Extract from Victor Yeates' Winged Victory

During World War I Yeates had been, in Henry Williamson's words, an "experienced and valiant pilot" with the Royal Flying Corps. His novel is based on those experiences, although to call it a novel fails even to hint at the qualities that led T. E. Lawrence to call it "one of the most distinguished histories of the War".

In Chapter VII one of the leading characters, a Royal Flying Corps pilot, is asked why America entered the war. This is his answer:

"Inevitable sooner or later. The immediate cause was the Russian collapse putting the Allies in danger of defeat. You see, this war is being financed for the Allies by an international gang that works London, Paris, and New York. It was getting hold of Berlin as well. It dominated St. Petersburg completely, pensioning the government. Roughly it ruled the roost in the whole of so-called western civilization and its dependencies, except the central European block against which we are fighting. It was getting a grip on these, and that is the fundamental cause of the war. For there's one thing financiers cannot or will not see. They have visions of a frontierless world in which their operations will proceed without hindrance and make all human activities dependent on them; but their world state is impossible because finance is sterile, and a state living by finance must always have neighbours from which to suck blood, or it is like a dog eating its own tail. And as the financiers widen their influence it is the ever-lessening group of nations to which they are fastening tentacles that bears the ever-increasing brunt. In a sense, then, this war is a Germanic revolt against the international Jew. In another sense it is a clash of financial despotism with industrial despotism. In another it is a conflict of incompatible imperialisms. In another, a struggle for land for national expansion. But the side on which America has been brought in is the side of international finance. Enormous sums have been invested in this war, and an Allied victory is essential to preserve them as capital. You must understand that all this money that is being lavished on war supplies is not wiped out as it is spent; not a bit of it; it's mounting up as national debt, huge blocks of debt which are held by members and nominees of the gang. When the Associated Powers have been defeated at the cost of a few million more lives, including ours, and peace has been dictated to them, the gang will own a further hold over the Allies in the form of millions of pounds of gilt-edge security. And you may be sure Germany will be held down in the mud and kicked. There'll be a famous orgy of money-snatching over our bones.

"To return to America, the danger of an Allied defeat, that is to say, of the collapse of all that gilt-edge security, had to be averted. Those awful Russians! They let down their masters as much as their masters let them down. So the American politicians were told to be ready for a change of popular feeling, and an intense war-fever inoculation was carried out by the press. It took rather less than three months, I believe, to make the popular demand for war irresistible. That is the reason for the entry of America into our wonderful war. You asked me."

Hail Joseph! Many thanks for your letter of 12 AUG 08. We are all self-educated, so it's just a matter of putting in the time & effort to locate & to learn new material. Your advantage is that you have few distractions, as compared to 'outsiders' who must rush to & from work, worry about gasoline prices, &c. Your problem may be lack of good material to study. Follow your interests, to the best of your ability, for what one is interested in, he does well. In college, I took an Aptitude & Interest exam. The counselor said that the best indication of one's career is usually where one's aptitude & interest levels intersected. If one knows all^about fishing & can think of little else, fishing would likely be his best career choice. I began college as a chemistry major, but I was much more interested in other subjects, such as history. Eventually, I found that I was not so much interested in how someone made a hammer, as I was in what someone did with it. Thus, I left the physical sciences for the so-called humanities. Eventually, I found my real field of interest: International Relations. To study this subject requires that one have a general knowledge of economics, politics (people-power), history, geography & journalism. One also needs foreign language ability & a good sense of how countries function. In one I.R. test, which, for me, was fun, we were required to determine on the basis of contour lines indicating elevation on a map of a fictitious country certain items of infrastructure. Where, for example, would one run a high-volume railroad line; locate a deep-water harbor; a hydro-electric power station & the dam to supply it with water? Naturally, these items have military importance, as well as economic productivity. My goal was to know The Big Picture without getting too detailed, for details are the purview of espionage, & I always wanted to avoid the 'spook' business. I was out for my own knowledge, rather than some specific item of intelligence for some agency. Besides, "There are no big secrets," as one of my professors said quite correctly. History has taught me how ignorant some compartmentalized high security clearance holders can be. I always objected to restrictions on questions I could ask & people I could talk to, since I was out to inform myself, first & foremost, so I could make proper decisions in the investment of my time & labor. So far, I've not become rich, but I managed to avoid starvation on the basis of my knowledge. I've paid my way to travel around the world almost twice, & I never got into debt.

But enough of my trivial pursuits. Addictions are BIG Things, for where does the person begin & the addiction leave off? Addictions are reinforced by habit, association & by physical chemistry. That's why smoking is so hard to quit. I never smoked because my father did. When he lit his first cigarette of the day, he coughed & pounded his chest. Then he'd say, "I wish I didn't smoke!" He never had to tell me to avoid that addiction, which gave him lung cancer & a miserable death. Zero tolerance is the only correct policy, just as you say.

Is life so boring that one must exist in a daze? I hope not! We have so much to learn, which is not only interesting, but can be the key to our better living. As you observe, some people get 'high' out of a death-wish, since they are so bored with life.

It is grotesque that so many wear the symbols of White Pride & Honor, but who are, themselves, degenerates. They remind me of some preachers who tout virtue publicly, but secretly practice every vice known to man. As you note, such trash get their inspiration from Hebrew propaganda: "Hey, if I'm a total creep, I must be a 'Nazi!'"

We must be political soldiers. It is wisely said, "In politics, don't get mad. Get even!" A soldier is disciplined, so he does not let his emotions sabotage his mission. Often, this is hard to do, as you know.

Thanks for telling me about "The Eagle's Nest." I hadn't heard of it. If you can spare a copy, I'd appreciate it.

As for your questions, I don't know what the differences are between the two "Mein Kampf" translations. America seems to be balkanizing, with the voluntary separation of racial/cultural groups. I gather that Blacks & Hispanics want their own, separate, schools. The Cause, which for me is White Nationalism, should concentrate on that which unifies us, rather than cults which disunite us. We already have sufficient ego-trippers who declare that "It's my way or the highway. Me-me-me & gimme-gimme-gimme." Our focus should be on acquiring knowledge so we can do the things right, when we have the opportunity. With knowledge, we can recognize opportunities when they arise.

The role of Jews in our economy & our politics is huge, since they are permitted by us to create our money out of nothing, & charge us interest (the national debt) for their 'services', that is, DISservices. The enclosures refer. Strength through Joy! ORION!
