"All roads lead to HITLER — or they lead nowhere!" — Matt Koehl

7,000 rally to mark Dresden Holocaust

COMMENTARY

Advent Statement

The following is a statement by NEW ORDER Commander Matt Koehl before a gathering of National Socialist comrades on April 20, 2009, on the occasion of the 120th anniversary of the birth of Adolf Hitler.

Comrades:

Today we are meeting to celebrate the 120th birthday of a very special person, someone whose like the world has never seen before or since. Why is He so special? What is it that makes Him stand out as that extraordinary figure whom we wish to celebrate and follow?

Was He just another great world statesman? Was He merely a brilliant political strategist, who shook our enemies up like no one else in living memory? Was He just another one of those more important figures found in history books?

He was all of these things, of course, but He was also much more than that. The man I am talking about is someone who comes into the world but once in thousands of years, someone who divides human history into two parts: that which comes before Him, and that which comes after Him, forever changing the face of the Earth. That is why we mark this great division with a new calendar, one which begins with the year of His birth.

DRESDEN (NSNS) — In an impressive display of growing muscle, some 7,000 National Socialists, militant nationalists and other patriotic Germans gathered in this middle German city on February 13, 2010, to commemorate the 65th anniversary of the worst single atrocity in recorded history.

On the night of February 13-14, 1945, approximately 400,000 German civilians were savagely murdered in three successive waves of attacks by the U.S. and British air forces. Most of those who perished were burnt alive or died from smoke inhalation from the horrendous firestorms caused by the bombing.

Since the early 1990s, the anniversary of the Dresden Holocaust has been marked by marches, rallies and memorial services to honor the dead and keep alive the memory of their ghastly murder.

This year the memorial was organized under the auspices of the National Youth Association of East Germany. The association is an umbrella organization for what is termed the "National Resistance," a loosely-organized coalition of anti-government forces in which National Socialists play a prominent role. Among the organizations taking part in the event was the National Democratic Party, which has two seats in the regional legislature in Saxony, where Dresden is located.

Although it was an overwhelmingly German event, contingents from other countries, including Denmark, Sweden, Great Britain, the Netherlands, Flanders, and elsewhere, also attended.

Police spokesmen said prior to the event that they expected at least 6,500 "right-wing extremists" to participate, making it the largest NS gathering in Germany since 1945. Alarmed at the prospect, anti-NS forces went to court in an effort to have the permit for the commemoration revoked, but a judge turned down the request.

The National Socialists and their allies gathered at Dresden's Neustadt train station on the morning of the 13th. Their plans were to stage a funeral procession for the Dead of 1945 from the station to the city center. There they planned to hold a rally.

However, opposition forces mobilized against them and crowded into the streets, giving the police a pretext to prohibit the march on the grounds of maintaining public order. Instead, the memorial was limited to a shortened march in the neighborhood of the train station, followed by a rally there. Frustrated at the restrictions put on their activity by the police, the marchers chanted "Open the streets to German youth!"

Still, scattered violence broke out anyway. In one incident, a busload of NS activists headed for the march was turned back after its windows and headlights were smashed by "anti-Nazi" rioters. Elsewhere, a car was overturned. Anarchists and Communists erected barricades at a few intersections and set them on fire, while five police helicopters benignly monitored the situation from above. Police report at least 30 arrests (including demonstrators from both sides) and a small number of minor injuries, including people struck by rocks.

Over 4,000 police, backed by water cannons, were mobilized for the occasion. Among the anti-NS forces were both hard-line Marxists from the Communist Party (now renamed simply "The Left") and rightwing blowhards from the fatuously named "Nazi-Free Dresden Puts Its Foot Down." Media reports claim that as many as 10,000 people joined hands to form a human chain on the far side of the Elbe River, where the city is located, to symbolically "protect" Dresden from those mourning the victims of the Allied atrocity.

Remaining true to form, the news media put the maximum anti-NS spin on their reporting. Typical was one headline which read, "Violence Mars Neo-Nazi Rally in Dresden." This gives a naïve reader the unmistakable impression that the "neo-Nazis" were the perpetrators of the violence, rather than its intended victims, as was actually the case.

Also, while the National Socialists and their supporters were frequently referred to as "right-extremists," the Reds and anarchists were described approvingly with such adjectives as "anti-Nazi" or "anti-Fascist," rather than as "left-wing extremist"—which they certainly were! The media also took advantage of the occasion to further reduce the casualty estimate from 1945 to only 25,000 (!), a mere one-sixteenth of the actual historical total.

