one we dare not speak about. Most Americans are mindless idiots. In a society where politicians are judged by whether they are "nice" or "mean" or smile a lot, the instant message is simply over everyone's head. If I could afford it, I'd move to Europe. This is a worldwide struggle. I and my family might have a better chance of survival in more politically astute surroundings.

Amid all the discussion of the Holocaust, why doesn't anybody mention Erhard Milch, Göring's half-Jewish chief of staff? Or the fact that Freud's family was allowed to leave Vienna? Or the fact that the Vienna Rothschilds were allowed to go to Switzerland? Warum denn?

204

Welfare for illegal aliens, increased immigration, multilingualism, gay marriage, abolition of capital punishment and bailouts for Bosnia, Haiti and Israel! Setting aside the question of right or wrong, shouldn't the American people decide these matters? Is it defensible that judges or "opinion makers" make these vital decisions?

302

Now and then on the back page of the newspaper a little article will appear about Israeli economic spying on the U.S. Woe betide the business whose secrets are stolen by the Jewish state! Who would care about their complaint?

915

Perhaps it's just fall and the strains of the September Song are growing louder. Whatever the reason, I find myself growing less interested in what becomes of my species in general and my race in particular. It takes a humongous ego on the part of man to consider what happens to this biological accident resting on an incredibly insignificant speck of mud and rock to be of the slightest importance. So because of overpopulation and dysgenics we cease to exist. So what?

323

It's said that Saudi Arabia may soon go the way of the Shah's Iran. In both cases the leaders were weakened by their ties to Israel's great benefactor, the U.S. Too bad our foreign policy cannot serve our interests!

Of course we mustn't call it a conspiracy, but it does seem a bit strange that

Jewish sociologists and their liberal friends still maintain that America's strength lies in its genetic/cultural diversity. If diversity is so beneficial, why is it strictly outlawed in Israel? One would think that these intellectuals who are so enthusiastically promoting diversity in this country could see what it has done to Bosnia, South Africa, Ireland, the U.S. and many other countries.

A thesis must not be rejected a priori because it is biased. The bias may be justified by the facts, but it must be measured against the facts. More than one book must always be consulted. No book contains all the facts. Arguments must be addressed before they can be confirmed or refuted. That which is not read by an open mind can never be evaluated. Anyone can be wrong, but a mind which will not admit the possibility of error will never learn.

□ The Jew is anxious to prove that he is clever. The only way to beat him in a debate is to hold him to a very specific point and not let him run all over the court to score a goal while you are off guard. □ Lately I've been reading a lot about gay marriage and other gay rights. The gist is that it is at least as good to be homosexual as heterosexual. If homos can marry, why should anyone object to polygamy, incest or pedophilia? Supporters of the queer lifestyle believe that school children should be taught about it and homos should come to class to discuss their views. There are already textbooks for use even by young children, such as Heather Has Two Mommies or Billy's Daddy Belongs to Gay Pride. There should also be homosexual clubs in school and counseling for children who may wonder which lifestyle suits them best. Then, too, there should be punishment for children insensitive to homos, just as would be the case were they insensitive about race or religion. My question: How do you feel about your children or grandchildren being educated in this environment?

Deep Politics

Understanding the U.S. government's policy in the Middle East is a difficult task. Historical and geopolitical complexities aside, much of the difficulty stems from the failure of our leaders and our commentators to communicate what is going on over there, let alone explain it.

Sure, there are those endless talking television faces—first among them Secretary of State Warren Christopher, his ageless woodsprite's wizened visage mouthing endlessly the incantatory words, "the peace process, the peace process." By these gnomic recitations, however, Christopher and his policy gnomes stake out no subterranean treasure; they mean only to denote all that has happened and is happening in the troubled realms of Araby since the U.S. taxpayers began financing the costly separate peace between Egypt and Israel in 1979.

As if a weatherman, storm wind blowing in his face, as a hurricane beats up the coast, could only bleat, "The weather! The weather!"

It is the omnipresence of that sort of analysis that makes a January essay in the N.Y. Times such a stimulating read. Writing in the house daily of what Harvard historian Ernest May has called the "foreign policy public" (his diplomatic way of saying that only a small minority of the population has an interest in America's external affairs, not to mention the knowledge to understand them), Lind and Heilbrunn put a rare reportorial spin on America's recent role in Bosnia, its current policy in the Persian Gulf and the thrust of its entire strategy in the Near and Middle East. By their reading—or what these two New Republic editors care to convey of it—of America's recent public adventures and private arrangements from Bosnia to the Persian Gulf, the U.S. has embarked once more on the course of empire.

According to these eggheads, the first American empire, acquired in the aftermath of the Spanish-American War, expired after 1945. The second, the Cold War quilt of allies and protectorates, was superseded by the collapse of Soviet communism. Now is the time, Lind and Heilbrunn enjoin us—their article presumes to prescribe as it describes—to leave our European friends to their own devices and back away from the inviting allures and looming menaces of East Asia. For a brave new destiny beckons from the Levant, we are informed: "The regions once ruled by the Ottoman Turks show signs of becoming the heart of a Third American Empire."

Enlivened by the heralding of this heartwarming news, the authors, now dancing like Hasidim in holy transport, now whirling like dervishes, clasp Turkey and Bosnia, the Saudis, Kuwaitis and Gulf sheikdoms, in joyous embrace.

America's priciest foreign paramour, generally caressed in the pages of the Times and the New Republic with blandishments worthy of the "Song of Solomon," here merits coyer regard: "The increasing importance that the United States attaches to the region can also be detected in our new degree of intimacy with Israel." With rather more frankness (and doubtless an eye to the rising electoral strength of the radical "Islamists"), Heilbrunn and Lind acknowledge that the Third Empire will dispense all the cantankerous cant about spreading "self-determination" and "democracy."

In line with today's canons of accepted commentary on American foreign policy, Lind and Heilbrunn refrain from naming any benefit that the grand new imperium might bring to the people who have to pay for it.

While we of the American Nation might fume, froth and fret over the authors' neglect of the Majority's weal and their less than forthright acknowledgement of the Zionist lobby's overarching influence over U.S. policy, nonetheless we owe them thanks for their small measure of candor. (Did we really expect Lind and Heilbrunn to state the obvious, that the Israeli entanglement has rendered the conduct of our Mideast diplomacy as effective as an alligator's essaying a Rachmaninoff concerto on a grand piano?)

It remains only to weigh the implications. As the authors state forthrightly, the empire they welcome means that the stated American policy of ensuring no "outside" domination of the Gulf oil is to be transformed into American domination of that vital resource—a domination, Lind and Heilbrunn clearly imply, aimed not so much at the fly-specked sheikdoms and transitory tyrants of the area, but at our erstwhile allies in East Asia and the white heartland of Europe.

The authors' proclamation of the Third American Empire coincides with and effectively acknowledges the widening of our circle of enemies to encompass the larger Islamic world, a reservoir of ill will encompassing potentially a billion enemies from the South Seas to the Atlas Mountains and, thanks to our misguided immigration policies, to our very doorstep.

If Lind and Heilbrunn are correct, then the U.S.—including the uncomprehending majority of the American Majority—has at length acquired a foreign policy to match the domestic policy the imposition of which it has suffered—nolens volens—over the past several decades: in theory, contemptuous of the white race and its European heritage; in practice, actively hostile.

What if our policymakers are wrong and have decreed no secret empire and intend no oily blackmail of the world's productive peoples?

Little in the policy equation changes. There will be more talk of "democracy," of course, but this will mean an allegiance to Hollywood's exports and a willingness to "consume" high-tech products from Silicon Valley and its analogues in Israel, rather than a "formalistic adherence" to the "one man, one vote" slogan that has hardly proved its validity in sub-Saharan Africa.

Our "bipartisan" leadership, emboldened by our mercenary armed forces, will continue forays against the motley, but ever widening array, of our and Zion's enemies. "Democracy" will be misused to "destabilize" Uncle Sam's friends and clients among the sheiks and emirs, thereby sowing further disruption and spurring the evacuation of new streams of refugees from America's quondam clients. A few dispirited flotsam, joined by their fellows pouring into America by other paths, will doubtless despise the Great Satan, connive at new acts of domestic terror, which will prove conveniently traceable to our Mid-east enemy of the month, and incense the citizenry at large, consequently enabling a new cycle.

An endless loop, a closed circle, an Eternal Present, the 1984 of Orwell, the "perpetual war for perpetual peace" foreseen by Charles Beard, in which, however, the American Majority, historyless as fellahin, slouches uncomprehendingly not toward Bethlehem or Gomorrah, but toward its appointment in Samarra, its own racial "end of history."

Yes, we do have a foreign policy. It so happens, however, it's not ours.

MORIARTY

Non-Debates About Non-Issues

In the old days before truth in politics became totally outmoded, a debate consisted of two rivals for public office standing up, facing each other and having at it. Debates these days, such as the travesties that occurred in Hartford and San Diego between Billy the Cad and the Funeral Director, consist of two totally unprincipled professional pols answering soft questions tossed at them by a liberal interlocutor or carefully selected third parties. Boring sleep-inducing spectacles, to say the least, especially since the answers from the two human VCRs were restricted largely to numbing numbers—growth rates, tax raises or cuts, budget deficits, Medicare and Social Security shortfalls, and other financial abracadabra—and were repeated two, three and four times. Hardly a word about open-door immigration which is the greatest threat to Majority survival. Not a syllable about the racial murders that are thinning Majority ranks at the rate of some 1,500 a year. A few non sequiturs from Clinton in support of the affirmative action programs which have cost tens or hundreds of thousands of hard-working Majority members their jobs, their promotions and their family's economic security and peace of mind.

That the best this once great country can do is throw up two creatures like Dole and Clinton to vie for the presidency is disheartening, if not dismaying. There's only one thing to be said for Dole, whose campaign was a monumental exercise in stupidity and futility. If he had won the presidency, he would not have appointed, as Clinton did, a Jew to be head of the CIA, Jews to run the Treasury, Commerce and Labor Depts., a Jewess as UN Ambassador and two Jews to push minority causes in the Supreme Court.

Old George Wallace to the contrary, who was shot and permanently paralyzed for his dissent from mainstream politics, there is more than a dime's worth of difference between the candidates. Call it a quarter's worth. The difference is that the minority side of the American racial conflict gets another boost from the reelection of Clinton, the Nordic sellout. If Dole, the barely Nordic pushover, had moved into the White House, the Majority side would have received a slight push, especially in the battlefield of racial preferences. Now, with Clinton victorious, the attack on antiwhite discrimination will once again be blunted, though we must all take some heart from what is happening in California. The anti-immigration proposition passed but was sabotaged by a Jewish lady judge. Will the same fate await the anti-affirmative action initiative? (Since the above words were written before November 5, the writer was forced to base his electoral assumptions on the numbers provided by the obnoxious polls.)

The one positive note to the non-debates and the election is that their downright emptiness and negativism will help speed Der Tag, the day when the Majority is finally forced to put up or shut up, the day the U.S. begins to recapture its lost nationhood or becomes once and for all a New World version of blackest Africa.

If the latter occurs—and it seems the likelier outcome—it's better for the country to go down all at once than to sink slowly into the sump of total deracination. Then at least the remnants of human evolution's most advanced genes, before they rot away, may somehow reassemble and reconnect and once more start the often interrupted march to the higher than man. This, of course, is only a long-shot prayer. But it's all we've got. Otherwise the death of the United States will be profitless—no lessons learned, no mistakes rectified, no reincarnation.

The Fate of Brooklyn-Born Lord Haw Haw

The 1946 hanging of William Joyce is a good example of the depths to which WWII victors sank in order to punish those who sided with Germany. Although not a British citizen, Joyce was convicted of high treason for his pro-Nazi radio broadcasts.

Evidence presented at Joyce's trial showed that his father, Michael, was born in 1869 in Ireland and emigrated to the U.S. in 1888. On October 25, 1894, he became a naturalized American citizen. William's mother, Gertrude Emily Brooks, who was born in England, moved to the U.S. and married Michael at the All Saints Church in New York City on May 2, 1905. When Mrs. Joyce visited England in 1917, she was required to register as an alien in the land of her birth.

William Joyce was born April 24, 1906, at 1377 Herkimen St., Brooklyn, New York. In accordance with U.S. law he automatically became an American citizen.

In 1909 the Joyce family moved to Ireland, residing initially at County Mayor, later at Galway. In 1921 the Joyces moved to London. William, having passed the necessary exams, took up the study of science at Battersea Polytechnic in 1922. The following year he switched to English literature and history at Birkbeck College, graduating in 1927.

From 1923 to 1925, Joyce was a member of the British Fascists, an organization whose activities were largely directed against communism. During a street encounter between the Browns and the Reds, Joyce was slashed in the face with a razor, which left him scarred for life.

In 1928 Joyce signed up for a one-year postgraduate program in philology. From 1929 to 1930 he was a spokesman for the Conservative Party. In 1931-33 he studied psychology at King's College in London. He then joined Sir Oswald Mosley's British Union of Fascists. In December 1934, he was charged along with Mosley and others with riotous assembly at Worthing. The defendants were all acquitted.

In 1937, Joyce formed his own group, the National Socialist League. In September of that year he wrote National Socialism Now and authored many articles and pamphlets on the same theme. He disbanded the organization shortly before he moved to Germany in 1939. While a member of the League he was twice charged with assault. Both times the charges were dismissed.

Several years earlier, on July 4, 1933, Joyce had applied for a British passport, falsely claiming he was a British subject, "born at Rutledge Terrace, Galway, Ireland." He received his passport, which was renewed several times, the last time on August 24, 1939. Britain and France declared war on Germany ten days later.

On August 27, 1939, seven days before the official outbreak of war, Joyce and his second wife, Margaret Caines White, moved to Germany. Between September 18, 1939, and April 30, 1945, he regularly broadcast in English for the German Broadcasting Service from stations located in Hamburg and Bremen. In 1940 he wrote and published in German Twilight Over Europe. Some 100,000 copies in German and English editions were sold on the continent.

In September 1940, Joyce was granted German nationality. On April 12, 1941, he was issued a German military passport and appointed chief English commentator on German Radio a year later. On September 1, 1944, the Kriegsverdienstkreuz First Class (a civilian award) was conferred on him by Adolf Hitler.

"This is Jairmancy calling" was the way Joyce would begin his broadcasts. There were few in Britain with access to a radio who did not tune in occasionally, if not regularly, during the war to Joyce's programs, which were directed primarily at Brits dissatisfied with conditions at home.

William Joyce doing his bit for Germany

Joyce's voice has been described by a British detractor as "irritating," "a hybrid between a Yankee twang and an Irish brogue." When he began broadcasting from Germany, British authorities were concerned about the effects on public morale. They were pleased when a journalist, Jonah Barrington of the London Daily Express, christened Joyce, "Lord Haw Haw." The name stuck.

On May 28, 1945, Joyce encountered two British officers near Flensburg on the Danish frontier. One officer shot at Joyce, wounding him in the leg. Taken captive, he was brought to England on June 16. Two days later he was charged with high treason.

On September 17, Joyce was arraigned and entered a “not guilty” plea. He was charged with three specific acts. The first count alleged that, as being a person owing allegiance to the King, he had adhered to the King’s enemies by broadcasting anti-British propaganda between September 18, 1939, and May 29, 1945. The second count alleged that, as being a person owing allegiance to the King, he adhered to the King’s enemies by purporting to become a naturalized German. During the trial these two counts were amended by substituting “being a British subject owing allegiance” for “being a person owing allegiance,” thereby indicating the prosecution would make a point of his British nationality. The evidence of Joyce’s American nationality was “really overwhelming,” presiding Justice Tucker noted. He directed the jury to return a “not guilty” verdict on the two charges.

The third count alleged that Joyce, being a person owing allegiance to the King, adhered to the King’s enemies elsewhere than within the realm by broadcasting between September 18, 1939, and July 2, 1940. The latter date marked the expiration of Joyce’s British passport. Because he had a British passport, even though it was not used to illegally enter or leave Germany, he had committed high treason by favorably comparing Germany to Britain.

Under the British treason act, testimony of at least two witnesses was required, either both to the same overt act or one witness to one overt act and a second witness to another overt act. During the trial only one witness connected Joyce directly with the broadcasts. There was no testimony that the broadcasts in any way harmed Britain.

