

26 "Jewlie" 05. Hail D.R.!

Many thanks for yours of 21 July.

As you can see, I am using paper imported from China, like most everything is these days. It is hard to predict trends in politics, which is synonymous with "people-power". One general observation is that the number of rulers is always much smaller than the number of ruled.

Whenever a new conqueror appeared to oust the previous rulers, the masses of sheeple would enjoy what they could under the new regime, & they would suffer what they must. I have not read that any conquered people welcomed Genghis Khan or Tammerlane as 'liberators', compared to the treatment afforded them by their former rulers. It is reasonable to consider that 'mass political movements' would be unlikely to occur within multi-racial territories, other than the mass-struggles predicted in "Civil War Two", in which all diverse groups fight for turf of their own, similar to the latest Balkan conflict. As our states devolve into imperial entities, the term, "national government" will fall into disuse. As one jew writer exulted, the concept of the nation (for Goyim) is so eroded that such an entity is no longer possible, because 'world powers' will not permit such entities to exist (except for Israel!). The jews hope that the nationstate will remain a thing of the past, & not of the future, for Goyim, that is. The racial separation which I see developing, however, provides the ZOG with opportunities for ruling through division, but it also threatens to tear apart their Jew World Empire. Iraq is a good example, in which the Brizog policy of divide & rule made their occupation of oil-rich Iraq costly & uncomfortable. We see the same results of that policy in Iraq today. The key to mass-movements is the mutual-recognition of identity. Islam appears to function, currently, in terms of this recognition. If lots of people identify themselves with others who have common factors of identity & interests, they are likely to agree on mutually-held ideas, values & resultant policies. Without such an inclusive & exclusive identity, a mass-movement is unlikely. Orders from Headquarters are unnecessary if believers agree on what should be done & how to do it, plus when & where. This is a form of leaderless resistance, in which followers agree on their strategic goal, so they are able to tailor their tactics to local conditions. A recent example of this method was in the formation of The British Empire during the age of sailing ships. Isn't it remarkable how London could have its policies carried out by its minions in Calcutta, without satellite telephones & jet aircraft? Genghis Khan had good communications by pony express with his commanders in the field, but communications are limited by lack of understanding & mutually-agreed upon priorities. Genghis Khan's orders were simple: "Carry on conquering & killing until I say stop!" There really was no need for E-mail, although I'm sure he would have enjoyed bloody descriptions of his commanders' conquests. Well, one can't have everything. One writer mentioned the 'horror' of "Genghis Khan with a telephone," but he really had no need for the device. Imagine his annoyance at being interrupted by a phonecall in the midst of an orgy! I think he'd command the caller to have his head cut off. Genghis Khan would be best off left alone! One would communicate with him at his convenience. Until then, your messenger could wait outside his yurt, slurping yogurt & yak-butter tea, whoopee!

As you say, states are formed to protect rulers' & residents' living space, so one wonders where the world's rulers reside, in multiple dwellings strewn over the planet? If Cancun has bad weather, they can skip down to Canberra et al. Such people are nomads; well-heeled Gypsy/Robber Barons in reality. Their loyalty, as such, is only to their own 'tribe', not to the people & places they exploit for their criminal purposes. One wonders when their evil-doing will blow back in their greedy faces, for those who ruin the planet will have no place of refuge from their criminal folly. If Man will not get them, Nature will, but She will get lots of us first.

The question is, can sufficient people derive their unifying idea & purpose from common crises & circumstances? If so, gurus & leaders are unnecessary, yet, the passengers on The Titanic had to be told to man the lifeboats, because the ship was sinking, yes, really! Those who ignored the warnings were probably reincarnated as Rhodesians, South Africans & North American Whites, who are reliving their Titanic experience on continents, rather than a Cunard liner. I wonder what they will find in their next reincarnation, if that is possible. Life is just full of little surprises, especially for the willfully-ignorant. ORION! E.T.