Miguel Serrano †

Miguel Joaquín Diego del Carmen Serrano Fernández was born in Santiago, Chile, on September 10, 1917. He joined the Chilean National Socialist movement in 1939. Two years later he became convinced that Adolf Hitler was more than just a German political leader and, in fact, was an Aryan religious figure of the first order. He began a personal quest to discover the true essence of Aryan spirituality, which would last the rest of his life.

In 1953, following a family tradition, Serrano entered the diplomatic corps and held various ambassadorial posts for Chile from 1953 to 1970: in India (1953-62); Yugoslavia (1962-64); Romania, Bulgaria and Austria (1964-70). Serrano was Chile's representative to the International Atomic Energy Agency and United Nations Organization for Industrial Development. In 1970, a Marxist regime under Salvador Allende seized control of Chile, and Serrano was dismissed from diplomatic service. This enabled him to concentrate his energies on the articulation of his ideology, which he called "Esoteric Hitlerism."

Serrano cultivated friendships with kindred spirits across the world, some of whom were National Socialists and some of whom were not. His best known book was C.G. Jung and Hermann Hesse: A History of Two Friendships. However, from an NS perspective, his most important work was Adolf Hitler: The Ultimate Avatar (1984). His Movement comrades included Léon Degrelle, Otto Skorzeny, Hans-Ulrich Rudel and Hanna Reitsch. He also carried on correspondence with other National Socialist luminaries, including Savitri Devi and Matt Koehl.

In 1973, the Chilean military overthrew Allende and his Communist dictatorship, and Serrano returned to his homeland. However, finding even the new government unsympathetic to National Socialism, he adopted "the role of intellectual gadfly," as he put it. Serrano continued to develop his ideas and to organize NS gatherings and activities in Chile until the end of his earthly mission.

Miguel Serrano died on February 28, 2009. He was 91 years old. Commander Koehl and the staff of the NEW ORDER join with National Socialist comrades across the world in mourning the loss of this unique and towering personality.

Colin Jordan

Founding Father of the World Union of National Socialists

HARROGATE, England (NSNS) — Colin Jordan, the elder statesman of National Socialism in Britain and a powerful voice of post-1945 National Socialism around the world died of a massive heart attack on April 9, 2009. He was 85.

John Colin Campbell Jordan was born on June 19, 1923, the son of a college professor and the headmistress of a school in Warwickshire. In the summer of 1937, then a 14-year-old schoolboy, he visited National Socialist Germany and experienced the wonder and glory of Hitler's Reich firsthand. The visit made a profound impact on the intelligent and sensitive youngster: he became a National Socialist in the true and authentic sense of the term, and as he grew to manhood, he dedicated his life to promoting Adolf Hitler's Cause, both in his own country and throughout the world.

Between 1946 and 1949 he attended Cambridge University, from which he graduated with an honors degree in history. He began his political career at Cambridge, as a protégé of Arnold Leese, the famous prewar National Socialist. Upon Leese's death, he inherited a building owned by Leese on Princedale Road in London, which in 1956 became the headquarters of the White Defence League. In 1960, the WDL merged with the National Labour Party and other racial nationalist formations to become the first incarnation of the British National Party.

The BNP thus contained both hardcore and softcore elements, who did not always work well together. The uneasy relationship came to an end in 1962, when Jordan led the hardcore NS elements out of the BNP to form the National Socialist Movement.

As is fitting for a National Socialist organization, the NSM was born in struggle. It was officially formed on April 20, 1962. On July 2 of that year, it held a mass rally in London's Trafalgar Square, beneath a 40-foot banner reading "Free Britain from Jewish Control!" Some 5,000 people attended the gathering, including several hundred angry Jews, who rioted as Jordan gave his speech, which was entitled "Hitler Was Right!"

Significantly, it was Jordan who was arrested, not his attackers. In August of that year, Jordan and the NSM hosted an international meeting in the Cotswolds, which was attended by George Lincoln Rockwell, Savitri Devi, Bruno Lüdtke, and other NS luminaries from around the globe. Together, they formed the World Union of National Socialists, and chose Jordan as its first commander.

A leader of the NSM, Jordan was imprisoned twice for political offenses. As with any genuine NS leader, he led his men from the front, and was bloodied more than once in violent confrontations with Red and Jewish street thugs, who

In 1968, following an internal split, the NSM was reorganized as the British Movement, which Jordan led until 1975, when, citing declining health and personal circumstances, he withdrew from political activism. Yet his dedication to the Cause of Adolf Hitler was undiminished.