Justice Tucker ruled as a matter of law that Joyce owed an allegiance to the British Crown because of the issuance of the passport, a legal determination never previously taken in British law. The judge left to the jury’s decision the question of whether Joyce had “adhered” to the King’s enemies without any instruction as to the meaning of the term.

On September 19, Joyce was convicted on this count and immediately sentenced to death. On September 27, Joyce appealed his conviction to the Court of Criminal Appeals, which dismissed it without opinion on November 7. An appeal was then taken to the House of Lords, which also dismissed it without opinion on December 18.

On January 3, 1946, William Joyce was hanged at Wandsworth Prison. A crowd of 300 persons, including some children, gathered outside the prison. According to newspaper accounts, police had to control the unruly mob.

EDWARD KERLING

We Must Separate

It is clear to any thinking person that the primary object of the Majority movement in this country must be to encourage the emerging racial polarization and the emergence of a strong Majority movement. This is not to say that we feel good about the violence and conflict which will be the inevitable byproduct of the realignment of the country along racial lines. On the contrary, we greatly regret the necessity for it. But necessity it is, and we must steel ourselves to do what must be done. We are not fighting so much for ourselves as for generations unborn. We will have to bear the burdens, the sacrifices, and the guilt so that our grandchildren can once more live in a world they can call their own.

The Communists advanced a similar justification for the crimes they committed and some will say that we are doing exactly the same thing. Our reply to that is simple. What the Communists did in the name of their dream was a crime because their dream was false and based on a wicked and utterly unscientific theory of humanity. Our dream is not false and it is solidly grounded in scientific fact, something that is becoming more apparent with every passing day, much to the discomfort of the multiracial, multicultural, integrationist crowd.

The fact of the matter is that race is the determining factor in human development and society, not economics. Anybody with common sense and a basic grasp of genetics and evolution can easily understand that. Man is a social animal and uncounted generations were selected for the traits that are most important for human survival. Loyalty to one’s own tribe ranks very high on that list. The family, the clan, the tribe, the nation and, finally, the race, are our destiny. Some races developed differently than others for very understandable reasons. Some are able to build and live in a socially and technologically advanced world. Some are not, and their unneeded presence has a tremendously destructive effect on their more advanced hosts. Our race, the white race, is clearly the race most adapted to the modern world and to creating and sustaining a livable, advanced civilization. Some branches of the white race are better suited to some tasks than others. Each has different gifts. It seems fairly obvious that Northern Europeans have a number of unique gifts which, if they are shared to a certain extent by most whites, appear in concentrated form in only a few.

Other races, most important among them the Negro race, just do not have the mental or emotional equipment to live side by side with whites. Every experiment to disprove this has been a dreadful failure. What this means for the United States is clear:

We Must Separate.

A Third Worlder's Letter Home

Dear Gobind, Budram, Ravinder, Sajeed, Rajwar, Sudesh, Jasbir, Jaspal, Halvinder, Karnail, Gukkal, Darshan, Balwinder (27 more names follow).

Life in America exceeds all expectations. I'm sure you'll agree with me after you arrive.

Nobody uses manure to cook food. They cook on special metal plates. Turn a switch and there's a clean blue flame. No smoke! No smell!

Though there's plenty of food, I don't know where they grow it. They have special places where they sell food called supermarkets. No one tends them. You take what you want and go to the front and pay. I know you don't believe me and think I'm crazy. But it's true! We often take things, but it's not stealing. I would call it "sharing."

They even have special food for dogs and cats! Probably a hundred different kinds. It doesn't go bad even after a year. They also have cookies for dogs! Animals are doused with special powder to kill fleas. We bought some to use on our clothes. You no doubt think I've lost my mind. But wait till you get here! You'll see.

People live in houses with several levels, some very high, more than ten—almost 25 downtown! We have a place in one of these houses, on the fifth floor. I know you're thinking nobody wants to live on the upper floors because of the long walk! But there is a machine that lifts you right to your floor. Just push a button and off it goes, and it never misses! At first we rode in those machines just for fun, until the building supervisor told us not to.

We live with a family and pay them, and they pay the landlord. One other family also lives there, plus a few others who come to sleep once in a while. The building supervisor tried to check on the number of people, but we didn't let him in. He said, "It looks like 12 people live here." We said there were only three guests who couldn't go home the previous night because the subway had closed. We just cannot get used to the wasteful ways of the white man. You can live two dozen in the place where just three or four of them live and it will still be better than home. Each place in the tall buildings is called an apartment and has a special room with no wall to the street, so that you could come out and look down. It's called a balcony—very convenient when you sweep. You just sweep the dirt onto the balcony and off the edge.

The white man does not like us. As soon as we move into a building, they move out. I hope they all move out so there will be more places for our people. In any case, we are here not because of their mercy, but by invitation of their government.

They voted for that government, which is not run by some self-appointed strongman, but by elected representatives. Now the whites have to accept the laws of their legitimate government. Though they do not like us, they never say anything. Many times white people see us eating in supermarkets. They make a face showing how much they disapprove. You try to eat at our market at home, the merchants will kill you! They would grab a stick and smash you over the head. You know that. Here you can do anything you want.

All schoolchildren are driven to and from school in buses. Very convenient, but somehow those who live in my neighborhood are being driven far away. Those from far away are being driven here! Such a waste.

So far I have not seen a single outhouse. They have special rooms for that, right where people live! It's not a hole, but a white thing, which looks like a big cup. It has a pipe that is apparently connected to some big hole below. At first we thought you had to climb up and use the tank above the cup. But the landlord explained there was a different method. They flush those things with water. My heart used to bleed every time I had to do it, but I am getting used to it. At first we were flushing only once a day, but the landlord told us we had to do it every time we used it. I don't know if I will ever get used to it! I don't even know where they get this water. At first I thought they collect it from rain, but the water flows in pipes right in your apartment. No communal wells! You can also have hot water by turning a special knob. The cold is on one side and the hot is on the other. I have not memorized it yet. I always have to feel it first.

When they do inoculations in their schools they use a new syringe every time. I asked them why not just use one syringe for four or five children, but they said they only use one syringe per child.

When our seven children have lunch, right there, in school, they give them milk or juice in individual paper packets—brightly colored, with pictures and words. And those packets do not leak! They are probably made of a waxed paper. Again it looks like waste. Why not just have a lady with a ladle and let her dispense the milk out of a small barrel as the children come one after another? Everybody throws these beautiful packets out. I bring them home. They are so pretty! Soon I will send you a whole box so that you can sell them and come over here faster.

Things like cheese and cookies are also packaged. Even if it's just one ounce, it is still individually packaged. I just cannot believe how wasteful it all is!

Everybody here owns a special big white machine that makes cold. Those have a special name but since you would not be able to remember it. I will not be wasting time writing it.

It could be very hot in the room, yet inside that machine it is freezing cold. But you have to keep in mind that its door has to be closed at all times or the cold will go out. I cannot imagine how it is possible to make cold! I thought you can only make heat, just burn something, but here they also know how to make cold.

The white thing is very convenient in which to keep perishables—meat, milk, fish. But we still go to buy meat every day. I just cannot understand why anyone would want to stock up with meat several days ahead. I would rather be going to those magnificent supermarkets five times a day. You can eat all you want, even though, of course, we are making sure that nobody sees us. We put out lookouts all around. This white man is very trusting. Good for him! But in our hearts we laugh at his naiveté!

Nobody here eats fruits from wild trees in the parks. When we see someone around those trees, it is likely to be people like us. Considering how easy it is to eat in supermarkets, I am sure they do it just for fun.

Back to those magnificent cooling machines. When we cook a big casserole, we always put it inside that machine and the dinner gets cool faster. Only somehow there is plenty of steam and water dripping from everywhere as we take that casserole out.

I heard some people even use such machines to keep their homes cool in hot weather. They are so rich they buy two, one for food, and the other one for keeping the whole place cool.

I still cannot get used to the fact that food is no problem here. You would not believe it, but many people even use special foods or drinks to stimulate appetite. They call them appetizers. There are special medicines that help slow down the digestive process. Some who are afraid to gain weight make themselves throw up after they eat. Many people eat special foods that are supposed to make them slim. Those foods even have a special name—“diets.”

Women here shave their legs and armpits! There are special shavers for that! They even have women in the army and navy, but I don't know if they shave.

Women here do special surgery to remove fat deposits from their bodies. They also depend on surgery to change their faces and make themselves more attractive. The operations cost fortunes. In our country you would have to know a Prime Minister personally to afford them.

Parents here give their children cars for graduation! The same kind our ministers drive! Here even the old people drive!

Parents here do not live with their grown-up children. Grandparents also live separately.

Police here call you “Sir,” even if they catch you doing something illegal.

They even have zoos and amusement parks. You can also rent an animal! Yes, I could not believe it myself till I looked in what they call the “Yellow Pages” in a telephone book. The telephone is a gadget that allows you to talk with others even over a very long distance. Though the medical treatment here costs money, they will do it for free if you cannot pay. Half the women from the country to the South, which is called Mexico, give birth in the U.S. Not only do they not pay, their children become citizens. After that they receive money from the U.S. government till the end of their lives. For not doing any work, mind you!

Yes, I know you do not believe me. You probably think I am insane, but wait till you get here!

In Canada, the country to the north, you do not have to pay anything for medical care!

Most ridiculous, whites even have toilet paper and soap in public toilets! We were laughing our heads off when we first saw it. Each of us took a roll home. But the soap is liquid, so we bring jars and pump in as much as we want.

We also take the light bulbs from the hallway when ours burn out and replace them with the burned out ones. The bulbs are not expensive, but it is still better to take them for free than to pay for them.

They even have animal hospitals! Yes, I know what you think! I think about this myself. This is the very thing that baffles me about the white man! Seemingly such a high level of intelligence, an ability to create the most magnificent machines, but often he does things so stupid that a child in our village would not do them! Isn't it clear to whites that it is cheaper to get a new cat than to treat the one you have? It really makes me feel as if I am watching something falling not down but up!

On the other hand, the animals that are of pure breed, “with papers,” cost plenty of money. Three dogs of a pure breed may well cost more than a one-way plane ticket home. I really don't understand that. I would rather take a puppy from a pound and use the money for something more important.

Here people even do surgery to a dog! Yes, they often perform an operation to straighten out a dog's joint! For the cost of one such operation you could buy three new dogs with papers! And you can even have a dentist for a dog! Police dogs here have regular dental appointments. They even have cemeteries for dogs and cats!

In libraries here you can not only get books, but also records, audio tapes and also special tapes that have images on them. Yes, whites even know how to do this!

When people go on vacations to an ocean resort many do not swim in the ocean but in special pools. The white man is totally incomprehensible! Why pay a fortune to fly to ocean resorts to swim in a pool?

The liquor stores here have up to 100 different brands of liquors and wines. Yet I seldom see a drunk man. Only those who have no homes.

Every house has special devices that water their grass. They often turn them on even when rain is predicted!

I really feel I am in a lunatic asylum. So many things just do not connect according to my logic. But let us hope the white man will forever remain so trusting and naive!

The Nation-State Concept

In his monthly Mythbusters newsletter (P.O. Box 3639, Gaithersburg, MD 20885-3639), Foster Morrison develops the notion of the nation-state as a launching pad for examining the impact that minorities have on our culture. He shows how the nation-state idea encapsulates the common language, history, culture and race, the prime elements of our social order. Taking a cue from Morrison, I have found that the nation-state concept has a special value when used in conversations with conventional thinkers. It avoids triggering what might be called the liberal response meter built into everyone exposed to modern education, which Morrison rightly dismisses as little more than base propaganda. This response meter measures the degree of racial intolerance in a speaker's words and has the desired effect of frustrating any and all serious discussion of Big Issues by labeling the offending party a "bigot." ("He's a bigot!" That's it. No further need for continuing the discussion.) By cloaking the issue in the umbrella concept of the nation-state, however, the conversation often proceeds without endless searching questions and endless qualifying answers.

A recent discussion of this type held with a truly radical liberal acquaintance on the matter of race went round and round on how minorityism has hurt this nation. My liberal friend argued that the statistically numerical limit of a minority (49%) may be the point for blowing the whistle on the current pace of immigration. I responded by noting that minorities of only a fraction of that percentage have had an enormous impact on the nation-state's identity. I suggested that the problem with America is that its people don't properly appreciate the nation-state idea. If and when they do, the damage done by Third World immigration will become apparent. My friend responded by asking what could be done with the tens of millions of immigrants already here? I replied that once the danger becomes apparent, the dilemma of what to do would be quickly resolved. Just get them out of the country.

In thinking about who is primarily responsible for the enormous swamping of dark-skinned foreigners on our shores over the last decades, one immediately comes to the familiar list of names affixed to the implementing legislation: Hubert Humphrey and Lyndon Johnson, to name the two most important pols. The people who benefited the most were Wall Streeters and those whose holdings in industry and agriculture appreciate from the stagnation of labor wage scales caused by the inundation of so many foreigners. Years ago, Eastern and Southern Europeans were brought to these shores by the boatloads by the same monied interests of Wall Street for exactly the same purpose of driving down the labor wage scales in the great epoch of industrialization. In the hundred years prior to WWI, 34 million immigrants arrived, most of them from Central and Southern European states where industrialization hadn't yet flourished. Their impact on home-grown labor was so devastating it destroyed the entire nascent craft union movement, forcing millions in a westward search for new opportunities.

Open immigration was bitterly fought by American labor in those days—as it turned out, unsuccessfully. The revival of the Ku Klux Klan in the early 1920s took on a tone of racism and anti-Catholicism, but its central focus was to end immigration entirely. American labor wanted to participate more equitably in the division of economic spoils. Post-WWI America was enjoying low labor costs, declining prices and huge capital profits, returns sometimes exceeding 30% per year. Fortunes were made for the lucky few while labor's exploitation became nearly complete. (What isn't generally recalled is how so many of the immigrant peasants actually went back to Europe disgusted with the labor conditions that blasted the American dream.)

Much the same sequence of events is taking place in America today. Organized labor, weakened by the endless supply of non-unionized workers from abroad, suffers declining wage rates. The collusion of both political parties in the matter of trade treaties which allow importation of goods produced abroad at slave wages is disastrous. We are urged to ignore the problems of labor because our blue-collar brothers don't deserve better. They are stupid, unclever and lazy. We would do better by supporting the interests of capital.

Sadly, such simplistic propaganda flatters too many simple minds. As in the 1920s, such conditions cannot go on forever. Ultimately, there will be a reckoning when aggregate supply finally exceeds aggregate demand. In the booming 20s, that day of reckoning arrived on October 24, 1929, when the boom went boom. The entire list of 1,700 stocks fell in value an aggregate of 80% as the nation was thrown into the greatest economic depression ever known. Twenty million unemployed, 50% unemployment common in the larger cities. Hundreds of thousands of families were living in culverts, cardboard boxes and shantytowns where no police dared to stray. The word pelagrosa became part of the West Virginia vocabulary.

Could such times return? With a million or so Mexicans walking across our border every year, with more and more white men and women losing their jobs, with the trade imbalance getting worse than ever, the times very well could. Pat Buchanan may be the only national politician who dares say what the rest of us think. But Pat doesn't come to the table with clean hands, having spent an entire political lifetime in the cockpit of Establishmentarian affairs working for the very interests which benefit the most by open Third World immigration and by trade laws which fail to protect American goods. On the Democratic side Billy Boy has little interest in the welfare of labor as a whole, but quite a bit of interest in homosexual labor and black labor, which have the requisite sizzle.

As for labor organizers and bosses, their intellectual arteries are clogged with political cholesterol embodied in a hundred Irish and Jewish apparatchik families in control of the AFL-CIO International. In these groups, it's strictly status quo, patronage, payoff and a watermelon slice of pro forma liberal doctrine, the latter thanks to the well-known Jewish penchant for race-mixing, which precludes any discussion of white labor being hurt by brown immigrants.

