

THE SHAPE OF THINGS TO COME? by E. Thomson

NPR jewsradio divulged some underlying facets of the recent Turkish role in the Gaza Relief convoy intercepted by the Israeli naval blockade, as reported on 3 June 2010. According to the jew interviewees, the Turkish victims of the Israeli murder squad which boarded the relief ships were "Well-educated, Moslem conservatives, i.e. 'fanatics.'" Apparently the jews' victims were not the stereotypical "impoverished desperadoes," since one had been living in the USA, and was thoroughly exposed to Judeo-American materialist decadence. Allegedly, more such convoys are promised from Turkey, with more such martyrs on behalf of Moslem solidarity.

But won't such actions impede Turkey's admission into the European Jewnion? Perhaps, but this jewsradio feature noted a major shift in Moslem Turkish interests, that is, majority Turkish interests, away from the Kemalist lust for all things western.

So who was Mustapha Kemal alias Kemal Atatürk? He was one of the "Young Turks," several of whom were jews, who were also military officers in the latter phase of the Ottoman Empire. According to Kemal's British biographer, Kemal wanted to achieve a modernized, secular Turkish state, along with German technology. He allegedly believed that Turkey's progress was impeded by the Sultan, the Arabs, and Islam, hence Kemal was not despondent over the demise of the Turkish Empire at the official end of World War I. He merely wanted to defend the integrity of Turkey, as he saw it.

Since the Crimean War, the Turks were viewed as allies of the British and French, in opposition to Russia, but the British-German trade war prior to World War I led the Germans to seek a land route to the Indian Ocean, free of British domination. Hence the advent of the Berlin to Basra Railway, which, according to former bankster Benjamin Freedman, was the real reason for World War I. To add fuel to the conflict, the German railway also ran into the Turkish oilfields of Kirkuk and Mosul. Jew general Schwartzkopf bragged that he had also bombed "that Kraut railroad" in the first Gulf War against Iraq. To make matters hotter, the Germans assisted the Turks in the building of The Hejaz Railway which reached as far as the holy city of Medina, but had been planned to reach Mecca. Hejaz means Pilgrim, so the Turks saw the railway as facilitating the Moslems' pilgrimages to Mecca. But the British saw it as a dagger pointed at their Suez Canal. The Turks did mount an offensive against the canal in World War I which was supplied by that railway, which figures predominantly in T.E. Lawrence's "Seven Pillars of Wisdom," and the film, "Lawrence of Arabia."

So it was that the Young Turks schemed to get Turkey into World War I, on the side of Germany, for it was they who admitted the German cruisers Goeben and Breslau into the Black Sea, so they could attack Russian shipping and ports. That did the trick, since Britain was allied with Russia. As with the USA, if you have Britain as an 'ally,' you never need an enemy. Apparently, the Young Turks also had a role in the Armenian Massacre, following setbacks in the Turks' war against Russia. After all, the Armenians were Christians, like the Russians, so they posed a potential 5th column, as well as being targets of envy on the part of less educated, less wealthy Turks.

Meanwhile, the British were continuing their invasion of former Turkish territory. Lawrence had been spying on the German railway progress before the war, so he was a strategic asset for the Brits, with his knowledge of Arabic and Arab customs. He propagandized Arab separatism and nationalism, which gained him & the Brits Arab support against the Turks. As we know, Lawrence's operations were aimed at cutting the Hejaz Railway sufficiently to hold the Turkish 4th Army virtual prisoners in Medina. When orders came to cut the railway completely, that army was forced to retreat from Medina, and was ravaged by Arabs and British forces in the open.

In the background, behind the curtains, so to speak, the Rothschilds had arranged the Balfour Declaration, a bargain by which the jews would use their money power and their media to invade Palestine in exchange for driving the American Goyim into war on the British side. In this agreement, the Brits were the jews' puppets, and the Arabs were their dupes. In addition to the Balfour Declaration was the Sykes-Picot Agreement between Britain and France, which divided up the former Turkish Empire. The Brits would get the oil fields, and the French got more Moslems to rule.

Naturally, the Arabs felt cheated after the departure of the Turks and the entry of the British and French forces, and this betrayal of Arab nationalism seems to have affected Lawrence with a guilty conscience. He mentioned that the Brits needed more forces in the newly-drawn up state of Iraq than the Turks had needed to govern their entire empire. Lawrence was attacked in Britain, on his way to see Hitler. I understand that he was placed under guard in a British hospital, where he was allowed no treatment, so he died of his injuries.

