3 JAN 07. Dear Michael: It was great to receive your letter & enclosures of 26 DEC 06. I put your latest address on the envelope which I sent you today, before I had time to answer your latest letter, which is a cogent essay on prison conditions. Many thanks! I judge by your latest change of address that you are progressing, I hope, toward your goal. Thanks, also, for your insights on prison staff & prisoner (mis)behavior. On behalf of equality, I suggest that guards & prisoners be dubbed "denizens," for that is what you all are, if you want to get along or not. One can argue pro & con about instilling an adversarial relationship between guards & convicts, but I see the relationship as one of interdependence, in which friction is best avoided for the duration of all denizens of the ZOG-gulag. Prisoners have noted that top zoggies appear to desire the creation of 'low-level conflict' in the gulag, designed to keep prisoners ill at ease, &c. My impression from your descriptions is that your zoggies zig when they should zag: they insist on 'equality' where it does not exist, just as they exaggerate the unequal treatment of particular prisoners. They need to do a 'reality-check' against ZOG's 'politically-correct' illusions, for they refuse to acknowledge what works & what doesn't in prisons, as well as in Iraq. As you say, the U.S. prison system seems best designed to make guards become sociopaths, rather than bring about 'correct' behavior for prisoners' readmission into society.

As a layman, or amateur in penology, I see one major conflict in 'corrections' as the Plato versus punishment approach. Plato's idea of 'corrections' was not to make a "worse person" of the offender. Hence, he objected to chopping off hands of thieves, &c. so the offender could return to society with his full powers, now directed to do good. The punishment approach seems aimed to instill a Pavlovian association between misbehavior & deprivation, so as to 'cure' the offender of his offensive behavior. The USA never quite decided on which approach to use, so it remains stuck in between, between punishment & improvement. National Socialist Germany used a redemptive approach in which the offender was able to WORK his way back into society. One's willingness to work showed the prisoners' desire to return to society as a useful & productive member thereof. "Arbeit macht Frei" meant "Work makes you Free." It did not mean, "Here we gas jews," Hebrewwood to the contrary. What we see in the USA are large numbers of youth who have no skills, nor knowledge to be productive members of society, & even less desire to be so. Our judeo-capitalist society is training youth to be anti-social. Not only do we lack job-training, but we lack jobs, thanks be to ZOG. We need to ask if we are training prisoners for life outside prison, or are we just training them for life inside prison? It looks like we are becoming a Soviet-style economy, in which 1/2 is hired to guard the other 1/2. That economy failed in the USSR, & it is sure to fail in the USA.

Your description of thwarted do-gooders whose p.c. illusions are punctured by reality, causing them to become bitter, twisted psychopaths is right on. It reminds me of the talmudic admonition that "a lie kills 3 persons: the one who tells the lie; the one who believes the lie, & the one who is lied about." Your zoggies should study their Talmuds (63 books in the English Soncino Edition). Ha!

As you observe, crime equates with multi-culturalism, in which values & behavior differ. Imagine a multi-cultural version of sports, in which cricket rules are mixed with football rules, &c. In a monocultural game, such as baseball, there are no multiplicity of rules, just one set thereof. The umpire or referee has an easy job, but how would he fare if the players each used their own set of rules for their respective games, on the same playing field? And what about "Holy Harold" who believes that "God" has told him to shoot the goalie? I can imagine the viewers fleeing such a multi-cultural sport, to avoid being hit, as occurred in a bloody Peruvian soccer riot. Apparently, this is just what our rulers want for U.S. society: "Civil War Two." There are examples in living memory of societies in which crime was minimal, because everyone believed in the same set of rules & saw themselves as one people. Such societies needed very, very few cops & even fewer lawyers! Bad people were shunned or otherwise dealt with, so they weren't around very long. Different values in one society is a formula for high-intensity conflict, which can only be resolved by separation of the antagonists. Our rulers should be made to live in the dystopias they wish to create for us. That is why I affirm DOWZ! & ORION!