Jewish leaders insist, it should be recalled, that the AFL-CIO buy millions of dollars of worthless Israel bonds annually. The Irish mafia in the AFL-CIO International doesn't care about such arcane matters as labor economics or political philosophy. But Morrison's idea of the nation-state notion is so beguilingly simple that even an Irish pol, comfortably burping his way back to the office in the back seat of his Cadillac after another expense-account session at the Four Seasons, might toss the idea, and what 110 million Mexicans mean to the idea, over in his sweaty noggin at least once or twice.

Will Negroes ever face up to reality?

Observations on Self-Deception

It has happened to me. I am sure it has happened to you. You are with a group of people, perhaps at work or at a party. All are ostensibly educated, mature people. One or more of the persons present is a Negro. The level of the conversation, if not brilliant, is at least serious. Out of nowhere, one of the Negroes throws out something that hits everybody else in the stomach like a sandbag.

It could be anything. Something obscene. Something unutterably stupid. Something that indicates that the speaker is living on another planet. The reaction of the Majority listeners is by now routine. First, there is a slight blanching of the face, a nervous sound at the back of the throat, averted eyes. The boldest among them, including closet Instaurationists, will merely ignore the comment, as if it never happened, and grip their drinks more tightly. The sentimentalists are more worried about hurting somebody's feelings and will nod at the speaker, a curious, concerned look in their eyes. "Uh-huh, um, of course, quite, well, yes!"

The liberals in the group will respond to the comment as if nothing out of the ordinary has happened. "You know, I had no idea it was a black man who began the study of organic chemistry!" "Of course, everybody knows that Thomas Edison was really a black from Haiti." "Yes, I think we can all agree that the death penalty should be imposed on anybody who lacks zeal for mandatory affirmative action." "No, I don't think white women would object to being sold at auction to members of the Crips and Bloods." "Actually, African folk medicine is probably much more effective than those out-dated Western concepts. If I have a brain tumor I am going to treat it with ragweed extract and the dust of ground goat glands."

The single most damaging element of our society is a complete lack of honesty and the moral courage to tell the simple truth when race or ethnicity is involved. Most Americans by now are so anesthetized by the constant drumbeat of Jewish and minority-inspired bushwa that they scarcely know what is true and what is not. It would never enter their heads to insist that the truth be spoken and that the lie and the ridiculous be challenged.

Take the kind of incident which I have described above. Had a Majority member made an outlandish statement, he would be banished from decent company or simply thought mad. Yet we allow Negroes to spout any kind of bizarre rubbish without batting an eyelash—in exactly the same way we ignore Negro incompetence at the workplace, as if it will just go away if we pretend it doesn't exist. An observer from Mars would conclude that we are all crazy.

I once had the opportunity to speak to a Chinese gentleman who had been one of the unfortunate victims of Mao's Cultural Revolution. This man, an educated, sensitive and decent person from an upper-class Chinese family had been dragged off by the Red Guards, presumably because he held a high government post and had foreign books in his library. He spent three years on a turnip farm, the better to understand the masses.

Work began at four in the morning. Breakfast was a bowl of gruel and cold water followed by more work until nightfall, when some noodles and withered vegetables might be served. All day, without ceasing, they sang. And sang. And sang. They sang about Mao, about communism, about "class enemies." My Chinese friend said that he almost lost his mind.

I asked him if the Red Guards who organized all of this understood what they were doing. "Oh, sure, they understood. They didn't buy it any more than we did. But they had to play the game. The peasants were horrified. They helped us because they knew we would die if we had to do all the heavy labor ourselves. And, of course, you can imagine what we thought of all this."

His description of his experience was interesting. "It was like being a sane person locked in an insane asylum. Nobody was really crazy, not the guards nor the patients, but everybody had to pretend to be crazy." The American Majority has been pretending to be crazy since at least 1954. The Negroes, on the other hand, really are crazy—or so lacking in what we see as normal intelligence that they might as well be.

I have often wondered if these Negroes are playing games or if they really are so completely deficient in gray matter. I have reluctantly concluded that the great majority have the minds of six-year-old children. I know for a fact that a certain small percentage of them, usually mulattos, are well aware of the mental condition of their "brothers." It is these mulattos who most fiercely insist on whites treating all Negroes as their absolute intellectual and social equals. They know only too well that if the Majority ever recovers its ability to call a spade a spade, they will be herded back into the corral with the others. I can think of no worse fate than to be a relatively intelligent, aware, introspective black man and to be trapped forever in a world of Negroes. Unless, of course, you are a white man trapped in a world of Negroes.

I have a son who is six. He is a bright, cheerful little guy, somewhat reserved and withdrawn, but already showing signs of a leaning towards math. The other day he told me, matter of factly, that he had had a conversation with Batman and Robin. You expect this kind of thing in a child, not in a hulking Negro squeezed into an expensive Italian suit.

The most amazing aspect of all this is that the great majority of Negroes, the cretinous Negroes, go through life blissfully unaware of the truth. They actually believe the slop that has been ladled out to them by the affirmative action crowd. We have 30 million Negroes running around who are, for the most part, utterly unfit to participate as members of an advanced industrial society. Yet all but a small fraction are convinced that they are gifted, bright, talented people, a boon to America. No wonder they are all walking around in a rage. In their entire lives not one soul has ever sat them down and explained to them the world as it really is.

I have read in various journals that Negroes have a much higher self-image than their abilities or performance would seem to justify, a self-image superior to that of the typical Majority member. I have pondered this and wonder if it has some evolutionary significance. I have decided that it does. The average Majority member has the brains to conduct an honest self-assessment. The average Negro does not. Living in a world where show is more important than substance, the Negro is obsessed with being something that he isn't. Majority members have not had that luxury.

If you live in a tropical land, where food is easily obtained and the weather is mild, you can fool yourself into believing a great many things, especially if you aren't too smart to begin with. If, on the other hand, you live in Norway and fool yourself into thinking that you will be able to go out and pick apples in the middle of January, you will not be around for many winters. We call it a reality check. The blacks in our country haven't had one for years.

I vividly remember an incident that occurred some years ago. After getting out of the military and going to graduate school, I found myself temporarily "between positions." Being an industrious sort and having nothing better to do, I indulged my love of cooking by working for a short time as a cook in a nice restaurant. One of the kitchen helpers was an 18-year-old Negro. He was a sassy, arrogant young buck, but I got along with him.

One day we got to talking about our backgrounds. I explained that I was a former military officer, a graduate of a respected university, and that I had been hired by a well-known company, but was marking time until the day came for me to report to work. I mentioned that I had done quite a bit of foreign traveling. I wasn't bragging or making anything up. I was just reciting facts.

The reaction of this young Negro was astonishing. A look of indignation and anger rolled across his face. He curled his ample lips, crossed his arms, to deliver a dissertation of the love the French and Europeans in general had for Negroes! My mouth must have dropped open, because he became even more angry and started to spew forth the wildest nonsense I had ever heard in my life. What really struck me was the obvious fact that this ghetto crawler had no doubt had these daft thoughts rattling around in his head for years. The point of his ravings, as far as I could decipher them, was that the Negro was king everywhere in the world but in the U.S., that the "crackers" had devised a vast conspiracy to conceal this from most American Negroes and that upon his arrival in Paris he would be greeted with rose petals and, not least, willing Parisian belles.

I learned many things listening to him, the most important being why Southerners before the Civil War were so determined to keep Abolitionist propaganda from reaching their slaves. The Negro apparently has a limitless capacity to believe anything he is told and to invent things that to the normal mind are just fantastic. I was appalled as I stood and listened to this character. Here was a young man about to enter on the most productive years of his life and he hadn't the slightest idea of what he might expect. How could he? He had been spoon-fed pap and pabulum all his life.

By allowing Jews and hand-wringing, limp-wristed white pantywaists to suppress open, honest and tough discussion of topics such as the true condition of the Negro, we have created a problem that threatens to overwhelm our society. If the parameters of a debate are established on shifting, treacherous sand, rather than on the granite rock of reality, you are wasting your time talking. How can we face the Negro and tell him, no, you are never going to occupy any considerable percentage of the highest positions in this land because you do not pack the cerebral gear to merit such positions. How can we tell Negroes, when they have been told over and over again, that the opposite is true and that only racism has held them back?

Truth really is the raw material of all human happiness and progress. We have abandoned it. God help us all.

They Don't Make 'em Like Jean-Bedel Bokassa Anymore

How many readers remember Emperor Bokassa I of the Central African Empire? I sure do. Having seized power in the dirt-poor former French colony on January 1, 1966, Bokassa decided in 1977 that the title President de la République was not sufficiently exalted.

With Gallic shrugs and faces rigid with the frozen dignity of the French bureaucrat, the shameless Frenchmen looked on as Bokassa, a soldier in France's army for 23 years, decorated himself with a $5-million-dollar crown made in Paris. His predecessor and cousin, David Dacko, foolishly began to flirt with the Chinese Reds, just when enormous uranium deposits had been discovered in the Central African Republic. When the French gave the word, Bokassa ousted Dacko from office and country, to be quickly followed by 50 Chinese "technicians" who had arrived to exploit the uranium.

Twenty thousand pearls were used to embellish Bokassa's new throne. More than 400 pounds of rose petals were flown in from France for fair damsels (thin on the ground in the CAR, one would think) to strew in his path. Airliners full of food and party favors followed the rose petals and pearl-encrusted throne. It was a great party, while it lasted. The French who ran this African slum smiled and chuckled at the antics of their puppet. It was not long before their complacency was rudely shattered.

The pattern is familiar among African and Haitian strongmen. Idi Amin of Uganda, Papa Doc Duvalier of Haiti and Francisco Macia Nguema of Equatorial Guinea are but three of the more striking examples of this uniquely Negro style of leadership. Bokassa had every right to take his place in this black menagerie. Like the others, he eventually chewed his way out of the cage and went bonkers.

Did the Emperor ever go bonkers! It would be tiresome to list the bizarre events of his rule. They were legion. The elegant French gentlemen, supposed to be in control, looked on, first with distaste, then alarm and, finally, horror, as the country went crazy, with the chief nut sitting on his throne. Even the French have to draw the line somewhere. They drew it when Bokassa started to gobble down schoolchildren.

Cannibal Emperor

In an effort to squeeze yet more money out of the tiny, harassed middle class, Bokassa rigged a school uniform scam, whereby he would profit from selling school clothes to the already hard-pressed parents of children in the capital of Bangui. This was too much and riots broke out, led by the schoolkids. Bokassa's response was a form of brutality that bordered on dementia. Dozens of schoolchildren were murdered by government thugs. Bokassa himself feasted on human body parts removed from the corpses of the dead demonstrators.

While Bokassa was on a goodwill trip to Libya, the French moved in 700 paratroopers and restored David Dacko to power. By now many French diplomats sincerely regretted having thrown him out in the first place.

In the years since Bokassa was deposed, Afrocentrists have tried to deny the stories of cannibalism. Sorry. I have it from an excellent source that the reports were all too true. Amazed and sickened French paratroopers discovered fresh cuts of human meat in Bokassa's residence. The Africa boosters were understandably reluctant to acknowledge this latest evidence of Negroid gastronomic peculiarities.

There were other revelations. French President Valéry Giscard d'Estaing had been a close friend of Bokassa's. Every year he made a trip to Bangui, where he was treated to big game hunts. But the randy and avaricious Frenchman was after more than lions and elephants. Bokassa would give him bags of diamonds as "gifts." In return the ungrateful Frenchman cuckolded the Emperor or at least that's what Bokassa claimed. The woman was the Emperor's wife, Catherine. Taking payoffs from an African dictator is low enough, but sleeping with his wife? Sacre bleu!

After the French coup, Bokassa was packed off to the Ivory Coast, another French pseudo colony on the West African coast. In 1986 he returned to Bangui to face trial for murder and was promptly convicted. Sentenced to death, he spent seven years in prison. He now lives in his last remaining mansion in Bangui, alone but, oddly enough, remembered fondly by many of his countrymen. He says he is a Christian. Maybe so. As to how he exercised his imperial power, "I would prefer not to pass judgment on my own rule." He can say this with an ironic smile because, incredibly, the people who have come after him have been even more corrupt and incompetent. This dreary parade of blackface puppets, all propped up by French troops, continues unto this day.

Ellis Island Update

On a late July trip to Zoo City, I paid a visit to Ellis Island, which is now a museum ($7 will get you a ferry boat ride and admission to both Ellis Island and the Statue of Liberty—a rare bargain for Gotham). The crowded conditions on the boats, the long lines to gain entrance to Emma Lazarus's icon and the polyglot I heard actually gave me some idea of what a turn-of-the-century immigrant might have faced in those days.

The Ellis Island museum is worthy of attention for a number of reasons. For one thing, displays clearly show how white immigration has been downsized in favor dence or subversive political backgrounds, were sent back. I'm sure they didn't get everybody, but at least they tried. Compare this approach to today's "lower-the-drawbridge" policy for AIDS-ters, misfits and "asylum-seekers."

Most amusing was a room with displays on nativism. Many of today's arguments against immigration were being battled around a century ago—the potential for kulturkampf, the fear of alien influences and the lowering of domestic wages. A photo from the 1920s showed a California man on his porch with this sign, "This is a white man's street. Japs keep moving." I we let people in, not as an afterthought. The gate was not all the way open to all people at all times. Moreover we didn't have the "give away the store" mentality that the welfare state has wrought.

Case in point: After the welfare reform bill was passed, a local television station did a sob sister story about what might happen if the safety net were removed. A visit to an old folks home revealed a pair of nonagenarian Russian Jews who suffered from Alzheimer's. Without those welfare checks, the poor old Jews, who had just arrived in America a few years ago, would be in big trouble.

of the nonwhite variety. Also, the posters and photographs indicated that the gates can be left wide open or they can be slammed shut, as happened in the mid-1920s. The obvious question, though unasked, is that if we shut the door once, why can't we do it again?

Perhaps most impressive, as I walked through the rooms where millions were processed, is the fact that they were processed. Those deemed unfit, either for reasons of health, criminality, improvichuckled to myself, but a liberal next to me snorted, "Isn't that disgusting!" so loudly that everyone in the room heard him. No need to ask this fellow for his views on immigration!

The contemporary pro-immigration forces justify their position by calling us a "nation of immigrants." But when we compare old-fashioned immigration to new-fangled immigration, we have a real apples and oranges situation. In the old days, assimilation was considered before

This bald-faced attempt to generate sympathy didn't wash with this viewer. Certainly, I was sorely tempted to holler back to the TV, "Send 'em to Israel along with my tax dollars!" I have to wonder what kind of insane immigration policy admits the drooling and the doddering—sure to be in need of Medicare and/or welfare as soon as they touch ground in America.

Ambrose Bierce, the Devil's Advocate

Ambrose Bierce, born in 1842 and disappeared in 1913, is noted for being America's foremost cynic because of the attack-dog columns he wrote for various newspapers, mainly in San Francisco. He was also noted for his book-length, The Devil's Dictionary, and for his short story, "An Occurrence at Owl Creek Bridge." Stephen Crane said of the latter, "nothing better exists." H.L. Mencken, following a visit with Bierce, was appalled by the darkness of his views.

When I spotted a piece about Bierce in an old New Yorker ("Our Favorite Cynic" by Joseph Epstein, March 25, 1996), my interest in the pen-wielding pessimist was again aroused. In high school and my first year of college I read about Mencken and Bierce and wondered how and why they could have been so cynical and pessimistic. Soon thereafter I learned how and why.

I had read in Instauration how Mencken, long after his death, had been outted for his "blasphemous" anti-Semitism. It stands to reason that if anyone could see through the agit-prop that the Chosenite propaganda machine cranks out so liberally a well-schooled cynic could. So I wondered if the New Yorker article would include any anti-Semitic remarks made by Bierce. The title of the article should have dashed any hope I might have entertained. I guess I was blinded by my hope of finding an anti-Semitic gem.

Bierce was cynical up to a point

With his own words Bierce disillusioned me. He refers to the Mormons as follows: "Excepting the Jews and the Chinese, I know no worthier large class of people than they."

After his benediction of the Jews, I was not impressed by Bierce's boastful quote that Epstein inserted in the very next paragraph: "I keep a conscience uncorrupted by religion, a judgment undimmed by politics and patriotism, a heart untainted by friendships and sentiments unsoiled by animosities. . ."