2) So it was, in typical Mafia fashion, that Lawrence was buried with honors.

After 1918 officially ended World War I with the armistice, war continued in Turkey, where the Greeks were driven out by Kemal's regime. The Sultan had retired, so to speak, from being head of state, so Kemal was free to "modernize" Turkey. He moved the capital from Constantinople, renamed Istanbul, to Ankara. Kemal abolished the fez, which was formerly seen as Turkish headgear, but now is relegated to the Shriners, whom Mexican invaders think are "Turks."

Kemal hated Islam, for it emanated from the Arabs whom he despised, and whom he blamed for impeding Turkish progress into modernization. Yet, Turkey was a Moslem country with a predominantly Moslem population, as it still is, so the formation and preservation of a 'secular' state in Turkey was always moot. Kemal was an alcoholic, so he was particularly offended by the Islamic prohibition of alcohol.

As we 'know' from the jewsmedia, jews entered Palestine in terms of the Balfour Declaration of a "Jewish homeland," but the Brits wanted to maintain their old League of Nations mandate over the territory, following the partition of the Turkish Empire. The jews had other ideas, so they made things too hot for the Brits, and drove them out in 1948, thus establishing their concentration camp for Arabs, "Israel," or Zionist Occupied Palestine.

Thus it was that their 'victories' of World Wars I & II signified the end of the British and French empires, just as U.S. 'victories' herald the demise of Judeo-America alias Usreal on behalf of the Rothschilds' Jew World Ordure, in which China appears to be the jews' new host country. Well, the USA declared Novus Ordo Seclorum on its "Great Seal," which can exist without the USA. Thus it is that those who ally themselves with the jews are defeated through their own efforts. This is what political analysts call "jew-jitsu," in which the opponent's strength is used against him. All non-jews are, after all, deemed as opponents, so there is no doubt of the jews' intentions of enriching themselves while destroying us. There are no big secrets, and this one is out in plain sight.

The Turks are seeing this one, and they are reviewing their situation in regard to bonding with Europe, jew-dominated Europe, and Israel, as opposed to restoring their links with former peoples of the Ottoman Empire. Certainly, jew-ruled, Christinsane Europe has admitted hordes of Moslem invaders who create strife, just as the jews wish, so as to enlist the Europeans on behalf of the jews against Moslem peoples. The jews are fomenting similar Islamic friction here in Judeo-America, by letting Moslems invade as refugees and/or as students, as the USA turns their countries into Zionist hell. Would a Goy wonder, if we were at war with Japan, that the Hebrew Immigrant Aid Society was sponsoring Japanese immigration into the USA? Who do you think is behind the Moslem immigration into Judeo-America, and the spread of the Black Moslem cult in U.S. prisons? If you know the jews' objectives, their identity is no secret at all. Just ask "Who benefits?" as we continue to support our dupes in Iraq and Afghanistan.

As the NPR program mentioned, the Moslem Turks do not see themselves as "welcome" in non-Moslem Europe, so they figure that they should return to their own kind and their own culture. We shall see to what degree such Turks will realize this new direction for their people.

Will the jews permit the Turkish situation to mature toward Moslem unification? I think not. In the meantime the jews will work to exacerbate the conflicts between the Sunni and Shia Moslems, as appears evident in Iraq and elsewhere. Iran is still a potential casus belli for World War III, should the jews produce another Pearl Harbor or 9-11 incident, backed by their media. All they need do is to blame Iran. Goyim are indeed thoughtless beasts, as exemplified in our invasion of U.S. puppet Iraq, following 9-11, despite the fact we were told that the "9-11 H.Q." under the Saudi Osama bin Laden of the Bush oil racket was in Afghanistan. No, Goyim, the 9-11 H.Q. was in our very own District of Corruption. Benyamin Netanyahu blurted just after it happened: "This is very good for Israel!" Wise people know that the criminal is the one who benefits from the crime, at least from the days of ancient Rome, in which the question was asked, "Cui bono?"

As long as we are content to be ruled by criminals, I see no possible improvement in our situation. Down with Zionism!
