

16 OCT 05. Dear Tom: Many thanks for your informative & insightful letter of OCT 11th! You point out the necessity of freeing our imaginations from Jew domination via their control of the media of education, information & entertainment. Indeed, why should the change of season be "sad", "glad", "mad" or whatever? To me, a snowfall is beautiful, regardless of any shovelling it involves, for I call that "winter sport". Try shovelling rain! Ha. One may as well have morbid thoughts about the passing of the hours & the days on the calendar. For me, the rapid passage of days (according to my impression) indicates that I have been active doing things, instead of waiting for things to happen. In my experience, when time appears to pass slowly, one is not living to the fullest extent of his capabilities. Jews like to impose their emotions on us, as Freud tried to impose his neuroses & psychoses on his gullible victims. One Jew 'science' commentator explained subatomic particle behavior in terms of 'likes' & 'dislikes', as if the particles might decide to change their 'minds'. This is as nonsensical as claiming that a train 'likes' to derail when the tracks are damaged. So let's hear some romantic music for these subatomic particles, Mr. Jew, thank you. The changing seasons & the passage of time do stimulate different impressions in different observers. My impression is: "Wow, I've lived to see another autumn!" The fact that there are fewer autumns ahead of me is not so important as the fact that I am savoring this one. Alan Watts had a Zen answer for a theoretical someone who might enter a symphony hall with an orchestra playing: if that someone would ask, "Why are they playing?" it would mean that the questioner is not listening! A sense of humor empowers us to see good fortune & disaster as Kipling's "two impostors", as well as to appreciate a joke which comes at one's own expense. Such power is ours, as long as we do not let a Jew capture our feelings & our imaginations. As Mark Twain advised: "Dream better dreams!"

Freemasons alias Bank of England agents deny that they belong to a secret society. As you observe, Freemasonic lodges & organizations are ubiquitous & highly visible. As Freemasons say, they are "a society with secrets." We Gentiles or Profane, as they call us, can view the outside of the lodges without knowing anything about what goes on therein. We tend to think, "how can anything bad be going on in such ostentatious structures?" "If their buildings are out in the open, how could they be hiding anything important?" As you say, their lodges serve similar purposes as the Morlocks' "air raid shelters" served the Eloi. I ask such Goyim if they have never heard of an evil king who lived in a big castle? Outsiders would not even hear the screams in the castle's torture chambers, & it is quite difficult, even today, to see into rooms without windows! O.K., Goyim, let's hear a big DUH! You deserve it, so make it louder: DUUUH!

As you noted, architecture is often meant to impress the beholder, usually with the importance of the buildings' owners. Banks were built like fortresses in the past, when they actually may have held gold & silver therein. Solid construction with a fortress motif connotes to the observer that someone or something important & valuable is kept therein, or someone or something very dangerous is kept therein, as with prisons & powder magazines! Fortress-style banks strive to maintain this pretense, even though they only contain I.O.U.s & ledger entries. In poker, that's called bluffing, which the banksters have done since ancient times, in which they were empowered to create money out of nothing! By behaving AS IF there was real wealth in the banks, the public are led to believe that symbols of wealth have magically become 'solid'. P.T. Barnum & H.L. Mencken would understand.

Hitler understood the value of architecture, so he built great government buildings & public structures like autobahns & stadiums, to show folks that business was big, churches were big, but the state was BIGGER! To top that off, Hitler's state belonged to the German people, not to any class, cult or commercial clique. Thus, when people saw a great public structure, they saw themselves, & they could feel proud & important. Size does count in people's perceptions of themselves & their environment, but there is no substitute for great men. As we have noted, the number of great buildings seems inversely proportional to the number of great men in our society. The Trade Towers come to mind, much like the great figure that was touted as "The Wizard of Oz", which turned out to be a hoax, operated by a charlatan. Alas, the Goyim are still gullible & very easily impressed. Where is Toto, when we need him?

Aircraft carriers are known as IST's to military personnel: Large, Slow Targets. They are the battleships of today. Battleships were floating artillery parks, & carriers are floating airfields. Each requires a fleet of other ships to protect it, as well as air cover, 24-7.

