

21 APR 07. Dear Tom: It was great to receive your letters of 14, 15 & 16 APR 07. Yesterday, I enjoyed an experience of my misspent youth: a religious discussion with Cristeros or Christ-eaters. These discussions are predictable, & they take the form of a rondo, which is a circular theme in music, that just goes round & round. I first get the Christers to agree on a major premise: that their god is all-knowing, meaning he knows the future in the absolute sense. Thus the god would have to know what people will do before they do it. They all agree, but they quickly deny their major premise, that their god is all-knowing, by positing "free-will." I point out that this denies their major premise, so they tell me to take it "on faith." I reply that logic is not a matter of faith. It is a matter of meaningful language in simple terms of opposites, like STOP or GO, ON or OFF, OPEN or SHUT, HOT or COLD. It is absurd & therefore an insult to my intelligence to expect me to believe that a god can be "all-knowing, yet unknowing." My faith is that such an impossible god could not exist. So then, the Christ-eaters begin their fear & guilt mantra that Jesus, the ever-loving god who died for our sins, will torture me for eternity. I said that you know no more about Jesus or a god than I do. What if we come before our creator on your judgement day, & you find that She is Black? We honkeys wouldn't have a hope in hell, now would we? Seeing that I was almost late for the post office, I concluded by saying, "We agree to disagree, so just remember: there's a sucker born every minute, but not this Goy."

Oh, they (the 3 Christ-consumers) also told me how lousy life is, so we should look forward to The Big Christian Cookie in the Cosmos, in the sweet by & by. I replied that they sound miserable, so they should end their misery by joining Jesus a.s.a.p., rather than conspiring to make others miserable. I mentioned that there are numerous buses in front of which they may step, & freight trains are notably efficient for sending those who step in front of them directly to Jesus/Satan/Yahweh without further questions. After you, gentlemen!

Yes, your weather seems unusual, as well as in the NE portion of Usrael alias Zoglandia. Sheeple are growing tired of relating such events to "global-warming," so maybe they will blame it on ZOG chem-trails or other conspiratorial apparatus.

Emperor Bush II is indeed scraping the bottom of our imperial barrel for military personnel. Many of the National Guard appear to be of retirement age, so why not give them a free vacation in Bagdad? No doubt they have seen "The Thief of Bagdad," so they are well-prepared for such an adventure. I believe Bob Hope & Bing Crosby performed a Middle Eastern drama in one of their "On the Road" skits, in which they dressed up like Shriners in turbans. If The Middle East 'needs' democracy, then so do we, but why don't we start at home?

I tend to agree that Chittum's "Civil War Two" may occur sooner than he predicted. May first is to be El Dia de Muchos Mestizos, who will re-enact their victory parade of last year in Brownest Yakima, alias Aztlan, which they have "reconquered" for La Raza (The Race, meaning their race, not ours). They didn't do this by themselves, for it has been the anti-White fatcat felons who hired them under the table, for low wages, while the White tax-payers more than make up the difference. As some CA kikes told Eric Margolis: "Every cheap laborer brings in some 15 dependents." It's a good deal for Mr. Kike, but a bad deal for the Gringo tax-payers. Neither the invaders' wages, nor the money they may pay the IRS can begin to cover their costs to the U.S. tax-payers, according to my research.

In the smoke of ZOG disinformation, conveyed by its jewsmedia, I dimly perceive two dominoes: War with Iran & The North American Union, so beloved of our ZOG, ever since the Mexican War. All sorts of things can occur in a state of emergency, as history reveals. Terror has been the foremost tool of tyrants, & Emperor Bush is no exception. If it worked in the past, why not try it in the present? ZOG knows.

Thanks for reminding me about the U.S. Olympic boycott against the former USSR, because of their Afghanistan invasion, during which I was out of Zoglandia, while working in Soviet Canuckistan alias China-duh. If what goes around comes around, it would be fitting that the USA be boycotted, unless some invaders of Afghanistan are 'more equal than others.' Let's hear a big cheer for hypocrisy!

It would appear that The Western Hemisphere is indeed being divided into new spheres of interest, like the Pope's division of The New World between Spain & Portugal. History does repeat: Perhaps North America will be in the Israeli orbit & South America into China's. The demographics of so many Chinese in North America, specifically Canada, may bend that projection, however. As I see it, the Eurasian (mestizo) invasion from Mexico et al. will serve as a brown glove for the Yellow Hand of China.

