Hail James! Thanks for your great letter! If I recall correctly, John Locke was an 'atomist' who believed that people are disparate individuals, with the barest of physical connections to others. Correct me if I'm wrong, but I think he posited "The Social Contract," an unwritten document that functions like a culture, in terms of right & wrong, what is to be done or not done. How the jews must have loved atomism, as they did the anarchy of the madman Rousseau, both of whom 'inspired' Jefferson. The jews knew it was all hokum for Goyim. Imagine if one sports team was taught the disinformation of Locke, Rousseau & Jefferson as their role models in, say, football, whereas their opponents were taught to be better team-players, which means looking out for one's fellow team members. If both teams were of similar prowess, who would most likely win, the individualist all-stars or the team that played like a team?

In university I grew tired of the talmudic word-twisting, which had no validity in the real world. Entirely crazy constructs, like Marxism (Christinsanity minus Big Sky Jew), were debated as in a Judenschul, so as to score verbal points on behalf of the sophists: to see who was the best word-twister of them all. Leon Degrelle described his meeting with the jew fiend, the bloody Bela "Kuhn" alias Cohen, whose fellow hebes took over Hungary after World War I. Under Cohen's Red Terror, the workers were being massacred, as well as the peasants. Kuhn/Cohen was asked how he would overcome Hungary's labor-shortage. Cohen grew mystical & alleged that the problem would be solved by "The Machine," with no specifics. Kill your labor, then pray to "The Machine" for productivity. Such a deal. British General Fuller also noted the lack of productive experience in Red leadership, as distinguished from Hitler, who knew the weight of a shovelful of earth, as he'd been a day laborer. Such overpaid word-spinners & 'spin-doctors' often reveal their insane ignorance, as occurred at The Rudolf Immigration Hearings in Toronto. The hebe attorneys accused Dr. Rudolf of "starving" his laborers & "forcing" them to do extreme heavy labor in the tunnels of his underground Missile Factory in World War II Germany. I scribbled a note to his attorney, that these hebes knew nothing of heavy labor, because no whip can substitute for adequate food, any more than a car can be made to run on curses, when its gastank is empty. Anyone who'd ever done a lick of manual labor would know that the hebes' accusations were absurd. But the jews won & Dr. Rudolf was denied a visit with his U.S. citizen daughter in Canada, for he could not return to the USA, despite his many years working for NASA. Nothing teaches like experience.

In this regard, my education, as opposed to my edjewcation, has been pretty good. As a firefighter in the U.S. Forest Service & a graduate of U.S. Army Basic Training, then as a participant in the Rhodesian civil war under Sellout Smith, I learned the use & the heft of standard military weapons & their capabilities, as well as a variety of other handtools. I also know the work it takes to dig a slit trench or a foxhole, not that I ever wanted to make the military my career. What that taught me was to understand the limits which the physical puts upon the imaginary, when the wishful-thinking & propaganda lies are actually put into practice. Such lies are current & evident, especially when they posit human behavior intended for angels, rather than people. Nietzsche noted that man's stomach lets him know he is not a god, nor an angel. As far as I know, National Socialism came closest to a realistic political creed for humans, in practice as well as in theory. It appealed to man's highest aspirations & gave him the means of achieving them. It recognized that we are not "equal", but we can work together as a team, on behalf of our Folk. Communism sought, in its propaganda, to create "The New Socialist Man," an entirely new critter, who remains yet to be discovered, like The Missing Link. Hitler & Co. took man as he is, & wanted him to improve his behavior, within a context of Work, Bread & Honor. I can relate to that.

The Roman motto was: "Train hard & fight easy." So we should also do with our thinking. If we want to travel somewhere we've never been, it behooves us to learn the location, the climate, the geography, the social & economic conditions, & the nature of the inhabitants. We must know how to reach our intended destination & what we will need for our trip. All our preparations must be made before we start on our journey, for anything less may prevent our departure &/or our arrival at our intended destination. DUH! Yet, few Goy denizens of North America ever learn just what sort of place they are in: a Zionist-bankster slave state. A slave may be well-fed, but he remains a slave. That realization is the first step in our possible freedom. Moreover, the Zionist Freemason masters of the USA plantation have seen to the deaths of Whites in all the wars it has undertaken. We give thanks on Thanksgiving for the safe arrival of the Puritans & their White slaves, just as Lincoln gave thanks for the genocidal harvest of Whites in his Civil War. I celebrate Yule, which Christians stole from my Folk to make their version of our holiday. Good Yule to you! Yes, we are part of Earth & vice-versa. All the best. CRION!