2) One military strategist on the Internet opined that the U.S. empire MUST lose against modern enemies, by the very nature of its military-industrial complex. As we know, the military is a hierarchy in which advancement in rank correlates with the SIZE of the officer's command: more men, more & bigger ships, more aircraft, more tanks, helicopters, &c. Bigger & more numerous items connote 'cumbersome' in terms of logistical support & rapid response, as we saw in Vietnam. Large units rarely catch small units on the ground, when the small units can detect the large units' approach & fade into their surroundings. Such experience is typical for guerrilla warfare combatants, ever since Napoleon's forces tried to fight the first official guerrilleros in Spain. The Brits called such forces "irregulars" & World War II vets called them "partisans". In World War I, such combat groups were called "franc-tireurs", who were summarily shot, if they turned out to be civilians. Previous rules of war allowed for reprisals when civilians fired on uniformed troops. In World War II, Eisenhower proclaimed that for every Allied soldier shot or killed in German territory, 200 Germans would be executed. That was apparently the record for reprisals in World War II! Of course, the Allied genocide which followed Germany's surrender was much, much worse.

U.S. imperial forces are doing their best to adapt to "irregular" enemy tactics with improved surveillance, weaponry & communications, but time does not appear to be on the side of the U.S. empire, since the U.S. casualties continue to mount, with no end in sight. Iraq has proved to be the proverbial Tar Baby for U.S. forces, & the enemy shows no hurry to let them get unstuck. On the contrary! As an aside, the U.S. policy in Iraq & Afghanistan bear an embarrassing resemblance to the Soviet policy in Afghanistan, complete with "women's rights" & phoney elections. U.S. allies in Afghanistan are the former Soviet allies, such as The Northern Alliance. In Vietnam, we repeated the French colonial experience, & in Afghanistan, we repeat the former Soviet experience, after using our former allies, the Taliban, to kick the decadent USSR out. Then, as is typical for the USA, we switched sides & took the place of the former USSR! U.S. allies must always beware of the U.S.! The U.S. regime's insistence on imposing its version of 'democracy' in Iraq merely makes civil war more likely, for the Shi-ites & Kurds are represented for the first time since Saddam. If the USA is serious about uniting Iraq, then it must bring Saddam back! The longer U.S. forces remain in such places, the greater our defeat in men, money & materiel, every day, & the 'victory' Bush & Company want becomes like a desert mirage, receding into the distance.

If our Zionist rulers were sane, they'd go back to basics with Clausewitz & Sun Tzu. It is obvious that our ZOG has no comprehension of the definition of war, which is the seizure of territory from its previous occupiers. In view of the unopposed alien invasion of U.S. territory, our "Defence Dept." & its Commander in Chief are totally irrelevant. Another object of war is to weaken & destroy one's enemy's ability to wage war, militarily & economically. This we are doing to ourselves! Another object of war is to have your enemy's commander doing exactly what you want him to do, as if he were your agent! Bush is doing everything the Chinese claimed they wanted him to do, on behalf of enhancing Chinese power & diminishing U.S. power. Does this mean that Bush is (1) A Chinese agent? (2) Stupid? &/or (3) Crazy? Am I & the Chinese General Staff the only ones who can see that? Stay tuned! If the USA does not have "a regime-change" soon, there won't be a USA. That much is obvious.

The so-called History Channel studiously omits Stalin's intended invasion of Europe in 1941, which was scheduled to follow upon Hitler's anticipated invasion of Britain, just as the jew banksters had planned it. Instead, "Operation Sealion" (the invasion of Britain) was a hoax & Hitler attacked Stalin, just as he intended when he wrote his "secret book" in 1928, before he was elected Chancellor of Germany! Rudolf Hess conveyed Hitler's peace offer, once again, to Britain, only to be disregarded by Churchill & his kosher cronies, as we know. Why does "The History Channel" fail to cover this important history? I suspect there are too many kosher Stalinists in charge of that program to let the truth out. The Britzoggies have the Hess File locked up for a few more decades, after their murder of Hess in Spandau Prison, for fear that the Soviets would let him out on their watch, back in 1987. In law, such behavior is classed as "mens rea" (the guilty mind, evidence thereof). Yes, the Brits have lots to hide, but evasion will not save them from the error of their ways & their crimes against the White Race, including their own people. The tragedy is that the penalties will be paid by those who had no part in their grandparents' evil-doing. The same goes for the Foremost Felons of the USA.

All the best. DOWZ! & ORION!