In 1980 he began issuing Gothic Ripples, a personal NS newsletter that took its name from an earlier publication of Arnold Leese. He also continued to write articles and booklets. In 1993 the Danish NS publisher Nordland Forlag released a collection of his writings, entitled National Socialism: Vanguard of the Future. He also wrote two short works of political satire and revolutionary theory, entitled Merrie England 2000 (1993) and The Uprising (2004).*

The British authorities were unhappy with his activities, and raided his home and seized his possessions numerous occasions, using a variety of pretexts. As the result of an arrest in 1991 on an invalid warrant, he won a judgment against the police for £12,000. On into the new millennium, he continued to serve as an adviser and spiritual leader to new generations of National Socialists, both in England and throughout the world.

Colin Jordan was an honorary member of the NEW ORDER and recipient of its highest award, the Loyalty Badge. He was a close friend of Commander Koehl.

Jordan is survived by his wife Julia and a stepdaughter.

Our World – Without TV

by FARNHAM O'REILLY

My wife and I are not experts on the ownership and viewing of television. For even though we are still relatively young, we got rid of ours over 30 years ago.

When we were newly married, someone took pity on our sweet poverty and gave us a used black & white TV. But after watching it for several months, we decided the messages and visuals coming from it were not wholesome, either for us or for the family we planned to have.

Hence, our children grew up without TV and, I might add, were homeschooled, as well. They made good use of the fine library we graced our living room with. All our children went on to college and now have successful careers. More importantly, they all have strong values, are courageous, well informed, honorable, value their Aryan heritage, and are very wise to the deceptions of the Enemy.

Ironically, TV was invented in that progressive society which exalted high morals, physical health, and a strong family unit—National Socialist Germany. Oftentimes, when people bring up Adolf Hitler, aka The-Most-Hated-Man-Who-Ever-Lived, I joke with them, asking, "How can anyone ever forgive Adolf Hitler for what he allowed to happen?"

Invariably they ask, "You mean the Holocaust®?" My response—always good for opening mental doors—is: "Well, I guess you could call it that, for television has and remains the tool of choice by evil people for our moral destruction, and I just can't believe a good man like Hitler would ever have allowed it!"

Growing up, I recall TV was—at least in the beginning—wholesome in content. Programs, such as Leave It to Beaver, Father Knows Best or The Rifleman taught the values of honesty, respect for one's parents, courage, and the value of the family unit. All this is now gone. In fact, the opposite values, which I call anti-values, now take their place.

A Multitude of Blessings

Some argue that we, absent a TV to inform us, are unable to keep abreast of important current events. Actually, my wife and I are quite well informed on all matters of importance. And—aside from the fact that the advent of the Internet makes this argument in favor of TV outdated and irrelevant—we have learned over the years that if something is indeed important, you'll hear about it. And, when you do, you'll have a much better chance of drawing your own conclusions, rather than having them drawn for you by the ancient Enemy of our people, who owns the TV networks today.

A multitude of blessings have accrued to us over the years because of the one simple decision to exclude TV from our lives. First and foremost is the amount of time we have not wasted watching it. Over the years, these thousands of hours have been spent reading, gardening, going on hikes, riding our horses, homeschooling our children, camping, and walking our German shepherds.

These activities have also helped us retain our good health. Health, along with time, are our two most important assets. And, being truly important, they cannot be bought with any amount of money.

It is because we have not had TV that we have always had a peace and quiet in our house—so much so, that visitors often comment on it after being in our home for only a half hour or so. It is because of no TV that we have also enjoyed a modest savings on our electric bills.

Our home—unlike nearly all other homes in America—has been free of the Enemy's influence, and our lives—and more importantly, the lives of our children—have been much richer and more fulfilled because of it.

What We Have Missed

What have we missed? Well, we have missed attacks on the family unit, portrayals that show the father as an oafish tyrant, the mother as the executive/career type, and children as struggling to experience adult pleasures if only grown-ups would get out of their way.

We have missed homosexuals being portrayed as sensitive, normal variants of humanity. We have missed non-whites being portrayed as invariably intelligent, morally superior and hardworking types, who serve as role-models for degenerate whites.

We have missed the nonstop barrage of propaganda on the joys of race-mixing and the classic lie that true diversity is not in keeping racial identities intact, but rather mixing those identities until all vestiges of genetic inheritance are lost forever.

Our children missed out on all of this, too.