Coming from an Abolitionist family, the 16-year-old Ambrose worked for an Indiana anti-slavery newspaper. At 18, he was the second man in his county to join the Union Army. Uncle Lucius Bierce, who bragged he had supplied swords to John Brown's murder gang in the Harpers Ferry raid, must have applauded the anti-Southernism of his nephew.

Bierce was a hard-fighting Union soldier. By war's end he had been cited many times for bravery. He later wrote a number of short stories on Civil War themes.

But the brilliant cynic who savagely satirized and exposed corrupt plutocrats, who wrote at times with great talent, came down dead wrong on the two key, causal issues of his and our day: Jews and race.

Nearly every Bierce short story contains a gruesome element. "An Imperfect Conflagration" begins, "Early one June morning in 1872, I murdered my father—an act which made a deep impression on me at the time."

High-Powered Intervention in Argentina

The Minister of Justice of Argentina, Rodolfo Barra, who recently resigned, was forced to face a smear campaign that made the McCarthy hearings of the 50s seem like an oasis of tolerance and forgiveness. In a massive effort of multinational proportions, Jewish individuals and organizations worldwide jumped over national borders and blatantly intruded in the internal affairs of this South American country.

Jewish groups in Argentina, from the lavishly financed B'nai B'rith and the flamboyant Simon Wiesenthal Center to more obscure groups, released information to the mainstream media aimed at confirming fears that Barra had links in his teens and early twenties to nationalist groups. As evidence of his nationalistic and revisionist involvements, Jewish groups came up with an article that Barra had allegedly written in May of 1964, at the tender age of 15, for the nationalist publication, Restauración. In the article the very young Rodolfo Barra stated, "History is corrupted with lies" and "is not to be trusted."

The group to which Barra belonged was indeed a nationalist outfit, composed almost entirely of students. Its members were exclusively occupied with national issues and paid no attention to foreign affairs. Barra served a brief stint as assistant to the Dean of the University of Buenos Aires, Alberto Ottalagano, in the stormy years of 1973-74. Ottalagano's greatest sin, at least in the eyes of the international B'nai B'rith, was being a confessed fascist. Consequently, Barra, through the process of guilt by association, committed the same "sin."

It should be mentioned that Barra, a

Supreme Court Justice, abandoned that comfortable and secure post to take on the uncomfortable and insecure post of Minister of Justice. It is difficult to imagine any other reason than dedication and loyalty to country could have brought about such a move.

If the alleged activities in his youth weren't enough, last June Barra attended a pro-life conference of Spanish and Latin American jurists in Madrid, in what his critics perceived to be an act of total defiance and provocation to the political agenda of his accusers. His attendance was interpreted by many Jewish groups as a confirmation that Barra's "fascist" attitudes have not really changed. In Argentina, as well as in many other countries, liberal lobbies often make the parallel between the pro-life movement and intolerant racism.

As Jewish hysteria over Barra became ever louder, his office was accused of not pursuing a full investigation of anti-Semitic violence. Wild rumors were published about a teenage Barra who had been arrested a number of times, though not a single piece of evidence was produced to substantiate the charge. If an arrest had ever been made of Barra, the police records would have been quickly available. The weekly Somos published a photograph of an adolescent giving the Roman salute, a ploy that more than hinted the saluter was Barra, although the photo showed little resemblance. Towards the end of June a petition, signed by 1,500 rabbis from five continents demanding his immediate resignation, was published in Argentina's newspapers.

In the eyes of Argentine patriots, the Barra affair has been inspired all along by a simple desire on the part of Jewish interests to remove from high office a man who has no record of allegiance to Israel or Zionism and to replace him with someone else. At least part of that presumption was proved to be correct, when, after resigning, Barra was quickly replaced by Elias Jassan, a Jew.

Unshared Grief

Time (July 29, 1996) had a "Viewpoint" piece written by one Susan Cohen lamenting the loss of her only child on Pan-Am Flight 103, downed over Scotland in 1988. She linked the crash to the TWA Flight 800 disaster. Ms. Cohen writes intently and movingly about the tragic event. We can almost see her tears plopping on the keyboard of her laptop.

Ms. Cohen, however, never makes the obvious connection between the loss of her daughter—she blamed it on "mass murderers"—and the treatment meted out by her own people to folks like the Palestinians. Most Jews just can't seem to grasp the idea that for every cause there is an effect. When Jews unleash the fury of their own peculiar brand of racism, it can boomerang as the poison arrows return to riddle the sender.

In her diatribe Cohen damns the grief therapist (almost certainly a Jew) who counseled her, ambulance-chasing lawyers, the media, and the publishing world and its "grief book industry"—all the Jewish-dominated enterprises so often aimed at Gentile targets. It's a classic case of Jews getting caught in their own trap.

I'm quite sure Ms. Cohen would not like to be reminded of this, but the chances are overwhelming that prior to the loss of her daughter she too was an ardent booster of Israeli aggression. She too probably denigrated the people whose land, homes and birthright were ripped from them by a U.S.-sponsored racial invasion. So easy for Jews to shrug off the killing of children and the dynamiting of homes—"after all, they're only Arabs." So easy to brush off the innocents killed in the Deir Yassin massacre, the attack on the U.S.S. Liberty, the slaughter of the Marines in Lebanon, so easy because they were all non-Jews. It's quite a different matter when Jewish children are forced to pay the price for all that hatred. It isn't supposed to happen. The scenario wasn't designed that way. To grieving Palestinian mothers, the death of Susan Cohen's daughter represented some sort of poetic justice, an atonement, if you will, for the loss of their little ones. Perhaps in the grand scheme of things, your child was of no more worth than hers, although tens of millions of brainwashed Americans would vehemently disagree.

Who, Ms. Cohen, would argue that there isn't a little justice after all? Now and then.

Ethnostate Notes

Giraldus Cambrensis, Norman chaplain to Henry II, writing of the Welsh in 1188:

[T]hey unite themselves to their own people, refusing to intermarry with strangers, and arrogantly presuming on their own superiority of blood and family.

Their mind is wholly on the defense of their country and its freedom.

Not addicted to gluttony or drunkenness, this people show no ostentation in food or dress, and whose minds are always alert to defend their country and their property.

No one of this nation ever begs.

Gwynfor Evans, author of Wales: Land of My Fathers (Penry Co., 1974), who dug up the above words, goes on to make an interesting historical comparison concerning another ethnic group:

When the Czechs were part of the Austro-Hungarian Empire during the last century, with no more freedom than Wales has today, and the life of the nation and the language in the balance, Palacky, their national historian, wrote his five great volumes on the history of his nation up to the time it lost its liberty in 1526. It was this achievement, more than anything else, which revived the spirit of his people. He concluded his masterpiece with these defiant words: "We were here before Austria; we shall be here after her too." He spoke the truth. The Austrian Empire disappeared, but the Czech nation lives on. We [Welshmen] too can say, "We were here before Great Britain." And the spirit now rising in our land gives us the confidence to predict, "We shall be here after her too." For the day is coming when Wales and Scotland, Ireland and England will arise out of the ashes of Great Britain to associate in harmony with each other in a partnership of free and equal nations.

Such stirring words should be a source of strength and inspiration to Majority members who have seen the land of their European ancestors turned into a 20th-century Babylon, with every race in the world calling the shots except the descendants of those who founded it. We Northern Europeans were here long before there was anything called the United States of America. Now that it has become a totally artificial entity whose very existence is a threat to us and to our culture, anything which brings about the downfall of the tyrannical monolith—or its breakup—must be for the greater good of our people and should be welcomed. Surely we as a race shall be here long after the bogus political monstrosity known as the USA has joined similar tyrannies on the trash heap of history.

The Destructive Judiciary

One tribulation of this beleaguered land barely touched on by the media is the immense powers of judges in general and the federal judiciary in particular.

William Jefferson Clinton has already appointed 185 federal judges, the overwhelming majority of whom are very much in sympathy with the liberaloid litigiousness so dear to Clinton's heart. For the most part the new judges are young and appointed for life. They will hold on to their autocratic power for decades.

Terry Eastland, writing in the Wall St. Journal, reported that, in addition to the 185 appointments he has already made, Clinton, if reelected, could eventually enthrone over 300 of the nation's judges in the next five years. Fifty federal judges have already announced their retirement and another 132 will be eligible to retire between now and 2001.

There is also the problem of defection to the enemy. Eastland points out that while many Reagan and Bush appointees have "grown" to the liberal side, not one Clinton judge has "strayed" to the conservative side. A case in point is hyper-liberal Justice David Souter, appointed by George Bush as a conservative. This wolf in sheep's clothing votes far left on almost every possible occasion.

Clinton's two appointments to the Supreme Court are leftist Ruth Bader Ginsburg and pseudo-centrist Stephen Breyer. If Clinton manages to get one more of this political ilk on the High Bench, the 5 to 4 decisions that have put a dent in liberal rulings would automatically go to the pink area of the political spectrum.

Typical of the damage done to society by these legal dictators is the havoc wreaked by District Judge Kenneth Clark, who in 1986 singlehandedly destroyed the school system in Kansas City (MO). He accomplished this feat by decreeing that a huge amount of its total education budget be used to establish "magnet schools" to attract white students to the educational no-man's land in the slums. Clark called this policy "desegregative attractiveness." The 56 "Taj Mahal" schools he had ordered built at a cost of over a billion dollars are among the most elaborate, best equipped schools in the nation. Clark contended that pouring this torrent of money on black students would result in their academic scores rising to equal the score of whites. Three things happened: (1) the whites did not come to the magnet schools; (2) the scores of blacks did not budge; (3) race relations in Kansas City are at a new nadir.

Finally the Supreme Court, in a 5 to 4 decision, ruled that Clark improperly pursued "suburban comparability" and could not use the failure of the district's students to achieve national norms as an excuse to continue commandeering the state budget. George Will hailed the decision as "one more sign that the nation is escaping from the dead end of solving social problems—including the most intractable ones regarding race—by allowing judges to bend the Constitution to the services of their political agendas."

I'm afraid George is indulging in a bit of wishful thinking. The country is still very much under the control of the judges. In California, Proposition 187, designed to stop billions of taxpayers' dollars from going to illegal immigrants and their offspring, was overwhelmingly passed by the people of that state. An arrogant, far-left Jewish federal judge issued a restraining order prohibiting the new law from going into effect, thereby brazenly defying the popular will. I could fill a newspaper with horror stories about these tin-pot judges and their outrageous attempts to make, not interpret, the law.

America's federal judges are now in effect our rulers. These unelected autocrats are controlling and manipulating our lives to a fearful extent. If decent, productive, law-abiding Majority folk are to survive and prosper, they must find a way to stop these judges from destroying us.

Old-Timey Chinese Racist Labels

Originally the labels on fireworks crates exported from China were water-colored onto gold foil leaf. The exquisite art was based mostly on Chinese legends and mythology. The Fat Shan gold foil leaf painted labels are prized by collectors. A Chinese movie with English subtitles is now available at many chain video stores. Red Firecracker, Green Firecracker tells the story of one such artist who was hired by a fireworks company. The film is quite good, with attractive actors and beautiful cinematography. The film also realistically depicts the inhumane punishments inflicted on miscreants as late as 1911, such as attaching strings of firecrackers to the criminal's genitalia. Factory workers who messed up on their jobs usually got flogged and lost their pay. So much for OSHA!

One common thread in firecracker commercial art is the Chinese artists' fascination with America's racial makeup, especially Negroes and Indians. There are far too many such labels for all to be reproduced here, but the two shown are typical—"Nigger Chaser" and "Dixie Boy" fireworks brands. The latter usually portrayed an indolent Negro youth or pickaninny, sitting on the ground or against a tree, enjoying a large slice of watermelon.

These labels command a premium price in today's auctions.

A Russian Speaks Out

Instauration is one of the very few publications that speaks about things as they are. I cannot imagine how a thinking person can even look at the mainstream periodicals after having read a single issue. However, the article about Latvia (May 1996) was substandard. The author wasted many words telling us about those beautiful Latvians who have finally liberated themselves from brutal Russian oppression. In the process he presents the Russians as subhuman creatures with a propensity to spit on the streets and an unhealthy appetite for other people's land. In the end he even dabbled in global politics by charting a course for Europe's future development, in particular dividing that continent along alphabetical lines.

There is nothing unnatural about Latvians desiring national sovereignty and trying to preserve their language, their culture and their racial stock. It is perfectly reasonable for them to dislike their big neighbor to the East and to regard the history of their relations with Russia as a national tragedy. But neither is it unnatural for Russians to desire the same things for themselves, for their country, for their culture and for their racial stock.

When you read the white nationalist press in the West, you can often sense an editorial line that for the sake of survival of the white race Russia should leave the Baltic states alone and let them develop into "ethnostates." But if those countries work hard to undermine the Russian nation, as they are doing, they will have to deal with the consequences. Today the Baltic states are engaged in a massive scheme to defraud Russian industrial enterprises of export shipments that go through their countries. They offer very cheap prices for their transit and port facilities, which, naturally, attracts Russian exporters, who would otherwise be using Russian ports. Through various elaborate schemes some shipments are declared "lost," with no compensation to the producer. The problem is very serious.

It wasn't for nothing that Zhirinovsky introduced a motion in the Duma for economic sanctions against Estonia for participating in a massive smuggling operation of metals and other materials from Russia. Is it not "strange" that Estonia, with absolutely no metal ore deposits, was the fourth or fifth largest metal exporter in the world as far back as 1992? We are not just talking here about steel or aluminum. Those materials go through official channels and only then are declared "lost." I am talking about strategic, rare-earth metals, the kind that command prices comparable to gold, or even greater. With these precious commodities an outright smuggling operation is the preferred method, which means that the official circles of the Baltic states are engaged in a blatantly criminal enterprise.

Another problem is smuggling weapons from the Baltic states into Russia. There is a considerable quantity of small arms in many Eastern European countries left from the days of the Warsaw Pact. So why not buy it and sell it to the Russian underworld? Exactly what Estonia has decided to do. As a result Russia is now flooded with handguns that came from Estonia, purchased with Estonian government money and sold by them to criminal organizations. Thousands of murders have been committed in Russia with handguns smuggled from Estonia.

As for "dividing Europe along alphabetical lines," I would like to say that if you bestow a Latin alphabet to some African basket case, it would not change much. Sure, Poles like to refer to the lands to the East as "Asia," but we Russians call Poles the "Gypsies of Europe." Ask any German about those "Europeans with a Latin alphabet" and he will be able to tell you plenty.

Look at independent Ukraine and its byproduct, the Crimean peninsula, which Khrushchev gave to Ukraine by a stroke of a pen after WWII. Crimea is entirely Russian-speaking, as is most of Ukraine. Crimeans want to be a part of Russia and they are seriously discussing various plans of achieving this goal, starting with a "special status" within their current "host nation." Since Ukraine obviously wants to keep such a beautiful piece of real estate, it is devising schemes of its own. One of these is to allow the Tartars to come back en masse. Now the Russian resistance to what essentially is a foreign rule is being drowned in ethnic strife. Sound familiar?

I may feel pain for my people, but I realize that on the part of the Ukrainian government it is a perfectly pragmatic calculation. Another one is a plan to turn Sevastopol, the pride of the Russian navy, into a "free economic zone," into a local "Hong Kong." Any attempt to push such far-reaching schemes may provoke harsh responses from the affected parties.

Hitler Not a Racist But a Germanist

In Céline's view, Stalingrad was the greatest tragedy of the 20th century, "because it meant the end of the white race." Jews share Céline's view, although they express it differently. Jews view WWII as a war against white "racism." If we accept either view, we not only distort history, but we also play into the hands of our enemies. Let's look at the facts, unfiltered through the gauze of 50 years of postwar propaganda.

First, the war against Japan reestablished white supremacy in the Pacific. It was a glorious victory of the white race over the world's mightiest nonwhite state. Second, WWII in Europe was not a war against white racism. Like WWI, it was a war to defend other white nations against German imperialism. The only power fighting white racism in WWII was Japan. The majority of the Nordic and of the white folk were with the Allies. Where non-whites were found among the Allies, they were segregated both socially and militarily.

