12 APR 07. Esteemed Ron: Indeed, there are all sorts of greetings in correspondence which are not used in face to face conversation. When the telephone came into general use, one fellow, perhaps Edison, favored "Ahoy!" as the greeting, but "Hello" crept in, for some reason. So much for "Salubrious salutations," &c. I favor "Hail!" in correspondence, for it is a sign of cordial respect, as one warrior to another.

Your analysis of ZOG's gulags is similar to that of Ho Chi Minh, who wondered what sort of punishment it was to be quartered in a fortified palace, & served by uniformed attendants 24-7. He thought that such accommodations & such respect was extremely flattering.

I see nothing wrong in repetition, when it appears in an appropriate context. That way, the reader need not look up the subject in his correspondence files, due to his own fuzzy memory.

Yes, White nationalities are indeed different. I have noted distinct regional characteristics amongst Brits, who also recognize them. Even sociologists have advised that one should marry another with whom he has most in common, although nowadays ZOG promotes adultery with non-Whites, so as to destroy the White Race. Yes, Germans tend to be workaholics in my experience as well. When East & West Germany combined, West Germans complained that the former East Germans were "lazy." Wow! Nor do Germans favor lying, as you say. An acquaintance in Toronto, Canada, was a real estate agent. She said that Chinese lie worse than Jews. Before putting a house on the market, she'd ask the Chink owners if they had a full basement. "Oh yes," they'd say, but when she took a look to make sure, she'd often find that there was barely a crawl space beneath the house! At least she usually found that they had a house of some sort to market.

For some 50 years, I have been putting out the best information I have for the sheeple. As a result, I've been kicked out of 5 countries, & I'd be arrested for thought-crime were I to travel anywhere outside the Jewnited States. I've lived in Fascist Spain, where making a clenched fist Commie salute was illegal. I therefore restricted my gestures to the approved Fascist salute. In Communist East Germany, the Fascist salute would get one arrested, as well as in Zionist West Germany, so I did not make a Fascist salute. I didn't make a Commie/Purim Jew salute, because I didn't have to. If the sheeple have not responded to my message in 50 years, why should I endanger my own freedom, such as it is, to inform those who aren't interested, & anger those who don't want such information spread? You may have seen "3 Days of the Condor," in which the character played by Robert Redford learns a big bad secret. At the end of the movie, the professional assassin, played by Max von Sydow, my favorite Swedish actor, advises him that the establishment media will not report his discovery, so he's stuck knowing what fatcat felons don't want others to know, & which the ignorant are not interested in knowing. That's exactly where I was when I tripped over The Cold War Hoax in 1969. Obeying the law is not quite the same as cutting one's throat. In my experience, principles protect people. People do not protect principles. There is a limit to which one can protect sheeple from themselves, especially when they are unwilling to do so, when the necessary information is laid out before them. You can lead a horde to wisdom, but you cannot make them think. I have faced the prospect of death several times, had I not heeded the friendly warnings given me by the minions of the USA-USSR when they told me to leave certain jurisdictions. Those who did not receive or did not heed such warnings were killed on the spot, as occurred in Chile & in Rhodesia, for example. When people with guns tell you to move, you can defy them, if you like, but I had nothing to lose by moving, & I lived to increase my knowledge, as well as my lifespan by so doing. Most sheeple only begin to learn things when they are locked up. Those who are 'free' don't learn anything useful.

Yes, I am aware that I am dependent on the ZOG for my living, but who isn't in this Land of ZOG? When ZOG's empire collapses, what will I do? Right now, my people seem unwilling even to consider this possibility. They don't want to know. Personally, my life has been surprisingly long, so my death would not surprise me. My regret is that I have failed to mobilize Whites on behalf of their own survival.

Thanks for your insight into the Katja Lane Mystery. I've met Ron McVan, but not her. As you say, there is a definite male/female discrepancy in regard to sexual interests. I've heard many mature women refer to young males as their "boy-toys." This means there are jobs for gigolos, if the trucking industry dries up. In lieu of that, there are openings in Toronto for White rickshaw-pullers.

You mentioned 50¢ & a busride. In "Yakivegas" there's a 'success story' about a Yaki-moron who drove down to Las Vegas in a $50,000 Porsche. After a week there, he came back on

2) a $100,000 Greyhound bus!

