

17 APR 06. Dear Shappa: Many thanks for your letter of 12 APR 06. I hope you are getting settled in your new abode, along with your belongings. If "a change is as good as a rest," please let me know. I find moving tiring, not restful, so maybe it is not the process of changing, but after the change has been made. I prefer a rest, rather than a change, myself. Ha! Good luck on your law studies.

I don't recall hearing or reading about "Project Monarch," but I've discovered plenty about the CIA's MK-Ultra Project which was headed by a top-kick CIA kike, whose name I presently forget. I am terrible with names, although I rarely forget faces. According to a magazine article on the CIA's LSD/mind control program, this LSD-sheenie had fun slipping LSD into people's drinks, including that of a CIA employee named Olson, who died under mysterious circumstances. His relatives still want to know what happened to him. But pranks were already being played with LSD prior to MK-Ultra. LSD was extracted from the poisonous fungus, ergot, by a Swiss chemist in 1941, who noted its "psychotomimetic" nature. That was the first word to describe LSD's effects, for it mimicked clinical psychoses. The fun-word, "psychedelic," had yet to be coined, perhaps by those missionaries of LSD: Alpert & Leary. As far as I know, the Jew, Alpert, is still alive, although he now calls himself "Ram Dass." But that gets ahead of the story. So it was in 1941 that a psychosis-causing drug which was tasteless, odorless & practically invisible had been created. Very few people knew of its existence, so we may wonder who they were, & what they did with the discovery. According to an essay by R.L. Petersen, who worked in the inter-library book lending department at Walter Reed Hospital, he noted (likely in the late 1960s) that certain books on LSD were circulating in the system. He read them & his research provided him with sufficient information to write his essay, which I had published in Liberty Bell: "The LSD Murders & other Terminations with Extreme Prejudice." AN LSD victim he reports is Secretary of Defence Forrestal, who objected to the USA's recognition of Israel in 1948. Petersen wrote that he began to show LSD symptoms, such as acute depression. Imagine how we would feel if we went into a diner & saw all the customers at the counter melt into shapeless blobs which ran down the stools, onto the floor. One fellow saw that at a Thanksgiving dinner, which amused him no end, for he took LSD on purpose to make the family gathering more 'interesting.' But imagine if we had no idea why we were seeing people melt into blobs & flow onto the floor! We'd most probably think we were going crazy. Usually, people find the prospect of madness depressing, so Secretary of Defence Forrestal may have been having similar experiences in 3-D, surround-sound & in living color. LSD-takers have told me that their hallucinations are just as 'realistic' as real life, & they say they can change them, like switching channels. But, imagine if we did not know how to do that, either. Petersen figured that someone was dosing Forrestal with LSD, without his knowledge, in 1947. Petersen also believed that LSD was behind the suicides of the Gentile publisher, Graham, whose Jew wife kept his name & took over his position on the newspaper, whose name I forget. The Washington Post comes to mind, but that may not be it, for it was in 1963, when I was in Colombia. That was the year Ernest Hemingway showed signs of depression & killed himself with a shotgun, just as Graham had done. In November of 1963, JFK was assassinated, which I learned when I heard the news on the radio, in Spanish, in Cali, Colombia, so I have an alibi!

But MK-Ultra was a thing unto itself, more about mind-control than murder per se. When I returned to California in 1967 to resume my studies of International Relations at San Francisco State University, the Hippie Era was winding down, but drugs were well established in the Haight-Ashbury District alias "Hashbury." Sheeple had branched out from pot & LSD to anything they could get "high" on. Basically, I was surrounded by fools who wanted to lose their minds, & many of whom succeeded. LSD had negative effects on people I'd known for years in college, & after awhile, I no longer considered them my friends. They had become destructive & dangerous to themselves & to me, as well. It reminded me of an old horror film, "The Invasion of the Body-Snatchers." Some of the women were real wackos, who even scared me, after 2 years amongst bandits in Colombia! But my firsthand experience was of minds out of control, not under control.

