

26 FEB 06. Hail Joshua! Many thanks for your great letter of 19 FEB 06 & your new address! Many thanks, also, for your German introduction! I remember my first German lesson: The instructor said that "German & English are pretty much the same. Ein Hand is a hand; ein Finger is a finger & ein Feuerzeug ist ein Feuerzeug..." Although German alias High German alias Prussian is a Germanic language, like English, Swedish, Flemish, Dutch et al. Its grammar strikes me as similar to a Slavic language, such as Russian, or a Romance Language such as Latin. To use an analogy, grammar is like the skeleton & vocabulary is like the flesh, which make up the entire living body of the racial-cultural expression which we call language. A linguist referred to certain languages as "bridge-languages" in which peoples & cultures have combined. He mentioned English as one such, for it has a Germanic grammar, but lots of badly-pronounced French words. French is grammatically a Romance language, but may be evolving into a variation of Arabic, in view of its large Moslem minority. According to a BBC documentary, English developed from trade between Scandinavians & Germans who invaded the British Isles. As I gathered, Keltic languages such as Scottish, Welsh, Irish, Manx & Norman, spoken by the French of Normandy, contributed very little to the development of English, which, as I understand, was basically a variant of Saxon. French words were largely introduced into English by the Normans who conquered England. The Normans were Norsemen or Vikings who spoke French, which they adopted from their French-speaking subjects. Why would the conquerors adopt the language of those whom they conquered? As I understand, the Vikings were a minority & the people whom we shall call "French" (Kelts) were the majority, whom the Vikings enslaved. When slaves outnumber the masters, who want the slaves to do the masters' bidding, it's easier for the masters to learn the slaves' language than it is for them to teach the masters' language to all the slaves! Although French became the official language of the Norman rulers of Britain, as had Latin, when the Romans ruled Britain, neither were the language spoken by the majority. This is why official British court records were in French & Latin. As I gather, English did not exist in writing until the invention of printing. According to my sources, the invention of printing was the basis for modern English, Italian, Spanish & German (The Gutenberg Bible of the 1400s).

Romanian grammar, as I was told by a linguist who was studying it for the U.S. government during the Cold War Scam, is the purest form of Latin in use, more Roman than modern Italian! As a bridge between the Romance & Slavic languages, Romanian has Latin grammar, & is full of Slavic words. It is even written in Cyrillic, the alphabet normally used in such Slavic languages as Russian, to throw the linguist off the track, I suppose. Ha! As I gather from my readings of history, "Romania" was a territory settled by former Roman soldiers, as self-sustaining occupiers. As the Slavic majority filled the territory, more & more Slavic words were added to the original Latin, until it was largely the Latin grammar which remained. Romanian names are often more Latin than are common Italian names, according to the linguist, with whom I spoke. When I attended graduate school in 1968, the Communist ruler of Romania, Ceausescu (sp?) visited us, apparently on a 'goodwill' tour. I also attended a talk given by Dr. Joswig of the DDR's Economic Institute, which was most informative. When I tried to look him up, during my visit to East Berlin in 1969, their jew head of Stasi, Markus Wolf, ordered me kicked out of the DDR. I was unable to visit Dr. Joswig to say how much I appreciated his talk in California! Wolf now works with his fellow tribesman, Chertoff, in our alleged "Homeland Security" racket. As for Ceausescu, he was the only Communist dictator to be killed when the Soviet Bloc countries switched from kosher Communism to kosher Capitalism, for Romania under Ceausescu had no national debt. If I recall correctly, he was replaced by the jew, Landau, who changed his name to "Roman," so it seems that Romania now has a national debt to the international jew-banksters, as all countries do, with possible exceptions of some Moslem countries like Iran & China, which appears to lack only oil to make it "The World's Creditor." One reason for these Communists visiting the USA was likely the "Prague Spring" thaw in the "Cold War", which was deemed premature, apparently, by the big jew banksters. The jew, Daniel Cohn-Bendit, was leading the pro-Communist student strikers in Paris that year, so there was a mutual recognition of spheres of interest between West-ZOG & East-ZOG to clamp down on this unrest, so the banksters could do their mischief with the old teams, before they began a new game plan with new players. Besides, there was so much invested in the old weapons & the old uniforms! The USA helped chill the "Cold War" thaw & the USSR helped cool off the Communist-inspired brushfires in Europe & Latin America, as I gathered from my sources & firsthand experiences in those places. Looming out of this phony war between East-ZOG & West-ZOG, among other items, was the major split between Mao's Red China & the USSR. Western jewsmedia tried to cover up this conflict with their