The USA has always been a plutocracy, like ancient Rome, which was also a republic for the rich. That's why mere 'citizens' barely get the time of day from "public servants" & "representatives." It's so obvious that we have the best government money can buy. The $ connection in the justice system is at least as obvious. I knew a hold up man who'd done time. He knew that was part of his job description, if he stayed in that 'industry,' so he saved money for his day in court. When it came, he had sufficient to pay his lawyer, who bribed the judge, who gave him a much lighter sentence than he deserved, as he told me. I asked him if it was that simple: you hire a lawyer to bribe the judge. He said that's what he did, & that's why he was out. After he told me what happened on his last hold up, I had to agree. His M.O. was to stand in a cashier's line with a cardboard square under his arm. When he reached the head of the line, he'd rip the two layers of cardboard apart & place one piece on the glass of the cashier's window. The cardboard had masking tape so it would stick to the window, & a blasting cap with a simple timing device. He'd shout "Duck!" to the cashier, as he dove beneath the counter. The blasting cap would shatter the glass, & he & his partner would proceed to rob the cashier. On his last hold up, the cashier didn't duck, so she was blinded by the flying glass. He paid her $10,000 to silence her.

You wisely observe the use of psychology in our Judeo-American society. Courthouses, as you say, are substantial, designed to intimidate. That's why judges sit higher than everyone else in the courtroom. This is why Federal Reserve bank buildings are built like fortresses, to fool the Goyim that they really have something valuable therein (aside from jew I.O.U.s). Even the gold at Fort Knox has been adulterated with tungsten rods, according to a Wall St. Journal article. Who stole the gold? ZOG only knows!

Plato agrees with you in regard to criminals who project their own criminality on others. Liars suspect others are the same as they are, &c. This is how Socrates via Plato proved that virtue was its own reward. It is also said that cowards die 1000 deaths, & brave men but one. Herman Melville lamented the lack of trust in the America of his time. I point out that no one would accept money, if trust did not exist in our society. I accept money for work because I trust that others will accept it in exchange for things I need.

I had a chuckle over your habit of sealing your envelopes after enclosing your letters. It reminded me of a Scottish birthday present in which the writer said that he intended to put some money in the receiver's envelope, but he'd already sealed it! Many thanks for all the postage, by the way, & the address labels. You should be receiving "Mister Penny" & other material, pronto, for I sent it off today.

As you say, wealth is not only a privilege, but also a responsibility. I see it as a responsibility to one's people, one's folk, one's community, for they give one's wealth its value. If I live amongst bandits, idiots & savages, what can I spend my wealth on? Wealth can become a liability in times of instability, for one who is presumed wealthy attracts bandits. As you say, how much wealth does anyone need, after his basic wants are abundantly satisfied? Jews crave wealth on behalf of more power & more money for more & more of same, on behalf of themselves & their people. This is the only reason I would seek wealth beyond my immediate needs: for MY people! But, where are they? I have searched for my Folk my entire life, without finding them. Likely, I've looked in the wrong places. My people come from the Orkneys & the Hebrides, but I'd be a "foreigner" according to ZOG, & I'd need some economic means of living where most people have to earn their livings elsewhere, as my seafaring ancestors did for centuries. Hence, my 'home' is wherever I can make a living, as it is in mestizo America, at least for now. In regard to dying, I think it would be a luxury to die among one's folk or family. My attitude is described in Kipling, whom I paraphrase: "When you're left dying on America's plains, & the jew-quacks are coming to carve up your remains, roll over to your weapon & blow out your brains, & go to your god like a White man!"

Indeed, you'd be wasting your time on "Might Is Right," for the paragon of achievement is described as the pot-bellied bankster, who knows how to succeed within the system. Savitri Devi would call him "the man IN time."

National Socialist Germany recognized human inequality, so men & women who had leadership ability were not displaced on a class basis, as in socialist countries. That's why Krupp kept his place & others were allowed to keep their honestly-acquired property. I understand that there was no Marxist graduated income tax to kill incentive, but there was one requirement: one's wealth had to benefit Germany, not vice versa.
