

WHY THE CONSTITUTION FAILED

by Professor Revilo P. Oliver

January 1987

It is a truism that we are mortal and that the ineluctable necessity of death is inherent in the biotic structure of our being: "nascentes morimur." But oddly, perhaps, we Aryans also have an instinctive longing for a changeless eternity: "Doch alle Lust will Ewigkeit." And since reason forbids us to hope for personal survival, we want our works to endure when we are no more, and to be, if not eternal, at least diuturnal.

We cannot without sorrow reconcile ourselves to a universe which, by its very structure, forbids permanence. Nations that are not degenerate intend to endure to the last syllable of recorded time. But that they cannot do. Herodotus wondered at the mysterious fate that ordains that states and empires, like men, are born, flourish, and die. Our history is a long succession of nations that rose, waxed mighty, declined, and fell, as did the greatest of them, the Roman Empire. Other races have fared no better. Egypt left her pyramids as her memorial, and here and there throughout the oecumene shattered stones remain where once there were great cities and, for a time, the pride of empire.

Round the decay of that colossal wreck, boundless and bare, the lone and level sands stretch far away. And almost every year archaeologists open the graves of dead civilizations and exhume the pathetic remains of forgotten nations that once thought themselves deathless.

We cannot, however, acquiesce in passive fatalism, and our historians necessarily strive to ascertain the cause of each nation's decline and fall, hoping to learn from the past the secret of national mortality. For the great mutations of history the causes are always multiple. In his almost comprehensive survey, "Why Rome Fell" (New York, 1927), Edward Lucas White lists twenty principal causes, including, of course, the spiritual pestilence called Christianity.

We have not yet joined the past. Our race is sick, perhaps mortally, but, proverbially, so long as there is life, there is hope.<sup>(1)</sup> Prudent men ascertain the causes of their malady and the errors in their own conduct that brought it upon them, for they hope thus to discover a means of regaining health or, at least, obtaining knowledge that will preserve their progeny from their mistakes.

12 June 07. Ahoy, Tom! Or isn't it raining that much in your area? ZOGNews claims "Dem waters be arisin' fum dat global warmin'," but water shortages are afflicting the land of Usrael. People & sheeple always complain that there is too much, too little or the water is in the wrong place. Then there's the problem of quality: the water is too salty or too polluted. I recall an ad for Rhine River water. It showed a smiling skeleton. The caption read: "Rhine water makes you slim!"

Thanks for your observations on the Turkish-Kurdish conflict which threatens to extend into Iraq. I read a book by an Israeli author whose name escapes me. Bar Zohar comes to mind, but it may have been a pen-name. The book described Israel's "Peripheral Policy" in which Israel would cozy up to non-Arab countries behind Israel's Arab opponents up front. Hence, Israel supported Iran during the Iran-Iraq War by, among other things, supplying Iran with aircraft parts obtained from the USA against USA interests. The USA was supporting Saddam's Iraq, & supplying Saddam with any "weapons of mass-destruction" Saddam may have had, ever. Israeli intentions were to eliminate Arab-ruled Iraq in any case, which our very own FEDZOGUSA did for them. Aren't we nice Goyim? Turkey is a jew peripheral 'pal.'

I understand that the hebes would have been happy to occupy their kosher corner of The Turkish Empire under Ottoman rule, had the Sultan granted them permission. Problem was, the Arabs were there first, & in such numbers that their displacement would destabilize The Empire, exactly as T.E. Lawrence intended with his Arab Revolt. Some political writers lament the demise of The Ottoman Empire as well as The Austro-Hungarian Empire, which they saw as stabilizing factors in politics. I suppose The Roman Empire played such a role, for a time. Perhaps the USA wants to play that Roman role on behalf of Israel & Global Zionist-Capitalism alias the Jew World Ordure. What I see from U.S. imperialism is anything but 'order' & stability, & I'm not the only one to see that! One author, Peter Tompkins, as I understand, was said to be writing a book on the U.S. role in creating World Instability. Tompkins is an 'insider' within the ZOG who wrote a great book entitled "The Magic of Obelisks," which revealed the Judeo-Luciferian elements underlying Freemasonry, including a photo of Satanist Crowley's 33° Freemason Certificate, which is 'honorary' & cannot be earned.

I agree that it would be a good deal if a restored Turkish Empire would re-absorb its Turkish diaspora in Europe, & then resume its wog-bashing on the unruly Arabs et al. of The Middle East, but that would involve turning back the clock.

T.E. Lawrence promoted nationalism in The Middle East. That idea took hold with the Turks under Kemal Attaturk, who hated Arabs & Islam, which he believed had been 'holding back the Turks' during The Empire. My dictionary says his name should be spelt "Ataturk." Sorry! The resultant success of promoting nationalism within the Turkish Empire made the British booty of the oil-rich territory they dubbed "Iraq" much too hot to occupy, so they backed an indigenous dictator & skedaddled to safer locations, as is long overdue for our ZOG-forces in the area. Iraq is proving to be a meat-grinder for zoglings, although top ZOG-dogs claim that our Goyim are willing to bleed & die at present rates indefinitely. As Mencken observed: "No one ever lost a dime by underestimating the intelligence of the U.S. people." According to Clarence Darrow's study of U.S. Army I.Q. statistics, the majority I.Q. of U.S. troops was 70, meaning they had a mental age of 14. That explains their behavior to my satisfaction. I wonder what their median I.Q. would be now. I fear to know, if their mindless behavior is any indication. Darrow's study of I.Q. was for WW I, when recruits were much whiter than they are now. That certainly explains Ostensible White behavior in the past & the present. No, I'm not a "White Supremacist." I'm a White Improvementalist.

The Middle East experienced its version of unity under Moslem rule, which incorporated various tribes & nations, including the Kurds. But The Law of the Contrary entered the picture, as in Europe: Religion unifies, but it also divides, so Islam has its bloody feud between Shia & Sunni, just as Europe had its bloody 30 Years' War between Protestants & Catholics, which sputters on today in North Ireland, to the great detriment of Whites.

No, the Goyim are no wiser since they went on their crazy crusades on behalf of jew-popes like Hildebrand, whose papal name & number I forget: Ah, it was Pope Gregory VII! As I recall from my history, it was the Crusaders who sacked & pillaged Byzantium, which fell to the Turks the very next year. So, by invading The Middle East, the Crusaders provided the Turks' their foothold in Europe. How nice! A prize-fighter said that one learns nothing, until he gets tired. Goyim never seem to tire of victimization, since they are taught to be "sheep." Sheep don't tire. They just get slaughtered. Lieberman says, I hear, that U.S. Goyim should go to war against Iran, as other jews have said. Stay tuned! All the best. DOWZ!