It was only when Germany began losing that Hitler adopted a pan-European racial solidarity line. Napoleon adopted the same propaganda in 1813 for just the same reason. To idolize Hitler and to look upon him as a champion of a lost cause of white racism is absurd. Hitlerian Germany was exclusively interested in German national interests, not in the interests of the white race as a whole. Look at what the Germans did, not at what they said. They made an alliance with yellow Japan against the British Empire and the U.S. They attacked the largest white country in the world, Russia. They planned to wipe the largest branch of the white race, the Slavic, almost completely off the map of Europe.

WWII was not a defeat for the white race. The white race was defeated after the war by its own suicidal liberalism, catalyzed by the astonishing propaganda and political activity of the Jews. The liberal/Jewish propaganda line includes this invalid syllogism: Hitler was a white racist, therefore the war was against white racism. Accept this reasoning and it follows that to be a white racist is to be opposed to Allied war aims. Such a person is deemed to be a bad, if not traitorous, American. Let's not fall for this baloney, which makes traitors patriots and patriots traitors.

HOUSTON SOLUTION

Deep Politics Not So Deep

Given that the political right is often too fragmented to wage effective war against the real enemy, it is usually prudent to exercise forbearance towards one's errant kin when differences arise. However, occasionally even the most well-intentioned of fellow combatants exhibits a failure of instinct and/or analytical thought that threatens by its glaring inconsistency to mortally wound the very cause he seeks to advance. Regrettably such is the case with the author of "Deep Politics."

Leaving aside the self-evident lack of content in Mr. Moriarty's breathless inaugural "column about writing a column"—the journalistic equivalent of a bread sandwich—his quotation from Abraham Lincoln's Gettysburg Address betrays a serious lack of understanding of the moral and political forces that have shaped the West. Lincoln is, or should be, anathema not only to Southerners, whose ancestors fought one of the few wars in recent history in defense of the white race, but to any non-Southerner who values that same objective. By running for president in 1860 as the candidate of the openly Abolitionist "Black Republican" party and by issuing the unconstitutional Emancipation Proclamation during the resulting war, a sordid aggression ostensibly intended to preserve Northern economic and political hegemony, was transformed into a holy war for the benefit of an alien race. To the everlasting detriment of his own flesh and blood, Lincoln qualifies as the historical and political progenitor of today's largely self-inflicted white genocide.

Let us ignore the murder of nearly 500,000 of his own countrymen in a war of fratricidal vengeance marked by the deliberate employment of "total war" by Lincoln's Union army commanders—who were invariably commended and promoted for war crimes and atrocities against civilians, property and Confederate prisoners. Let us also ignore the suspension of the Constitution and the abrogation of the right of self-determination of millions of whites who attempted to peacefully opt out of the genetic inferno Lincoln and his Abolitionist fellow travelers envisioned. We cannot ignore, however, that Lincoln's war conferred moral sanction and indeed constitutional compulsion upon the lethal delusion of racial egalitarianism.

One may rightly wonder just how much of today's political climate is attributable to Lincoln's legacy. Was the great influx of Eastern and Southern European immigrants that began in the 1880s in the wake of the Civil War, a direct consequence of Lincoln's moralistic crusade for racial suicide? Having freed and conferred political equality on nearly 4 million Africans, how could Lincoln's Abolitionist successors deny admittance to the serfs of non-Nordic Europe? Had half a million Northern Europeans not perished or been maimed for life in the Civil War—the flower of the white race and a genetic loss of immense proportions—would there have been a perceived need to import this new class of wage serfs in the last decades of the century?

Moriarty's self-professed interest in furthering the survival of the white race is commendable. Indeed, compared to this task, all other endeavors pale into insignificance. But given his failure to comprehend the true significance of Abraham Lincoln in initiating the destruction of the West and its peoples, why should we believe that his thoughts on politics—deep or otherwise—bear any relevance to that goal? Instaurationists deserve better than this. Nemo me impune lacessit.

Feminism Unmasked

I agree with "Lady Subscriber" (Sept. 1996) that some male Instaurationists seem very insecure about women. The comparison to the attitudes of Orthodox Jews, while unflattering, is not far off the mark. I even have known a few men who, although professing to be racially conscious, married or cohabited with submissive Asian or mestizo women. The claim that feminism causes a backlash of bad behavior towards women is largely true.

Feminism asserts that all women are oppressed by men and share common interests based solely on their status as women. Since the common interests of women override racial and cultural boundaries, feminists believe that white women have more in common with African women than they do with white men. Feminists also ignore or deny the existence of biological differences between the sexes.

Despite this belief in collective solidarity, feminism is also individualist in that the rights of individual females are paramount over society's interests. It doesn't matter if military efficiency is impaired by female combat troops. Feminists demand combat assignments.

Feminists have little desire for children. They deride the idea of the family and the role of the father. Two lesbians raising a child conceived by artificial insemination (preferably with sperm donated by male homos) is just as valid a family as the traditional sort. If they have children, they care less if they are white.

A nasty undercurrent of hatred towards men and the white race runs through the feminist movement. Although they usually assert that men and women would be the exactly the same if it were not for societal conditioning, many feminists tout female superiority and male inferiority. The phrase "white male" is accompanied with a sneer, whereas nonwhite males receive little hostility. White men are regarded as racist oppressors of people of color as well as oppressors of women, making them doubly evil. White feminists therefore have a sense of solidarity with nonwhite men, who are also "victims of white male oppression." Quite a few feminists who are not lesbian purists take up with nonwhite men as an expression of this antiwhite hostility.

I don't claim that all, or even a majority of, women who call themselves feminists believe all of this, but these ideas do influence a good many women, especially the young, unmarried, middle-class ones. They also negatively influence men, who come to associate any trait called "feminist" with such beliefs.

The ancient Celts are often described as "feminists," since they had widespread sexual freedom for women and matrilineal descent. There were even some women warriors and war leaders like Queen Boudicca. Yet none of this was racially harmful to the Celts, whose women were loyal to their people as a whole. Celtic culture might not have the approval of conservative Christians and some anti-feminists, but there was nothing racially destructive about it. Celtic women did not sneer at "the Celtic male" and proclaim their solidarity with the women of Ethiopia. Nor did they refuse to have children and tout lesbianism as a morally superior lifestyle.

I hope that racially conscious men and women will have enough sense to separate those personal actions and preferences described as "feminist," but are not racially destructive, from those animated by the deadly spirit of modern feminism.

Ambivalent WASP

It's hard to know exactly where the late Digby Baltzell stood on the racial question. A tweedy, bow-tied prep school type, he popularized the acronym WASP and was himself a WASP stereotype. All in all, his writing seemed to cast a twilight glow over America. In his mind the WASPs who so dominated his thoughts were not a bad lot and their fall from grace was not necessarily a national plus. Paradoxically one of Baltzell's heroes was Al Capone, whom he complimented for trying to assimilate and for feeding thousands of hungry Chicagoans during the Great Depression. To Baltzell the gangster boss was comparable to 19th-century WASP "robber barons."

Digby Baltzell, stingless WASP

Baltzell's book, The Protestant Establishment, was a long obituary of the incomparable British-descended Americans whose last shot at glory was the moon shot. You don't see many people like Neil Armstrong around anymore. At any rate Baltzell will have nothing further to say about WASPs. He died on August 17 at age 80.

Which Way Black America?

When may we assume that maturity arrives? At fifteen, twenty, twenty-five? This seemingly innocuous imponderable came waltzing into my idle mind one afternoon as I gazed out of my urban office window onto the Washington (DC) street scene and watched the hurrying flotsam and jetsam of everyday society, young and old, black and white, going about their mid-day rounds. In the milling mob I observed the shuffling countenance of an ancient Afro-American, bent at the waist, painfully struggling against the crowd to complete his task, the delivery of a large brown paper-wrapped package.

How different, I thought, was this noble Old Black Joe from the endless list of other Afros whose good-for-nothing-ness is the cross the white man must now bear. How benign was the Negro's demeanor. How helpfully he paused to hold open a door for a woman. How utterly he differed from the Main Chance grabbers and the Ripoff artists whose minority cynicism is making organized society a living hell. What is it then that impacts so endearingly on 80-year-olds such as Old Black Joe? Is it a manifestation of the maturity whites attain at a much earlier age? Or is it something that merely reflects the drying-up of all those evil juices of destruction that besmirch younger Afro-Americans with the mark of Cain?

Monkey Business

A co-worker of mine told me about some interesting observations he made while visiting "monkey houses" at various zoos. The behavior of monkeys and apes changes dramatically when they first see a Negro. The primates will suddenly start screaming and jumping around. Conversely he has seen rambunctious monkeys abruptly stop what they're doing and stare intensely at any black or group of blacks who happen to wander by. The monkeys will follow every move of a Negro until he becomes so unnerved that he departs posthaste. I have no reason to doubt the veracity of these fascinating details. As always, the racial overtones are intriguing, but this time they are also humorous.

Cultural Wasteland

In the city of New Orleans, signs of racial destructiveness are so painfully apparent, both in the French Quarter enclave of excellent eating saturated with police, and in the greater city beyond, where minority culture has done its inevitable work of erasing the accomplishments of white society. A few miles from the Quarter are huge minority-infested housing projects—pitiful, treeless, grassless stretches of urban desert that suggest a moonscape. Menacing black youths stripped to the waist wander aimlessly about endless concrete apartment complexes encased in protective metal gratings. Mangy, emaciated dogs hunt desperately for nonexistent shade.

New Orleans subsists on the taxes obtained from foreign trade and petroleum. Whites make their way through the city's labyrinth of corruption while paying enormous attention to the problem of street crime, bolting their doors night and day and carrying the tools of personal safety with them in auto glove compartments. The city's professional football team is a mind-numbing narcotic used to blot out white racial consciousness. Present everywhere is the overwhelming reality of a culture-dead city.

Barbaric Sex Habits Legalized

American minority judges are giving an extra push to the country's descent into a multicultural society. Adjudicating a case in which a Hmong immigrant (the Hmongs are a mountain tribe in Vietnam) was charged with sexual assault against two girls, 10 and 11 years of age, Judge Ramona Gonzalez, after hearing the defense explanation that such attentions to minor girls are common practice in the defendant's homeland, handed down a fulsome decision. The defendant was given no jail time but was put on probation and ordered to continue his English language classes so as to provide him "the opportunity to continue his education and his assimilation into our culture." Who, in the name of God, appointed Ms. Gonzalez a judge?

Slurs Against Christians Okay

Jewish ax-grinders are hard at work forcing radical rightists off the Internet. But what are the ADL and the Simon Wiesenthal Center doing about anti-Christian slurs? Surfing around one night I came to misc.health.alt which contained the following notice: "Christians are the biggest m-----f----- assholes in the U.S." How long does anyone think this message would have lasted if "Christians" had been replaced by "Jews?"

High-Style Flicks

Just finished the second scintillating English movie in the Jane Austen series. Whether it was Emma Thompson in Sense and Sensibility or the gorgeous Gwyneth Paltrow playing the lead in Emma, we were furnished a glimpse into a charmed world of civilized and comely whites endeavoring to live up to decent standards of behavior. Gwyneth Paltrow, a radiant, pert, glorious natural blonde (now coupled with Nordic Brad Pitt), exudes such an inspiring moral force that she shames our age of potty-mouthed verbiage and mud-wrestling carnality. Although a male and former Marine, I found myself gripped by Austen's verbal picture of a very white, very chivalrous, very real England of 200 years ago. That Hollywood is now distributing the film versions of the great novelist's works so vigorously may indicate a subtle surge of racial nostalgia on the part of movie-going Majority members, especially WASPs.

Hell Hath No Fury

Before she became a midshipman/person at the U.S. Naval Academy, the jealous Dianne Zamora induced her boyfriend, David Graham, who later attended the Air Force Academy, to murder a 16-year-old blonde with whom he had once had a one-night stand. Zamora, a late 20th-century Lady Macbeth, is supposedly an Hispanic, though the grasping Jewish corporate raider who seized control of United Fruit Co. in the 1930s had the same surname. Come to think of it, Dianne's physiognomy does bear a few Semitic traces. Expelled from their respective military academies, the star-uncrossed lovers are now in jail awaiting trial for murder.

Bork Talks Turkey

Stealing a famous line from Irish poet William Butler Yeats, "Slouching toward Bethlehem," Supreme Court reject Robert Bork has written Slouching Toward Gomorrah, a book in which he condemns the Constitution-bashing Supreme Court and proposes an amendment to allow a majority of the House and Senate to override High Bench decisions.

This is only one of a grab bag of Borkian ideas to help resolve some of the life-and-death issues facing the country. But like most conservative doomsayers these days, Bork concentrates on the political and cultural defects, without so much as a hint as to how to solve the race problem, which is at the bottom of all the problems and which, if not solved, nothing will be solved.

Bork doesn't go far enough

Bork proposes censorship as a means of curbing the rot. "The obscene prose and pictures available on the Internet, motion pictures that are mere rhapsodies to violence and the more degenerate lyrics of rap music" are just a few of the culture-mulching elements that Bork wants to outlaw.

Bork seems to forget that censorship is not needed in a healthy society. Obscenity is no issue when the cultural leaders of a country are overcome with shame at the mere thought of indulging in gutter behavior. Censorship is just a stopgap in a society becoming decadent at such a rapid rate it negates all attempts to keep public expressions of filth under control. The only effective censorship is self-censorship. To really clean up the U.S., Americans must first wash out their own mouths and their own minds.

Passing Thoughts

- The verdict in the second O.J. trial will again depend not on the evidence but on the jury's racial makeup. Consequently the outcome cannot be predicted until the number of black, white and Hispanic jurors is known. To such depths has our criminal justice system fallen.

- The man responsible for slipping the FBI files to the White House and thereby committing a "gross violation" of bureau policy was FBI special counsel Howard M. Shapiro.

- No wonder Dole warned Clinton not to pressure Israel in that time- and money-wasting photo op White House meeting between Netanyahu and Arafat. Dole was simply mouthing what his Middle Eastern advisors, predominantly Jewish, of course, were telling him to mouth. Members of this Jewish brain trust included Undersecretary of Defense Paul Wolfowitz, former Asst. Secretary of Defense Richard Perle and former senior National Security Council and State Dept. official Paula Dobriansky. The one important non-Jew to whisper Israeli propaganda into Dole's ear is the renowned warmongress, Jeane Kirkpatrick.

- The First Daughter is a quick study. She called the Secret Service people paid to protect her, "personal trained pigs." When one agent suggested Bill and Hillary wouldn't go along with this sneer, Chelsea demurred: "I don't think so. That's what my parents call you."

Clinton's Big Lie

In his typical black-stroking fashion, Clinton made a big point in several interviews and TV encounters of swastikas painted on the doors of Negro soldiers at Fort Bragg (NC). Not bothering to wait until the evidence was in, he claimed that the swastikas were the work of white members of the crack military unit, the Green Berets.

It was no surprise to Instaurationists that the culprit turned out to be a black, who painted one of the swastikas on his own door. Clinton also proved to be a double liar, since the guilty person was not a member of the Special Forces as Mr. Sneeze intimated, but belonged to a lowly support unit.

Another "hate crime" that took place this summer was the 60-foot swastika mowed into a 30-acre cornfield in Burlington County (NJ). Governor Whitman was practically apoplectic about the Nazi symbol, which could only be seen from the air. She let it be known that malignant forces were abroad in the land. Eventually two whites were arrested and more arrests were expected. Although this was more of a prank than a hate crime, in their search for the villains detectives knew that blacks were not involved. The "crime" required too much planning.

Pa Smacks Daughter's Beau

John Jerkins, a police sergeant in Stillwater (OK), heard some strange noises at 1:00 a.m. Touring the house, he caught his 17-year-old daughter loving it up on the sofa with her 17-year-old boyfriend. Enraged, father Jerkins slapped the overly affectionate lad hard in the face and threw him out of the house. For this normal parental reaction, Jerkins was demoted to patrolman. Eight months later he was still trying to regain his lost rank.

No Comprendo Inglés

The Montgomery County (MD) Human Relations Committee ordered Wells Fargo Guard Service to pay $32,839.21 to Ms. Yannick Toussaint. What egregious act had the guard service committed to be slapped with such a penalty? It had fired Toussaint back in 1991 because, as a recent arrival from Haiti, she could barely speak English and was unable to make herself understood to clients. A local lawyer alerted Toussaint that, being black, she could sue her former employer for discrimination. She did.

