Dear Mr. Beevor: I recently read your article on "The Most Unimaginable Horror." As a U.S. Army vet, I'm reminded of British General Fuller's statement that "democratic war" has used hate propaganda to enlarge and motivate armies in lieu of pay, ever since Napoleon used the first newspapers for that purpose. General Fuller also pointed out that the propaganda used to inflame people to fight leaves a toxic residue after hostilities cease. This is exactly what we have seen after our World War I and II propaganda against Germans, of which there is much more than I experienced during World War II, in all media: Books, newspapers, TV, Radio, movies, magazines and Internet. The anti-German books published after World War II have at least trebled, from what I saw at The World's Biggest Bookstore in Toronto, Canada. There may be more now, as the anti-German propaganda industry has flourished, especially in regard to "Shoah Business" or Holocaust Idolatry so rightly criticized by my friend, Dr. Finkelstein.

During my television interview at the Toronto bookstore, I remarked that Germans are being indoctrinated to hate themselves and to love all non-Germans, while non-Germans, like myself are being indoctrinated to hate all Germans, and by extension, all White people. "German guilt" is now "White guilt," as portrayed by 'our' media of information, education and entertainment. Please excuse us for living!

We soldiers are actually felons, for we are duty-bound to kill, maim, abduct and even torture other soldiers and civilians. That's our job, but the precedents set by the Nuremberg Show Trials left an impression on me, as General Fuller would point out: I told my company commander that, since Nuremberg, an order was not an order if it did not filter through my conscience, for that is now every soldier's duty. I told him that we may be tried, one day, for war crimes and crimes against humanity, if we are captured, and especially if we lose a war! As we bleed to death in the Middle East, I see that day coming. At Nuremberg we were told that he who first attacks is the aggressor, regardless of the reasons. Pre-emptive war is thus aggressive war, and it is a "crime against humanity." Acts of war without an official declaration of war are "war crimes." The USA stands guilty on all counts, JUST LIKE THE GERMAN VICTIMS we hanged at Nuremberg.

When I first visited France in the mid-1960s, I found many French people who refused to speak or do business in English. They preferred that I communicate with them in German! I only understood why after reading Max Hastings' "Operation Overlord," in regard to Allied bombings of French civilians in World War II, as well as British treachery against French forces after 1940. No English need apply. Germans were more respected in France, according to my firsthand experience.

The Allies played fast and loose with the Geneva and Hague Conventions, just like our "gallant Soviet allies." The Red Cross was an invitation to bomb and strafe its bearers, including Allied prisoners of war and the trainload of Jews on which Sabina Citron came closest to death, according to her testimony at a Canadian thoughtcrime trial, which I attended. She lived through the Allied holocaust to found The Canadian Holocaust Remembrance Association.

So we can agree that World War II was fought by gangs of "fanatics," and indoctrinated "haters." We read and hear of Allied troops whose hatred was increased by the Germans' fighting prowess. We are somehow appalled to discover that war may be vicious, savage, dirty, painful and clever. Oy veh! We hate our enemy if he is brave and competent, just as we hate him if he is cowardly and incompetent. I guess soldiers must hate, regardless of circumstances, like farmers who always complain about the weather. Our Union General Sherman, for whom our WW II tank was named, declared that "War is hell," so he believed that waging war on civilians was a necessary part of his war. If he were German, and on the losing side, he'd be a prime candidate for the noose at Nuremberg.

The Normandy invasion, oops, I mean 'liberation,' featured a "take no prisoners" policy, since neither side wished to waste men on guarding prisoners, when every man was needed for combat. These fortunes of war lead to changes in tactics, especially when the war becomes "uncivilized," which is an oxymoron.

The Waffen SS were mainly non-Germans. In fact, more French fought in the Waffen SS Charlemagne Division than in the so-called Resistance. One French vet told me that the last defenders of 1945 Berlin were his Frenchmen and the Jews of Berlin, who helped him dig anti-tank ditches. As a British writer said of "Hitler's foreign legions," They joined the Waffen SS when Germany was losing, and "they fought too well" to be fair weather opportunists. Former P.M. David Lloyd-George apologized to Germany for the lies and hate propaganda of World War I, so it's high time we broke out of our World War II trap of hate. Yours faithfully, Eric Thomson, U.S. Army (Ret.)