Oh, many thanks for the "Homeland Security" bug-out list of emergency goodies. Such reminders always help, when or if we must abandon ship. Now, all I need is a poster showing silhouettes of Enemy Aircraft, which include Zeppelins & Stukas. Then I shall be fully-prepared! A tinhat & gasmask would also be useful. I already have the 'glory-bag' in which to carry them.

Inflation is evident, despite kosher ZOG-stats to the contrary. As you do, I also care about the prices of necessities, such as food & shelter, relative to my earnings, for I am able to tailor my lifestyle to my means, by avoiding inessentials, such as the automobile. When I lived in Rhodesia, I lived quite well. Food & housing were cheap. One moron said he was going to move down to South Africa, because he could earn double his salary. I said he should think again, for the South African Rand was worth $\frac{1}{2}$ the Rhodesian Dollar, while food & housing were much higher than in Rhodesia, but gasoline & stereo sets were cheaper in S.A. I said that I was not interested, since I did not eat stereos nor drink gasoline. I lived much better on $\frac{1}{2}$ the salary in Colombia than I did in the USA, in terms of food & shelter, plus leisure time, like vacations with pay. I also managed to save \$100 a month, as I barely did at twice the salary in the USA.

Mongrelism & multi-culturalism do accompany the fall of empires, which cause them to lose focus & understanding. The USA Empire has long been afflicted by such quantitative thinking in which bigger, more & cheaper are deemed 'better', without regard to quality. I recall a Hebrewwood film entitled something like, "The Brave Young Men in their Jaunty Jalopies," which featured the longest & most tedious pie-throwing scene I can recall. The jews seem to have figured that if one pie in the face was funny, then 1000 pies in the face must be 1000 times as funny. As an eyewitness & a survivor of this Hebrewwood pastry-performance, I can say that it was not funny, but I am just a Goy, so my opinion doesn't count. I recall the alleged joke about the Pentagon's Vietnam War computer, into which the zoggies fed all "relevant data." Then they asked it, "Who will win the Vietnam War?" The computer spat out the answer: "The USA won it ten years ago." The "relevant data" were such things as how many battleships has Vietnam, how many aircraft carriers, how many troops, how many artillery pieces, &c. On quantity alone, a ZOG computer would deem the Vietnam Debacle over before it began. But General Gavin saw the conditions under which the Vietnam fiasco were to be fought & he resigned with a dire prediction in 1961, that the conflict could go on as long as 12 years, at a huge cost in blood & treasure, to achieve worse than nothing. He was certainly right. The Vietnam Conflict was indeed a military, demographic & fiscal disaster, but like all wars, a very few profited at the expense of the many. As Werner Sombart said: "Wars are the jews' harvests," & Vietnam was no exception, as General Butler concluded about World War One.

Your observations on wooden wheels, with or without spokes, does not address the issue of voracious termites which are endemic to Africa & Latin America. If one parks his wagon too long, a day, perhaps, the termites will go to work. In Colombia, few houses had wooden furniture, for flying insects would consume it. Interiors were of tile & concrete, for a house with any wood components would disappear. Cheaper structures were made of adobe with tile roofs, & frequently of "lamina" or corrugated, galvanized steel. Tables & chairs were made of wrought iron. I discovered that some wood-eating critters, which I have not identified, ate a classroom table from inside, so only the paint remained, as I discovered when I put a book on the table. It collapsed in a cloud of dust & insect excrement. Bamboo & iron-wood seemed resistant to termites et al., but nothing else of vegetable origin. Books did not survive very well under conditions of humidity & a variety of voracious wood-borers. I had some polyester shirts in my room, in a cardboard box, which I had not worn for months, because polyester is uncomfortable in the humid tropics, much like wearing a plastic garbage bag. I therefore used cotton or wool clothing! The wee wood-consuming critters bored holes through the box & the shirts therein, so the shirts looked as if they'd been holed with birdshot. I gave them to a needy Colombian, who may have created a new fashion sensation: tiny holes running through the fabric with the outlines of a bandolier or sash. Such shirts would probably be cooler in the humid heat, since there was less shirt than before.

I observe all over the world that muds' produce mostly muds, not what they need to survive on. White inventiop & productivity have fed a population explosion, so 'global-warming' is all our fault. Most likely, muds will blame us, while remaining totally depend^{ent} upon our technology. In Africa, they do not maintain the White technology upon which their numbers depend. Whites invent & forget. Yellows copy & remember. Blacks destroy. Monkeys don't do that. The game continues. All the best. DOWZ & ORION!