We have missed out on the Enemy's use of subliminal suggestion, something which was banned in the 1950s but, like seatbelt laws, is pretty much unenforceable. For example, you might think your kids are watching a documentary on grizzly bears in Yellowstone, but what they are also watching are graphic scenes of a black man and a white woman, or that of two queers, while the Enemy's silent, whispering messages bring moral death into the souls of your children. For once the electronic Levantine is on and you are watching it, you really don't have any idea what you are watching. You are watching what the Enemy wants you to watch.

Many people, when hearing that we have no TV, vociferously agree with our decision, lamenting its filth and degeneracy. But, invariably, when we suggest that they should consider doing the same, they respond, "Oh, we only watch the news, the History Channel, or documentaries ... (etc.)." Yet, these presumably "neutral" areas are the most deceptive and dangerous, for the Enemy—as he has proved time and again—is very, very good at "managing" news, rewriting history, and forging documentaries.

The Greatest Danger

Perhaps the greatest danger TV presents to the creative, developing minds of our young people is that it does not require interaction. The viewer's interaction is totally passive and thus, unlike reading or even radio, it does not allow young Aryans to exercise their greatest strength, which is the power of their mind. With its powerful, visual images and totally unilateral power of suggestion, it has the desired effect intended by its masters on anyone who watches it.

Nowadays, whenever I am around a TV, I do not watch it but rather those who are watching it. Invariably, the viewers are in the classic pose of passivity—with eyes dulled, nostrils relaxed, and mouths slightly open—a truly bovine countenance becoming more prevalent on the faces of a once-great people.

It does not matter how strong-willed the viewer is, he or she is influenced, whether one likes it or not—and whether one knows it or not! A strong character will not protect one from the blandishments of TV any more than a bottle of whiskey will stave off drunkenness once it is consumed.

What is the one tool that evolution has provided us with for our protection? Is it claws, teeth, quills, wings, or odoriferous scent? No, it is our ability to think and reason, our ability to create things to protect ourselves. And what is the one thing being conditioned and trained out of us? It is this survival ability. Why?

Why are a bear's claws filed down, why are scent glands removed from a skunk, and why are a crocodile's jaws wired shut? It is done to force them into an unnatural environment where they can no longer protect themselves. They can then be safely kept alive and exploited by their captors.

Our Tool for Survival

Our tool for survival—our ability to think and reason—is under attack by our ancient Enemy. And his weapon of choice is TV, whereby he can safely keep us alive, to be exploited by him as he so wishes.

We are conditioned—trained, taught and encouraged—to be oblivious to our surroundings. What animal would survive for long doing this? None! How, then, can we perceive danger and a threat to our existence if we are oblivious?

Survival as an animal—and we are part of the animal kingdom—depends on our observing everything around us. The only time in our life when we are unable to do so is when, as a small child, we are under the care and protection of our parents or older persons.

So, how do we observe the obvious—which is the opposite of oblivious? We do so by paying careful attention, by ourselves and without outside influence, to the situations around us, aware of each moment as it occurs.

But how have we been taught, trained and encouraged to be oblivious? For starters, we have been convinced that our survival is not being threatened—that we are "safe." In some ways this may be accurate from a physical standpoint, but we have sacrificed our mental awareness for this so-called "safety."

Our mental awareness—incorporating our thinking, reasoning, analyzing and creative skills—is truly our most important survival tool. For if we compromise our mental awareness for an illusory physical safety, we make ourselves vulnerable to exploitation. That, of course, is exactly what the Enemy wants, and that is what he hopes to achieve by using his control of television to manipulate and dull our minds.

And so, it is up to us, as individuals, to resist this deadly, anti-Aryan medium by continuously using and sharpening our mental awareness. Define yourself—or be defined by the Enemy!

CHURCH & SYNAGOGUE

Lutheran pastor denounces the NEW ORDER

Martin Luther, who was the leader of the Protestant Reformation and the founder of the Lutheran Church, was also one of the most celebrated anti-Semites in history. He authored the classic tract On the Jews and Their Lies, which is still in print today, and he urged the mass burning of the Jewish Talmud as an evil book. But if one expected that the keen racial awareness and realism which characterized Luther's thought would still inform his contemporary followers, one would be sadly mistaken, for the present-day Lutheran sheep have strayed from the fold.