2) numerous citations of "The Domino Theory," "The Marxist Monolith," & "The Brezhnev (sp?) Doctrine" (once Commie, always Commie). Western zoglins & jewsmedia prated that Communism was united, so Red China & the Soviet Jewnion were just two legs of the same Marxist Monolith. The countries of Asia & the entire non-Communist world were like dominos, waiting to be toppled into the shadow of Monolithic Marxism, unless the USA & NATO intervened with the usual gallantry, heroism & altruism which FDR's ZOG had accorded "our gallant Soviet Allies" of World War II. West-zoggies also insisted on The Breshnev Doctrine, that once these dominoes toppled, The Marxist Monolith would never give them back! Oy veh! As Orwell predicted in "1984," World ZOG would bemuse the "proles" or Goyim with a phantasmagoria of boogeymen in a funhouse of concocted horrors. Thus distracted & dismayed, the bankster-bosses could pick our pockets, as our unwitting admission fee to enter their kosher slaughterhouse, like the Morlocks' "air raid shelters" depicted in "The Time Machine" by H.G. Wells. This scam is ongoing & apparently successful, so the ZOG has maintained its "perpetual war for perpetual peace" scam with a new boogeyman: "terrorism", which is even less-defined than "communism" was in the previous "Cold War" Hoax.

A professor of mine said, "There are no Big Secrets," for they are often in plain sight. But one of the 'secrets' of the "Cold War" was indeed the rift between Red China & Red Russia, at least it was pretty secret from the Goyim, the proles et al. As I wrote in a little book entitled, "China, the Jews & World War III (Secret Soviet Border Wars)", the U.S. purpose for being in Vietnam was, among other things, to open a second front in a planned war against China, in a usual USA-USSR alliance, hopefully with NATO & Taiwan. With a second front in Indochina, Red Chinese forces would have to split, thereby drawing off pressure from the USSR in the north, just as Stalin's buddy, FDR, did by starting a second front against Germany in Europe. There were clear indications of this Sino-Soviet rivalry: No supplies reached North Vietnam, the Soviet client state, from China. They all came by sea, via Haiphong Harbor. The Chinese railways were allegedly "out of order." Radio Beijing's international broadcasts denounced the USSR, much more than they did the USA. These broadcasts were frequently jammed by a powerful CIA-funded radio transmitter in the Andes, much to our disgust in California! Hebrewood was cranking out pro-Soviet propaganda: "55 Days in Peking", "The Kremlin Letter," & one in which the jew, Peck, flees to safety from Red China, into the arms of 'our gallant Soviet Allies.' This anti-Chinese propaganda also appears in "The Sand Pebbles," except that the 'bad guys' were not the Chinese Communists, but the thugs of Chiang Kai-Shek, our soon to be World War II ally. USA-USSR collaboration was evident in Vietnam: U.S. ports & bases were left for the North Vietnamese to takeover. U.S. ammo for South Vietnam was dumped into the ocean, according to U.S. sailors, just as we did to Chiang Kai-Shek's forces in their war against Mao's Communist forces. The final proof of my thesis was China's sudden attack on Vietnam, following Vietnam's unification under the Soviet client regime, & their subsequent proxy war between the Chinese-backed Khmer Rouge & Vietnamese allies in Indochina. As always, economics provides the necessary background for such conflicts: a major prize in Indochina, for all parties, was the Golden Triangle of Laos, a major opium/heroin production center, with the CIA's Air America supplying transportation, as resulted from U.S. occupation of Afghanistan, where the Taliban tried to curtail heroin production & opium-growing. If anything, the U.S. war against the Taliban, our former allies against the Soviet occupiers, was for increasing the opium harvests! Oil was a major cause for World War I, for the British wanted to seize the Turkish oilfields of Kirkuk & Mosul, before the Germans tapped into them, as an ally of Turkey!

Now that oil is so important, World ZOG & its U.S. slaves are likely to attempt to grab Middle East oil in a major war, touted as "crusaders versus terrorists." It will be interesting to see what ZOG intends to do with the Moslem peoples who now live on the lands with oil underneath. A major war could ignite the oil & badly contaminate the real estate, much more than we saw in our previous invasion of Iraq, but Israel takes precedence over oil, as we see now, in Iraq, & so it may be for Iran, 'cause the jews don't care about us!

I'm glad to read that you have lots of literature to study toward your education. We are all self-taught, regardless of academic degrees, & "lifelong learning" should start sooner, than later, for the Germans observe that "we grow too soon old & too late smart." Our real job is to take advantage of all opportunities to learn, so that we may know how to turn our stumbling blocks into steppingstones. Our minds can improve by exercise, as do our muscles. Your residence is not much different to that of monks, or even college students, so I'm sure you will make the best of what your ZOG-gulag has to offer. All the best to you, & ORION!