Weirdo Uncaged

John Crutchley, 49, is out of jail after serving 10 years for drinking half the blood of a 19-year-old female hitchhiker he kidnapped and raped. A few weeks back he checked into a half-way house in Orlando, much to the consternation of locals who were not too happy about having the "vampire rapist" living in their midst. Crutchley will undergo counseling and be carefully watched for four months, or so the authorities say. If he gets a job after the mandatory four-month observation period, he will be free as a bird.

Janus Veep

Vice President Al Gore's lachrymose recital of his sister's death from lung cancer set a new low in political mendacity. He blamed her death on the weed, declaring it turned him against cigarette companies forever. He didn't say that he himself continued to accept money from tobacco interests ($16,440 in 1979-90). In 1988, eight years after his sister's death, Gore spoke these words to North Carolina tobacco growers in his failed bid for the presidency:

Throughout most of my life I raised tobacco. I want you all to know that with my own hands, all of my life, I've put it in the plant beds and transferred it. I've hoed it. I've dug in it. I've sprayed it. I've chopped it. I've shredded it. I've spiked it, put it in the barn and stripped it and sold it.

What earthly good is democracy if it allows a two-faced, prevaricating primate like Gore to occupy the second highest office in the land?

Addled Ali

The endless media tributes to Muhammad Ali are a real stomach-churner, though I suppose his transfiguration was not unexpected. After all, he was a creation of the media scribblers, who treated him as a loudmouth until he became a draft dodger and metamorphosed into the darling of libdom. The proud possessor of a draft deferment after flunking the mental part of his exam, he was happy as a clam until the day the government lowered the IQ minimum down to his. That's when all the screaming and howling started. His preposterous claim that his religion forbade warfare confused Islam with Buddhism. That Ali should have represented the U.S. at the recent Atlanta Olympics was disgraceful.

Jimmy Carter, trying to make a few points with black voters, once sent Ali to Africa as a "Special Ambassador." When he arrived in Mozambique, a Communist dictatorship attempting to emulate a Stalinist utopia, it only took ten minutes with local officials to produce this typical put-down from our Special Ambassador: "Americans are the baddest white mens in the world."

Phony Refugees

A refugee is described as a person with a "well-founded fear of persecution." Although Jews have once again infested the Russian media, arts and politics, although the richest Russian is a Jew, Russian Jews, with the help of U.S. senators, have been able to get themselves categorized as refugees. This qualifies them for a cornucopia of benefits the moment they set foot in the U.S.—Medicaid, Aid to Dependent Children, SSI and food stamps—the works. It adds up to one more scam the Jewish community is perpetrating on the American people. Twenty-two thousand Russian-Jewish refugees alone arrived in the U.S. in 1995.

Mutual Thievery

In May, New York shyster David Schick was convicted of defrauding a British foundation, Vindola Ltd., of $7 million. Nothing unusual about that—except that Vindola finances charitable activities in Israel. Yes, if the occasion presents itself, they will steal from each other.

Disappearing Act

Susan Walsh, a go-go dancer turned investigative reporter, disappeared into thin air while working on an exposé of Russian-Jewish prostitution rings in New Jersey. She told her son she was going out to make a phone call and was never seen or heard of again.

The Immigration Issue

The takeover of the American Southwest, which the invaders plan to call Aztlan, has already begun. Some isolated ranchers along the Rio Grande have been intimidated and scared off their land by armed Mexican drug gangs. In southern California, Hispanic racists have beat up on white activists and are boring their way into local politics and school systems. In some areas more Mexican flags wave than the Stars and Stripes.

White flight from southern California, south Texas and south Florida started several years ago. It may soon develop into a mass exodus. Interestingly the only effective white resistance to Hispanic expansion is taking place in California, where Governor Pete Wilson is doing his best to end affirmative action and welfare for illegals. Two initiatives to this effect have been offered to the public, one of which, the removal of a free ride on welfare for illegals, has already passed, but is being held up by a Jewish judgess. The second, calling for the end of racial preferences, will probably be approved by the public come election day.

Clinton has been moving heaven and earth to quash any meaningful reaction to open-door immigration and racial preferences on the part of whites. The cowardly, lily-livered Dole, with the help of his chief minority panderer, Jack Kemp, is shying away from the crucial issues, though this silence may end if the Republican campaigners get desperate.

Early Continent-Hoppers

The bones of a male skeleton recently dug up in Kenniwick (ID) date from 7500 B.C. to 7235 B.C. Although the skull was described as having more Northern European than American Indian characteristics, local Redskins demanded that the remains be reburied immediately. Otherwise the Great Spirit might be offended.

Recent digs in the heart of Asia have unearthed the mummies of ancient whites. When combined with the discovery of Kenniwick Man, the case is strengthened that early whites were just as hearty a bunch of explorers and pioneers as their descendants. It tends to prove that human history is largely an expansion and retraction, a waxing and waning, of the white race. Right now, unfortunately, this race is in one of its shrinking periods.

Hoaxes Upon Hoaxes

The Washington Post (April 25, 1996) hit the kiosks with a tear-jerking story about a North Laurel (MD) woman, Sonia James, 28, a black law student and social worker, who claimed her townhouse had been vandalized—dishes broken, family photos destroyed, clothes torn, furniture slashed and TV and VCR stolen. Worst of all, a racial slur had been spray-painted on the wall of one room.

The Post blew this up into a hate crime of the first magnitude and heralded it with a three-column headline. City officials, tearing their hair and shedding their usual crocodile tears, offered a large reward and swore that the culprits would be quickly rounded up. In the meantime Sonia became a tragic heroine.

After a laborious three-month investigation, lawmen found what every true-blue Instaurationist would have suspected from the start. Another "hate crime" had been perpetrated by another so-called victim. Ms. James had staged the whole affair in order to collect some insurance.

The media are so ready to buy into and publish anything with a pro-minority racial angle that they make no attempt to report such crimes skeptically. It is this lapse of truth-telling that encourages minorities to stage so many fake hate crimes that it's difficult to separate the wheat from the chaff.

Primate Watch

Hispanic Federico Cruz, a 16-year-old dropout of Rockford (MI), is charged with murdering white David Crawford, 17, and dumping his body in a swamp. The next day Cruz returned, cut off the dead youth's head and took it back to his bedroom where he mutilated it, while filming his grisly work on his video camera.

The Jewish multimillionaire Reuben Sturman owned and perhaps still owns peephole parlors and X-rated adult bookstores not only in the U.S. but in several other countries. Although now behind bars, he is still very active in the salacious book business. If, as the Attorney General's Commission on Pornography states, Sturman is an associate of the Gambino family, the longtime Italian-Jewish organized crime alliance is still flourishing.

"King of Quotes" Norman Ornstein was quoted or his name mentioned in the N.Y. Times in 22 articles or stories since 1986. Why have the media given such attention to Ornstein, a "resident scholar" of the American Enterprise Institute for Public Policy? No one seems to know. Could it be because he has been endowed, as have so many of his racial cousins, with an ample supply of genes for pushiness?

64% of U.S. adults oppose homosexual marriages; 11% approve. The remaining 25% are mostly on the fence. So declaims pollster Louis Harris. That a large majority disapprove will not necessarily have any effect on the law of the land. Consider open sesame immigration, also condemned by most Americans. It chugs along unconcernedly and unstopably as if it had the backing of the entire electorate.

41.4% of U.S. Hispanic households own homes, a percentage that HUD wants to boost to 47% in the next 4 years, courtesy of a $4-million ad campaign to be financed by the taxpayer.

Philandering Prez John F. Kennedy had an IQ of 119. Madonna claims hers is 140.

Some 5.1 million U.S. adults were under some form of correctional supervision by Big Brother in 1994, almost 3/4ths on probation or parole. 992,000 men and women were in state and federal prisons. 47% of the inmates were white, 51% black, 2% apparently uncategorizable.

According to Coldwell Banker, a leading real estate firm, the White House, if put up for sale, should fetch $63,893,550. The presidential palace, situated on 18 acres, has 132 rooms, 32 bathrooms, 29 fireplaces, 3 elevators, tennis court, indoor swimming pool, movie theater, jogging track and dentist's office.

In Stanford (CT), HUD pays welfare recipients up to $1,540 a month for their apartment rent. In areas where normal rents are $350 a month or less, HUD pays $600 a month to welfare renters. No wonder some landlords are more interest-

Now that Supreme Court Justice Clarence Thomas, who left the Catholic Church in the 1960s and became an Episcopalian, is returning to the Catholic fold, for the first time in U.S. history Protestants are in a minority in the Supreme Court. The 4 Protestant justices are Episcopalian Sandra Day O'Connor and David Souter, Lutheran Chief Justice William Rehnquist, and John Paul Stevens, who just says he's a Protestant and lets it go at that. The non-Protestant majority now consists of Catholics Thomas, Antonin Scalia and Anthony Kennedy, and two Jews, Stephen Breyer and Ruth Bader Ginsburg.

Waspishly Yours

Jews especially love to propagate the lie that they were first attacked by Egypt, Jordan and Syria in 1967. Truth to tell, Israelis deliberately provoked and initiated that war. They knew they could win, so they seized the opportunity to expand the range of their piracy and plunder. Doesn't might make right? Isn't that what it means to be a "light unto the nations?" Menaphlegm Begin unblushingly boasts of this Zionist duplicity in his miasmatic memoirs.

In June 1967, we again had a choice. The Egyptian Army concentrations in the Sinai approaches do not prove that Nasser was really about to attack us. We must be honest with ourselves. We decided to attack him.

Or, as David (Bren-gun) Ben-Gurion admitted, vis-à-vis the overall situation, "let us not ignore the truth among ourselves. . . The country [Palestine] is theirs, because they inhabit it, whereas we want to come here and settle down. . ."

The apex of the propaganda from AIPAC is that the U.S. needs Israel as a "strategic asset." The reality is that Israel is—and always has been—a strategic liability.

According to AIPAC propaganda, the Arabs are marauding terrorists hellbent upon driving "poor little Israel into the sea," so that the real danger here is deciding what defenseless poor little Israel will do with all its A-bombs, not to mention all its bug-bombs and its capacity for bacteriological warfare. But bacteriological warfare brings me back to the poisonous effects of Zionide propaganda.

For decades the Jews have been blackening Islam, depicting it as the moronic religion of a socially and politically retarded people, a religion diametrically opposed to democracy.

What right do Christians and/or Jews have to laugh at the Muslim belief that Muhammad ascended into heaven? I seem to remember that Jesus also ascended into heaven, and that his sainted mother also followed the same route. Where in Islam was Muhammad ever resurrected from the dead after three days?

Who walked on water? What legendary leader separated the Red Sea from the truth? Who got the tablets of the law directly from God (after He had plagiarized them from Hammurabi)?

Who lived in the belly of a "big fish" for three days? Who charmed water from a rock by rapping it with a wooden rod? Who heard God speaking from a burning bush? Who made the sun stand still?

Didn't tricky Jacob (whose name became "Israel"), didn't Israel Sumo-wrestle all night with a material angel for the right to keep what he had stolen from his brother? Wasn't that stolen mess of pottage later called Palestine?

Wasn't that mess created by Israel pounding with mortars and pestles Palestinian bones into a kosher blood pudding?

Wasn't the story of tricky Jacob a splendid example of conduct for a people to enshrine in a book they call holy?

Worst of all, Islam is slammed because it refuses to accept a "separation" between church and state. Now really?

I wonder where that great philosopher Hegel got the curious notion that a "separation" of church and state was fictional or illusory? Did he foresee the time when religious parties in the U.S. would invent Byzantine rationales for funding parochial schools with monies filched from the public treasury, making a coffin of "separation" from the coffers of so-called free enterprise? Did Hegel foresee that, because of their political clout, Jews would be able to raid the public treasury in America in order to support their religious schools or yeshivas? Do Christian fundamentalists today really believe in a separation of church and state in America? So why slam Islam, if you're not also going to slam deceptive Judaism and mythical Christianity?

Do Jews—believing Jews—believe in a separation of church and state? The truth is that "real" Jews—not the milksop assimilationists whelped in Hollywood—the black-bearded, side-curved, frock-coated, tough-minded Hasidim who are an embarrassment to the chic Hollywood assimilationists—the truth is that "real" Jews—the foreign looking, alienated, unapologetic Pithecanthropus erectus types who stand erect on the Torah—these "real" Jews are every bit as "bad," if not worse, than Muslims ever were or are when it comes to religious tolerance. The Arabs are often more tolerant of Jews than Jews are of one another. The first and worst persecutors of early Christians (i.e., "reformist" Jews) were Jews jealous of a heresy based on spirit rather than on shekels.

What do the "real" Jews think of democracy and the separation of church and state?

The late rabid rabbi Meir Kahane summed it up best: Moses never called a parliament, never consulted the people about anything. He took his marching orders directly from God. Democracy be damned. To separate the church from the state is to separate the state from its very source in divinity.

So why is this surprising? Isn't the history of Israel the history of kings? King David, King Solomon, King Herod, to name a few. When Yahweh gave the Jews prophetic leaders, didn't the people call instead for kings? Didn't Jews in modern Israel, Jews with bloody hands, call for Arik Sharon, the blubbergut butcher of West Beirut, to become king of the Jews?

V.S. STINGER

As happens once in the proverbial blue moon, in the reportage of the incessant Israeli wars against the Palestinians, the media gave the latter a break and blamed, albeit it momentarily, the latest Holy Land violence on the Zionists. But after this brief and unusual retreat to the truth, the pundits and "experts" wasted no time putting a purely Jewish spin on events. On Meet the Press (Sept. 29) the bug-eyed Tim Russert allowed the Israeli ambassador to the U.S. to remain on camera at least three times as long as the Palestinian spokeswoman who was cut off almost in the middle of a sentence with the lame explanation that the satellite had been "lost." A few hours later, on the same Sunday, This Week with David Brinkley featured Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu and a State Dept. Jewish apparatchik, Dennis Ross. Only maverick Sam Donaldson threw a couple of hardball questions. Most of the program amounted to little more than a pro-Israel lovefest. George Will moaned gratuitously about the hundreds of Israelis who had died in the last year or so but moaned not at all about the thousands of Palestinians exterminated by the high-tech Israeli army.

Once the Israeli lobby and its panderers were back in control, the opening of the archaeological tunnel, which triggered the shooting, was declared a non-issue and next to nothing was said about the abysmal economic situation in the Gaza Strip and in the few West Bank communities returned to Palestinian rule. On the other hand, much was said about the Palestinian policemen who dared to shoot at rampaging Israeli soldiers. The Zionists were only using rubber bullets in their firefights, we were informed. Since rubber bullets don't kill, what was responsible for so many Palestinian deaths? Could it have been the helicopter gunships spraying live bullets into gatherings of West Bankers. As for the Oslo Agreements, which the Israelis have failed to live up to, particularly in regard to the removal of Israeli troops from Hebron, they were mentioned in passing, but reporters avoided pointing the figure at the Israelis for their grandiose welshing.

With the peace process not processing, with the grim hopelessness that bears down on an oppressed people suffering under the heel of an alien army of occupation, the Palestinians felt they had no choice but to relieve their frustrations by staging a mini-revolt.

From the very beginning the peace process has been a euphemism for the establishment and institutionalizing of the Jewish hegemony over a little strip of land that somehow gets more coverage in the U.S. media than all the other countries in the world combined. We may be sure that, no matter what occurs in the Middle East, Americans, largely against their own better judgment, will continue to pour billions of dollars a year—$100 billion in the last 50 years—into the bottomless pit of Zionist financial and military demands. All for what? To delay but not prevent the Armageddon that will surely explode when Muslim countries have a nuclear arsenal equal to Israel's and are determined to drive the Jewish interlopers from the U.S. protected beachhead into the sea. Then tens of millions, perhaps hundreds of millions, will die and among the dead will be those Israelis who didn't exit in time for the U.S. and parts west.

The way things are heading, Israel, before its demise, will become a fortress state with a population consisting largely of the military and with Arab serfs to do the cooking and housecleaning. Civilian Jews will be long gone.