MK-Ultra was focussed on the mind-control aspect in Canada, under a Dr. Cameron, who later died in a mysterious skiing accident. This is why I shunned the spook business & stuck with journalism. Cameron worked out of provincial looneybins. People with mild mental complaints would get checked in for examination & evaluation, including treatment for what ailed them or what they imagined ailed them, only to discover that they were prisoners & guinea pigs for all manner of mental manipulation via drugs, electroshock, & Dr. Cameron's

2) pet program which he called "psychic-driving." The subject was sedated & exposed to a taperecorded message which repeated over & over, so the patient would not forget &/or his behavior would change. I pass a local "behavioral modification" clinic on my way to Walmart, here in Brownest Yakima. So far, I haven't heard any screams from their "aversion therapy" department. Such 'therapy' was portrayed in "The Clockwork Orange." What was the outcome of MK-Ultra? To my knowledge, the program worked most effectively with alcoholics & people with unstable personalities, but I understand that MK-Ultra rendered them even more dysfunctional. Rather than producing competent robo-agents, MK-Ultra produced people unfit to ride a bus. This could also be ZOG disinformation to hide real successes of the program, if any. President Bush behaves like one of MK-Ultra's failures, since his English is so badly damaged. It is embarrassing, even to me, when The President of the USA cannot think of a simple word in mid-sentence, & when he frequently uses the wrong word in his speeches written for him by the jew, Frum. I winced when Bush used "perpetuator" when he meant "perpetrator." Clearly, Bush is doing the work of 3 men, "The 3 Stooges."

"The Bourne Identity" is a recent rehash of the "mind-control" theme in movies. I believe the first was "The Manchurian Candidate," of the 1950s, starring Frank Sinatra, if I recall correctly. In some respects, "Bourne" was in a similar situation to that in which I found myself, after my exile from the USA in 1969, but "Bourne" did not know who he was. I knew who I was, but I did not know what side anyone else was on. There was a 'fun' aspect, for "Bourne" spoke foreign languages. I left Sweden speaking Swedish, albeit not fluently, & arrived in Rostock, East Germany (DDR) where I spoke German more fluently; travelled to London, where I could not speak Pakistani, thence to Rhodesia, where I could speak English. It was in 1969 that I discovered I was "persona non grata" in the USA & all Soviet Bloc countries, including Cuba, although I still have no desire to visit Fidel. No, I never was in the spook business, but Markus Wolf, the top-kick kike in the East German Stasi, insisted that I was a "spy," so he made sure I left East Germany. Markus now works for his buddy, Chertoff, along with former KGB chief Primakov in "Homeland Security." The USA deemed the East German Stasi "a terrorist organization," so our "homeland" is secure? Well, with 20-20 hindsight, I can say that The Cold War was fun, as far as I was concerned. I usually travelled in comfort & never had to go under the wire to cross borders. "Anything for the quiet life," as the Brits say! That's why I went to Central Africa, "for reasons of health."

In the oncoming crises, survival skills will come in handiest, as well as knowing how to live on a basic minimum of things you can make for yourself, since computer jobs go to China & India, along with manufacturing jobs. Manual labor jobs are done by illegal aliens, & the wages are falling because ZOG wants an infinite supply of ever-cheaper labor. As one economist wrote: "It's a race to the bottom."

Thanks for the two envelopes. I noticed that your gulag-zoggie stamped thereon that it comes from a prisoner, so I could not use it to send you this letter. Now, two of my correspondents on the 'outside' may think that I am a prisoner in my P.O. Box. Ha! Again, many thanks for the postage-paid envelopes, for I can always use them.

If you can obtain a copy of Thomas Chittum's "Civil War Two," I can recommend it. So far, every prediction he has made is coming true, with the omission of China's increasing importance in North America, & the rest of The Western Hemisphere. I asked him to write a sequel, including information on China, which wants this continent so bad, they can taste it. The enclosure on China refers. It appears that our ZOG is doing all it can to make this continent safe for China, which has already invaded Canada alias China-duh, as non-Asians now call that country under CANZOG. According to the last Canadian census, Mandarin is now Canada's second spoken language, not French. I heard that some Chicago schools are now offering Mandarin instruction so U.S. students will be "with it." I understand that there are openings for White rickshaw-pullers in Toronto, Canada, & I can inquire if you are interested. I can't go there because I'm a "thought-criminal." Knowledge is valuable. I recall a fellow who took his car into a garage, because the engine kept conking out. The mechanic raised the hood & told him to start up. The starter motor ran, but the engine wouldn't start. Then the mechanic tapped something under the hood with his crescent wrench & the engine roared into life. "That'll be $50," he said. The customer protested: "But you only tapped twice under the hood!" The mechanic replied: "I'm not charging you for the labor, but for knowing WHERE to tap." The customer paid, not just for the work, but for the lesson.

All the best & ORION!

Eric