Isn't it strange that one small ethnic group has such a commanding presence in every aspect of American domestic and foreign policy? Think of what the U.S. would be without Jews. Think of the lives that would not have been wasted, the resources not squandered and the time and money not spent on pointless diplomatic missions.

Notwithstanding the insanity of our support for Israel, we continue to meddle and meddle and meddle—all the while proving that the U.S., which might have gone down as one of history's great nations, will be remembered as the tail-wagging dog of a small racist cohort that represents less than 3% of the U.S. population and a minuscule fraction of the world's population.

The lowest blow to what is left of U.S. civility in recent months was the Nike TV ad featuring Tiger Woods, the great black golf hope, who won three amateur tournaments and has now turned pro. The message of the ad was that Woods, despite his eminence, still cannot play on certain U.S. golf courses. When a reporter asked Nike to identify these courses, a company official, after some embarrassing hesitation, admitted he could not name any. Neither could anyone at Nike explain why a man with a black father and a Thai mother was solely identified as a black. Could it be there are more black buyers of Nike shoes? Could it be that Nike policy was set by affirmative action?

Not at all nonplused, Nike officials continued to run the false ads, conduct interviews with sports figures and put on glowing PR stunts. Nothing must be allowed to stop racial preferences on the airwaves. Nike, incidentally, signed a $50-million contract with Woods before he played one round as a pro. When he did get around to entering his first professional tournaments, which featured only second-echelon players, he won one, but did rather poorly in others.

Nike pays its Indonesian workers 48¢ an hour to make the fancy, souped-up versions of what used to be called sneakers that sell in the U.S. for $100 or more, provided they are embossed with the names of sports figures, mainly Negroes, such as Michael Jordan. The Chief Executive Officer of Nike, who specializes in making giraffish Negro athletes multimillionaires, is a WASP Episcopalian named Philip Knight. He is a likely candidate for Instauration's Majority Renegade of the Year.

Mexican TV viewers were treated to the death by fire of Solar Hernandez, accused of raping, beating and killing his girlfriend. Some Vigilantes in Playa Vicente, a town in Veracruz state, seized Señor Hernandez, stripped him down to his underwear, tied him to a tree and burnt him alive. The TV audience watched the victim scream and wriggle for a while before he gave up the ghost. Two Mexican TV stations broadcast this event, which recalled the burning at the stake that once was dished out to heretics by Mexico's Spanish conquerors. Altogether five alleged criminals were burned to death in Mexico last summer. Townspeople claimed they had been forced to perform these gory, gasoline-drenched executions because the Mexican criminal justice system was simply not working.

From Zip 532. Conservative talkmeister Rush Limbaugh is regularly a target of criticism on Instauration's hallowed pages. I have mixed feelings about the man. Some Instaurationists, purists to the bone, think he should spend a goodly portion of his time railing against Jews and minorities. Since he doesn't oblige, the purists imply Limbaugh is simply a charlatan, a kosher conservative and all the rest. I am a half-hearted defender of Rush because on a number of occasions I have heard him do a damn fine job opining against illegal immigration, minority agitators, homosexuals and the liberal-minority coalition in general. Every little bit helps. But make no mistake, I am far from being one of his army of ditto-heads. Rush really doesn't get it when it comes to Jews and the Jewish question. At times his pandering to and fawning over the Chosen has reached the point of nausea.

I watch very little television anymore. Yet even with my discriminating viewing and my few couch potato hours, the electronic eye often manages to infuriate me. Just such an incident occurred a few weeks ago.

Against my better judgment, my daughters and I tuned in to the Miss Teen USA contest that was being held in Las Cruces (NM). My girls enjoy watching this sort of show so they can debate which contestant is prettiest and mull over other trivia of interest. After the emcee had introduced and briefly interviewed only eight of the 50 contestants, I could see the direction things were heading. Six of the first eight contestants were nonwhite, some of them from states with overwhelmingly white populations. Apparently we were supposed to believe that these were the most beautiful and talented girls from their respective states. When I turned off the TV in disgust, my daughters did not protest.

These minority-riddled Miss-something-or-other contests have become yet another exercise in affirmative action. Witness the disproportionate number of nonwhite Miss Americas and Miss USAs in recent years.

Beauty, however, is not in the eyes of the beholder or beholding judges. Beauty is the fortuitous combination of genes which dictate the standards for beauty, which in the West and often in the East is the Nordic ideal.

From Zip 921. Interviewed by CNN's Riz Khan, bestselling author Daniel Goldhagen, who claims that practically all Germans were ardent supporters of Nazi "death camps," bridled at identifying himself as Jewish. He averred that it was irrelevant to his book, Hitler's Willing Executioners. When Lincoln admonished that "You can't fool all of the people all of the time," he obviously didn't know about TV.

Notes from the Sceptred Isle—John Nobull

Lawrence Durrell once said that every true patriot hates his country in his own way. The group I really hate in England is not the Jews but the caring, sharing middle class, the lacqueys of the Jews, who parasitise the welfare state, making it enormously more expensive than it need be. The caring, sharing middle class supply the social workers who enable immigrants and their families to live off the taxpayer, supply the teachers who deliberately refrain from teaching the three Rs (on egalitarian grounds). . .the families which “freely forgive” the criminals who have beaten and robbed their old parents. . .the ministers of religion who plead the cause of paedophiles. . .the “counsellors” who get to work on a poor woman who has been raped by a smelly black. . .the members of Parliament who vote automatically against the death penalty. . .the judges and police officers who prevent their underlings from cracking down on immigrant crime.

After WWII, which impoverished Britain and undermined the Empire, it was the caring, sharing middle class which became a fixture in the House of Commons and the greatly enlarged bureaucracy. Nevil Shute used to say that the senior bureaucrats were descendants of the butlers to the upper class who wanted revenge against their former employers because of their injured pride. In any case, the caring, sharing middle class has assumed the task of ruining the upper-middle class and the landed gentry. Above a very modest level, anyone who tried to succeed honestly hit his head on a tax ceiling sneeringly imposed by “moral” Marxists and Methodists. The top rate of income tax was set at 83%, the top rate of tax on “un-earned income” (i.e., savings) at 98%! And the gradations were low by U.S. standards. Vicious inheritance taxes did the rest. In the early 50s one country house a day was being sold in socialist Britain. Businessmen, many of them Jews who had most of their money abroad, remained virtually untouched.

Middle-class Labour and Conservative councillors in local government allowed themselves to be bribed by Jewish property developers, who then tore down the comfortable, little semi-detached houses in which the people had been happy for generations and replaced them with monstrous jerry-built egg-boxes. What resulted was a good copy of an East European people’s democracy.

But at least in those democracies the people didn’t have to put up with mass immigration from the Third World—at least until the 1980s. In Britain the caring, sharing middle class provided the moral climate of welcome. Labour councillors in East London even supplied brass bands to celebrate the influx of West Indians. Now we have a really revolting multiracial state, which the British people were never allowed to vote on. As a result, they are being driven into close proximity with the most degraded peoples in the world (West Indians, Africans, Bangladeshis) and punished for defending themselves against constant provocation.

The career to study is that of Harold Wilson, a tubby little economist from West Yorkshire who became successively President of the Board of Trade and Prime Minister. He was able to hand monopolistic import contracts to a whole series of egregious Jews, who then imported large quantities of products from the sweated-labour factories of Eastern Europe to undercut better-paid British workers.

In a great gesture of generosity Prime Minister Menzies offered free passage to Australia to any Briton who wanted to come. But the Aussies soon realised that the proles and dependent middle-class people who came were not quite the people who had created the British Empire (viz the Marlboro men who still survive in parts of Australia, New Zealand, South Africa and North America).

Question. How do you know when a jet-load of poms has landed in Australia?

Answer. Because the whining goes on long after the engines have stopped.

The best of the British emigrated to Africa. White schoolchildren in Rhodesia were the most intelligent and some of the finest-looking in the world. Yet the caring, sharing middle class in Britain, which never breathes a word against the Jewish rape of Palestine, gave money gladly to the World Council of Churches, knowing it would be passed on to black guerrillas who murdered isolated Rhodesian farmers and their families. It was the fat upper-class swine Soames, Churchill’s son-in-law, who set the seal on Britain’s betrayal of Rhodesia.

Some years ago I walked into an exhibition in London’s King’s Road. The “art” consisted entirely of faeces and the marks of absorbed urine tastefully arranged on canvas. The perpetrators were mostly Jews, of course, but the earnest-looking art-lovers who came to view the horror were mostly British. I congratulated the frowsy female who supervised the show, telling her that it was subtly evocative of the new Britain, right down to the smells. Until I mentioned the smells, she thought I was a convert to the cause.

The caring, sharing middle class loathes anything which smacks of competition or exercise. That is why the schoolteachers feel demeaned when called upon to supervise games for the children on their inadequate playing fields. At the recent Olympics the British won one gold medal, the Italians 13. Yet the soft middle class is only too ready to applaud a horizontal Negro heavyweight who represents Britain, just as the soccer-watching proles cheer on the aliens who are brought in at great expense to represent them on their local teams. I don’t hate the proles. They have been betrayed and are only slowly beginning to realise it. The teachers and the media have stultified them almost completely.

I will just add one detail, supplied by Auberon Waugh, son of novelist Evelyn Waugh. Before WWI, 65% of the English population was classed as fair-haired. Now the proportion is only 10%! The fair-haired people emigrated, died in wars or miscegenated with the darker-hued. Bye-bye Angles and Saxons.

Report from the Darkening Tip

Aug. 1: While an increasing number of Cuban doctors have been welcomed by the Mandela government to practice in South Africa, an increasing number of South African doctors are leaving. A Johannesburg doctor warned that the ANC seems intent on creating a medical desert.

Aug. 2: Roelf Meyer, Secretary-General of the National Party, has stated that his party aims at taking over the government from the ANC in the year 2004. Nobody takes him too seriously.

Aug. 3: F.W. de Klerk, leader of the National Party, told his party's congress that "our country is slipping. This is proven beyond doubt by the lack of sufficient new investment, the rising number of South Africans leaving our shores and the fragility of the rand."

Aug. 5: Dr. Theo Veldsman, President of the Psychological Society of South Africa, remarked, "the South African society is one of the highest, if not the highest, stressed societies in the world."

Aug. 6: Economists still expect South Africa to reach a growth rate of 3% this year—much less than expected earlier.

Aug. 7: Robbers in Durban took about $8.6 million in a heist early yesterday.

Aug. 8: South Africa's gold and currency reserves last month shrunk by $176.6 million to $2.1 billion. In June this year it was $2.25 billion and in July last year it was $2.4 billion.

The Minister of Safety and Security, Sydney Mufamadi, announced a crackdown on gangs sowing terror in the Western Cape, and on Islamic vigilantes who killed a gang leader.

Aug. 9: Former Cabinet Minister Pick Botha urged Mandela and other South African leaders to call a national convention on crime. "There is no liberty in a country where people are killed in the way they are being killed in South Africa," he declared at a National Party function in Pretoria.

Aug. 10: Mandela called on all sectors of society to stop protecting criminals and to inform the police of any evidence of crime.

Aug. 11: Black parents who won a battle to get their children accepted at a previously all-white high school in Groblersdal in Mpumalanga are now considering removing them because of intimidation.

Aug. 12: Rioting erupted in Cape Town yesterday when police and troops moved in on a Hanover Park march by armed Muslim vigilantes, who have vowed to eradicate drug dealing by local criminal gangs.

Aug. 13: The South African Police Union has come out in support of a national convention on crime, saying South Africans were losing faith in the ability of the authorities to deal with the scourge.

Aug. 14: Special task force groups have been appointed by the government to track down so-called "spook-workers" in government services. Several thousand people who are not working are receiving monthly salaries from the government.

Aug. 15: When chaos erupted at universities in three provinces, the police had to intervene to restore order. At the University of Zululand in Natal the police used tear gas to force a thousand angry students to disperse after they had plundered the campus and damaged vehicles. At the University of Potchefstroom students damaged buildings and vehicles, and overturned garbage containers. At the University of the North in Pietersburg lecturers dissatisfied with "unjust" salary increases, blockaded the main entrance to the university.

Aug. 16: The rand equaled its all-time low of 4.6 against the dollar set April 26 as the run on the currency continues.

Minister of Justice Dullah Omar and his family have had to move into a safe house following threats to his life by Muslim militants.

Aug. 17: The Reserve Bank, fighting to save the plunging rand, pulled the currency back from the abyss in volatile dealings yesterday.

Aug. 18: Ex-members of the Afrikaner Weerstandsbeweging (Afrikaner Resistance Movement) have been hired by Cape Town gang lords seeking protection from anti-drug militants.

Racial tensions are building at a high school in Kempton Park after a 15-year-old white girl was allegedly raped by two black pupils.

Aug. 20: Political and economic analysts yesterday welcomed Mandela's formal announcement that he will begin a phased handover to his successor in December next year. Most likely heir apparent is 54-year-old Deputy President Thabo Mbeki, the urbane, pipe-smoking economist who already acts as Mandela's Prime Minister.

Aug. 20: The Reformed (Protestant) churches in South Africa have expressed their deep concern regarding the "climate of anarchy" which is increasing in the country.

Aug. 21: The number of illegal immigrants to South Africa is increasing at an alarming rate, according to Home Affairs Minister Mangosuthu Buthelezi.

Aug. 22: According to General Coustand Viljoen, leader of the Freedom Front, there was growing pressure from within the ranks of "ethnic Afrikaners" for the establishment of a Volkstaat, a free and independent state for Afrikaners.

Aug. 27: Four thousand South African whites have left the country during the first four months of this year. Australia is still favored by most emigrés.

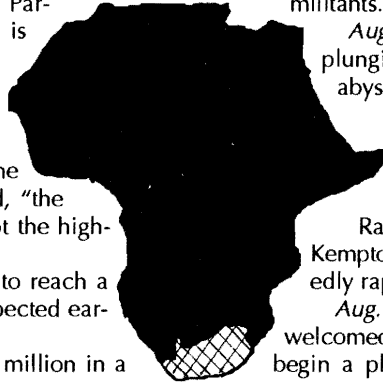

Aug. 30: National Police Commissioner George Fivaz said an extra 1,000 policemen would be deployed in Gauteng (Pretoria, Witwatersrand, Johannesburg and surrounding areas) beginning today in an urgent effort to clamp down on killer hijackings and police murders.

Aug. 31: The big newspapers have all been friendly towards Mandela since he came into power. They sometimes criticize but never attack. This has had a definite effect on their circulation.

According to Mrs. Xingwana, Chairwoman of the ANC's sport study group in Parliament, it is possible the "old apartheid flag (orange, white and blue) might be banned by Parliament if "rightwingers [that is whites] continue their disruptive behaviour at rugby matches."

The tensions are rising.

Postscript: Earlier in the month Dr. Ferdi Hartzenberg, leader of the Conservative Party, announced the Freedom Plan of the party, which aims at creating a maximum of unity among Afrikaners and the mustering of all freedom-loving parties and nations to bring about the fall of the Marxist-controlled government in South Africa.

Canada. Mohamud Saleh, a 27-year-old illegal from Somalia, had a heart transplant at the University of Ottawa Heart Institute. The $75,000 tab was picked up by Canadian taxpayers.

John McCarthy, Director of Publications for CANADA (Caucasian Awareness National Action Defense Assn.) admitted at a meeting of the Edmonton Multicultural Society that he is a "racist" and "proud to be one." He was unafraid to expand on his dangerous remarks: "I can assure you, we Europeans have had just about enough. We're organizing to protect our rights." He indicated that minority racists are just as racist as he is, but manage to camouflage their racism with the help of a compliant media.

The Writers Union of Canada and some top-ranking academics have rushed to the defense of Gerald Hannon, a journalism teacher suspended from his job at Toronto's Ryerson Polytechnic University, for his stentorian endorsement of pedophilia. In one outburst he decried the notion that sexual contact between children and adults is unethical. Despite this verbal bilge, the Toronto Globe and Mail, Canada's N.Y. Times, went so far as to compare Hannon to Socrates. Neither the Globe nor Hannon's clique showed any sign of disapproval when he announced he adds to his income by moonlighting as a homosexual prostitute. Canada's cultural cesspool, like that of its southern neighbor, stinks more every day.

Britain. For several years Nigerian and Ghanaian gangs, some living in Africa, have been running a $62 million-dollar-a-year racket importing 2,000 stolen Mercedes to Britain, then shipping them to West African countries.

France. The five months' occupation of the Bernard de la Chapelle Church by illegal immigrants embittered French anti-immigrationists more than ever. At long last the government sent in 450 Republican Security Guards to dislodge the squatters. Of the 300 occupants, however, only 40 were aired back to Africa at taxpayer expense. The others were released by courts sitting in an emergency Sunday session. The "poor" blacks were defended by teams of super-posh advocates.

There were constant visits to the holed-up Africans by dyed-in-the-wool supporters of abortion—women-lib celebrities who went overboard pampering the pickaninnies, some born during the siege. For the first time feminists were caught glorifying, not denigrating, maternity. Ironically most of the illegals were polygamous Muslims, whose menfolk consider females little better than cattle.

French leftists and Jews have called for the arrest of Front National leader Jean-Marie Le Pen for declaring, "I believe in the inequality of races." Le Pen illustrated his thesis by reminding everyone of the very "unequal" performance of blacks at the recent Olympics, the inference being that if one race can run faster, perhaps another can think faster. For engaging in such allusive discourse, Premier Alain Juppé called Le Pen a racist. Counterpunching and not missing a beat, Le Pen demanded that Juppé resign because prime ministers should not engage in insults.

Two "youths" waylaid a 14-year-old French student in the center of Marseilles in broad daylight and knifed him to death. They didn't like his looks. Police called it a "gratuitous, savage, hateful crime." The two killers, described as North Africans by a few American papers, are still at large. The backbone-less French press is very anxious to avoid any connection between race and crime.

Spain. Last July some Israeli "researchers" showed up in the library of the 11th-century Benedictine monastery, Santa Maria of Montserrat. After they had left, monks were mortified to discover that some of their most precious manuscripts were missing. In early September, one of the Israelis, an alleged rabbi, had the chutzpah to return with another group of "researchers." This time the Spanish police were alerted and searched them as they left. Abraham Asur, a Jewish shoe salesman, had three manuscripts in his shirt, one in his briefcase and a small rare book cached in one of his pockets. He was charged with theft, released on $16,000 bail and fled to Tel Aviv. The other Israelis were released after spending a few nights in jail. The first nine manuscripts stolen have still not been recovered.

Germany. As of the first week in September, the German translation of Daniel Goldhagen's Hitler's Willing Execution- ers, a massive racial polemic against the German people, was the #4 bestseller—40,000 copies printed, 30,000 in the hopper. In the 1930s racial supremacy ruled the roost in Germany. In the 90s racial masochism is the thing. Who knows, maybe in another 50 years, there will be a bestseller entitled, Netanyahu's Willing Executioners, a bestseller dealing with the extinction of the Palestinians.

Russia. The most promising Russian leader, General Alexander Lebed, fired by Yeltsin in mid-October, is an honorable man intent on ridding the Russian plutocracy of corruption and residual communism. His current team of advisers include similarly minded army men like General Rodionov and Jews like Mikhail Leontev, Leonid Radzikhovskiy and Vitaliy Najshun, who want to establish a "free market" dictatorship. Other advisers, such as Golovkov, Filin and Migul, are liberal free market advocates who oppose any sort of dictatorship. Another Lebed consultant is the chairman of the Islamic Committee, Geydar Dzhemal, who advocates a union between Russia and the now independent Islamic republics. Lebed's main financial backer is Boris Abramovich Berezovskiy, a Jew who provides Lebed access to Russian TV.

Lebed is on friendly terms with some Jews, but on unfriendly terms with others. His famous barb at a Cossack who interrupted him during a speech, "Why do you talk like a Jew?" has sent fearful frissons down the spines not only of Russian Jews but of Jews worldwide.

From a Russian subscriber. Nations derive sustenance from land, and the riches of that land are a basic strength of a country. Chechnya sits on the northern tip of the same body of oil from which Saudi Arabia and Kuwait pump their wealth. It is high-grade oil, much better than any other deposits in Russia. Before the attempted breakaway, fully 90% of the aviation fuel produced in the former Soviet Union was being made from Chechen oil. It is simply not serious to think that Russia will let Chechnya go. (At this moment the fragile peace agreement worked out by Lebed is still holding.)

Chechens have racial links to Iranians and Turks. Their IQ is not that of Germans, not even that of the Slavs. Chechens represent a typical Turkic type—low intelligence, low attention span, short temper, brutishness. We can add terms like "brave," "independent-minded," "nationalistic," "high level of ethnic solidarity," but the bottom line for Russia is that the Chechens, being unable to create an economically viable society based on the rule of law, will, when left alone, become a bandit state, as was demonstrated during a brief period of their "unilateral declaration of independence," when Chechnya became a refuge for the most wanted criminals in Russia, as well as a center of illegal arms and drug trade. The Chechen mafia is the most brutal and most successful in Russia, with tentacles spreading as far away as Germany and Hong Kong.

If the Chechens succeed in breaking away, it will be "perfectly natural" for them to seek additional sources of revenue by offering the U.S. or other countries deals on military bases and other types of cooperation detrimental to Russia's interests.

I hope no reader of Instauration believes for a moment the picture presented in the media that Russia cannot crush "that small but determined nation." Russia, obviously, has the means of destroying all human settlements in Chechnya in a few weeks. But that, of course, cannot be done, since world public opinion is not something to be easily trampled on. Pretty much the only strategy for Russia is to prolong the conflict, to be able to say: "Yes, a hundred thousand civilian lives have been lost, but it was a brutal war, waged by a fanatical band of terrorists, which has resulted in a loss of 20,000 of our young soldiers."

An ultimate objective in this war would be for Russia to depopulate Chechnya and to bring in the Russians. Stalin did just that in a few days, in the Crimea, one of the most massive resettlement operations in human history. But the world is very much different today. It's no longer acceptable to put a nation into boxcars and ship its citizens to some Kazakhstan. Essentially the same goal can be achieved by devastating Chechnya over a course of a decade or so, then offering "development loans" to the survivors if they will take up residence elsewhere. The Kremlin bosses would love to do this without having to sacrifice tens of thousands of their soldiers in the process. But they are realists. They know the price and power of world public opinion.

Many people must ask themselves, where did the rebels get their arms to sustain such an intense conflict for so long? A book, The Chechen Transit, provides the answer. It was published in Russia last year and describes in considerable detail the arms supply route for the rebels. It starts in Turkey and goes through a few airfields and mountain passes in the Caucasus all the way to Chechnya. Even though it is a large operation, it could be effectively terminated with a few thousand soldiers posted at the critical points. The book, understandably, produced a scandal in Russia. How is it possible that an investigative reporter found everything out before the generals did?

In this baffling conflict everything is possible.

Israel. In some ways Binyamin Netanyahu's career resembles Clinton's. Large lacunae are found in their résumés, along with serious questions about character. The newly elected Prime Minister of Israel went by four different names in his early days in the U.S. as a student at M.I.T. and later as a political adviser to the Israeli Embassy in Washington. These four names were his present official one, his student name Benjamin Nitai, and two others that appeared in various documents: John J. Sullivan and John J. Sullivan Jr. The Malibu (CA) addresses given for the last two names don't exist.

Two Israeli reporters tried to shed some light on the mystery by looking into Netanyahu's Social Security records. They were rebuffed, one reason being that his file had been given a "confidential" classification, which is only enjoyed by five categories of people: FBI, CIA, IRS, terrorists and criminals. The best guess is that, when he had dual citizenship, Netanyahu probably had some association with the CIA.

Netanyahu's biggest supporters in the U.S. are or were Reubin Matheus, the Häagen-Dazs ice cream magnate, who gave millions to the late Jewish supremacist, Rabbi Kahane; Marvin Josephine, publishing company exec; Barry Slotnik, a lawyer with more than lawyerly connections to the Italian- and Russian-Jewish mafias; Ted Arison, the cruise line king; and cosmetics mogul Ronald Lauder. Netanyahu's most powerful non-Jewish booster is said to be Rupert Murdoch.

In 1950, 25% of the population of Israel was Christian. Today it's down to 3%. In 1940, 45,000 Palestinian Christians resided in Jerusalem. Today the number has shrunk to 10,000.

Canadians built a $41,000 playground for Palestinian children in East Jerusalem. In late summer Israeli bulldozers leveled it to the ground, along with a partially built Arab community center, claiming no one had obtained a proper construction permit. It's probably not an exaggeration to say that Zionists bulldozers have done more than bullets to ethnically cleanse Palestinians from their homeland.

The latest edition of Britain's authoritative Jane's Sentinel tears away much of the mask covering the Israeli military: 177,500 personnel are on active duty in the Israel Defense Force at any one time, 140,000 of them draftees. Not included are 429,000 reserve soldiers. Ground armament consists largely of 3,800 tanks, 1,800 listed as "high quality." The Air Force has 664 fixed-wing aircraft and 225 helicopters. The Navy possesses three subs. Estimates of the number of nuclear warheads range from 100 to 300. Fifty Jericho 2 and 160 Lance missiles can deliver the warheads to any place in the Middle East and perhaps well beyond.

The original Palestinians were called Philistines, a name that became a sort of cuss word in the vocabulary of not only Ancient Hebrews, but also of modern Jews and non-Jews who have swallowed Zionist propaganda. However, instead of being "crass, priggish and materialistic," as dictionaries have it, the Philistines, among their other talents produced pottery that displayed skill and great beauty. While their Israelite contemporaries were manufacturing undistinguished pots. . . the Philistines were fashioning a distinctive material culture [Biblical Archaeology Review, Sept.-Oct. 1996].

Discussing the more than 100 civilians killed in Lebanon in April, Israeli columnist Ari Shavit wrote:

We killed them out of a certain naive hubris. Believing with absolute certitude that now, with the White House, the Senate, and much of the American media in our hands, the lives of others do not count as much as our own. . . .

Think of what would happen if any American public official or corporation executive had said the above! Jews can tell the truth about themselves, but the ADL sees to it that no non-Jew can tell the truth about Jews. It's a nice arrangement for an ethnic group that might have something to hide.

A sort of clone of David Bowie, Israeli rock star Aviv Gueffen has some morale-lowering news for his adoring fans.

I am ashamed to be represented by a person as crude as Netanyahu. The dream of peace has been destroyed. It is time for us to put our affairs in order and decamp. I am serious.

Japan. Two other Japanese women have been raped since the violation last summer of a 12-year-old girl by American Negroes in Okinawa. Prime suspect in one of the rapes, this time in Japan proper, is a U.S. staff sergeant, race unspecified.

How to Work the Media

A couple of years ago I embarked on a letter-writing campaign in the opinion section of my local newspaper. I was trying to combat a nagging depression over the darkening tragedy of my race. Since I write better than I speak, I first avoided the local radio talk shows. Eventually I was compelled to participate in them as well when I found the political correctness of many talk show participants to be intolerable. I wanted to lend moral support to like-minded callers. I think I have been somewhat effective in my endeavors. If every city had someone who cares as much as I do about the white race, our impact could be boosted a hundredfold.

Middle Eastern policy and history are my subjects of choice. The lack of information or the twisted information about that important area makes it an appropriate target for "the other side of the story." I am not above using erudition provided by a renegade Jew like Noam Chomsky, who is in a much better position than I am to acquire a great deal of suppressed information. What do I care if I am using or even plagiarizing a Marxist, if it suits my purpose? I avoid Holocaust Revisionism because of its complexity and my lack of expertise.

When using radio, it helps to develop a relationship with the host without becoming obsequious and by cooperating with him on topics that do not compromise your principles. But never let him manipulate you.

I am careful not to overstate my case. Stay away from asinine conspiracy theories or outworn clichés. When dealing with the mainstream media, subtle insinuation is more effective than pejorative phrases like "Knesset West."

You do not have to compete with the talk show host in glibness, if you are able to provide information most Americans will be shocked to learn. Common sense is more useful than logorrhea in talk radio.

I am only now acquiring the confidence to take on Rush Limbaugh or Gordon Liddy. I have heard one excellent and articulate caller tear into Liddy like a pit bull during the Republican primary, culminating in the caller being "iced" when he brought up the U.S.S. Liberty. The pro-Zionist misinformation shoveled out by both these trucklers has become unbearable.

Certain tactical differences are required when using the newspaper format. The goal here is to have an effective and convincing letter published. Most newspapers in small and mid-size cities are independently owned and will occasionally publish pro-Arab letters. I suspect that many editors have been intimidated by Jewish advertisers for publishing pro-Arab material and are only too happy to receive the rare well-written missive critical of Israel. Several surveys show that the letters to the editor section is read more avidly than any other part of the newspaper.

Replying to specific columnists is very effective, especially within two or three days. Logically organized, focused and concise letters are more likely to be published than long, meandering ones. Let some passion show and don't be afraid to write something hard-hitting. But don't be shrill or abusive. Leave that to the anti-Buchanan staff writers.

Try to view letters from the readers' perspective. Stifle the urge to insult. The purpose of your letter is to inform not alienate.

Use facts and references to books or mainstream articles to bolster your case. Proof and re-proof your letter before you mail it so you can spot any errors or inconsistencies.

It may only be a matter of time before unfocused white zealotry brings on hate crime laws that will forbid polemics on racial matters. We are racing against the clock in the fight to wake up whites and make them more racially aware. If we don't act now, we may lose the unique opportunity we can still take advantage of. Activism rejuvenates the spirit and hones debating skills, but it is not a game for egos. It is a deadly serious business. The survival of our race may well depend on such skills. Substantial knowledge of the topic under discussion is required, as well as concentration, dedication and a clear and sensible mind. You are not preaching to the choir, but trying to urge your race to come to its senses. Debating goofs, nutty dogmatism or illiterate remarks will get you nowhere.

ADL Pays the Piper

The ADL settled a suit for spying on and invading the privacy of people who subscribe to the Weltblick it opposes by agreeing to pay $175,000 towards the legal expenses of the plaintiffs—12 civil rights groups and seven individuals. Two years ago the ADL shelled out $75,000 to the city of San Francisco after the District Attorney dropped criminal charges of purloining confidential police documents by one of the organization's vast stable of informers, snoops and moles. Despite the settlement, charges of unlawful conduct by the ADL still stand and will not be erased.

Hillary Sued

On behalf of 700 former White House employees, Judicial Watch Inc. is suing Hillary Clinton, Bernie Nussbaum and sundry other Clintonians, plus the FBI, for $90 million. The plaintiffs charge that they were severely harmed by the defendants' mishandling of the FBI files that were illegally passed on to the White House.

Irving Unbanned

David Irving, barred from Germany, Italy, Canada, Austria and Australia, was almost banned from a military show in Monroeville (PA). He had to get a judge's order to override the wishes of the owners of the premises, who, caving into Jewish pressure, tried to keep him out. In the end common sense and decency prevailed and Irving was able to set up a table and sell 100 copies of the British edition of his biography of Goebbels. At present Irving is looking around for an American publisher for his book, which was arbitrarily cancelled at the page proof stage by the lickspittle St. Martin's Press. Some small-time publishers have indicated interest in the book, but Irving is holding out for a mainstream publisher. He may have a long wait.

Web Info

Several subscribers have asked if Howard Allen is planning to establish a Web site. We are thinking about it. Meanwhile at least one company is promoting and selling Instauration and Howard Allen books on the Internet: Fenix Books, Box 224, Kingville, MO 64861. Phone: (816) 732-3954. Anti-Immigration Video

A hard-hitting videotape is available to those who want ammunition to fight for a cutback or an end to immigration, legal or illegal. With the help of a series of dramatic charts Roy Beck, an author and immigration expert, brilliantly and convincingly demonstrates that, if the present immigration influx is not sharply reduced, the U.S. will literally collapse from too many people demanding too many services and putting too great a burden on the environment. In only a few decades vast areas of the country will literally run out of clean air and clean water. The 25-minute tape, Immigration by the Numbers, can be ordered from the Social Contract Press, 316½ E. Mitchell St., Petoskey, MI 49770 or call 1-800-352-4843. Price is $9.95 plus $2.50 shipping and handling.