A case in point is the pastor of the Lutheran Resurrection Church in Arlington, Virginia. In June, 2010, NS activists blanketed the Arlington neighborhood in which the church is located with a door-to-door distribution of an anti-illegal immigration leaflet produced by the NEW ORDER. Among those who received the leaflet was the church's pastor, who responded with a rambling sermon attacking the NEW ORDER, which he later posted online. He told his congregation that the "hateful" NEW ORDER website "reveres Adolf Hitler, extols the virtues of the Aryan race, and belittles Jews, [illegal] immigrants and African-Americans." He noted that "the American Nazi Party was founded and located in Arlington for years," but that he thought the "Nazis" had thankfully gone away. The anti-invader leaflet, he reported, made him "mad as hell [and] sick to my stomach." He went on to praise the wonderful pleasures of multiculturalism and racial diversity.

Please note that the good pastor was not upset that millions of anti-white illegal invaders are flooding into his country, stealing jobs from Americans, committing violent crimes, sucking the welfare system dry, and generally lowering the level of civilization. No, what made him furious is that someone—clearly, in his mind, a "nut job"—peacefully and legally protests the invasion!

A follow-up distribution was conducted in the same neighborhood on August 25, the 43rd anniversary of the assassination of Lincoln Rockwell, who was murdered only a short distance away. Copies of leaflets urging White Pride and honoring Commander Rockwell were delivered to each house. To our knowledge, the pastor made no public comment about this second activity.

Haitian voodoo priests:

mass burials will lead to zombie problem

Haiti's voodoo priests have claimed that the many mass burials taking place in Haiti after the massive earthquake last January were not dignified or in keeping with black magic rituals.

In a country where many people believe in voodoo and zombies, there has been concern the dead could be brought back to life to persecute the living.

The priests took their concerns to President René Préval to ask him to intervene.

While Haiti's main voodoo leader, Max Beauvoir, told Mr. Préval that mass graves are against the Haitian culture, authorities continued the rate of burial as the most efficient way to dispose of the fast-rotting corpses from the disaster.

Chief Rabbi: Gentiles exist to serve Jews

The only reason that non-Jews exist is to serve Jews, according to Rabbi Ovadia Yosef, a respected leader of Israel's Sephardic community.

"The goyim were born only to serve us. Without that, they have no place in the world—only to serve the People of Israel," he said in a sermon on the laws regarding the actions that non-Jews are permitted to perform on the Jewish sabbath.

According to Yosef, the lives of non-Jews in Israel are safeguarded by divinity, to prevent losses to Jews. Yosef repeatedly used the insulting, contemptuous Hebrew term "goyim" to refer to non-Jews. The word is roughly equivalent to "kike" or "nigger" in English.

"In Israel, death has no dominion over them ... With goyim, it will be like any person—they need to die, but [God] will give them longevity. Why? Imagine that one's donkey would die, they'd lose their money.

"This is his servant ... That's why he gets a long life, to work well for this Jew," Yosef said.

"Why are the goyim needed? They will work, they will plow, they will reap. We will sit like an effendi [nobility] and eat. That is why the goyim were created," he added.

Some non-Jews claimed to have been shocked at the good rabbi's hateful comments, but they should not have been: he was simply restating the basic principle upon which the Jewish religion was founded. The only thing "shocking" about his statements was that, although they were intended solely for a Jewish-only audience, they somehow found their way into the mass media!

SPIRITUAL AIDS DESTROYS THE RACIAL IMMUNE SYSTEM!

Today's Neo-Nazis Have No Respect for Tradition

A Satire by KARL QUANDT

Reprinted from The Onion, January 24, 2007, Issue 43-04

The other week, I read that the founder of the National Vanguard is in the clink for having child pornography in his computer. What is going on with today's white nationalists? Here it is, 2007, and global Aryan supremacy is no closer to becoming a reality than it was 60 years ago. I lay the blame squarely on the shoulders of this new generation. These kids today are making a disgrace of neo-Nazism.

In my day, it wasn't just about mindless hate—we hated because we stood for something. Namely, tradition, discipline and self-respect: values that these low-life punks have no comprehension of whatsoever. We exalted our glorious forebears, in Germany as well as the United States. But who today remembers the great American neo-Nazi leaders like George Lincoln Rockwell or Matt Koehl? Who honors the great heroes and martyrs of the National Socialist White People's Party?

It's enough to make me ashamed to be a neo-Nazi.

You can't just call yourself the Master Race—you have to act like it, and hold yourself to a higher standard than those you despise and wish to exterminate. Have you seen the way these kids dress? Their idea of a "uniform" is a T-shirt and combat boots. The rural militias are even worse, with their filthy fatigues and long hair and beer guts. Excuse me, but I hardly think hillbilly rejects are what our great Führer had in mind when he dreamed of a world filled with Aryan supermen. I wouldn't even let them in my front door, let alone conspire with them to blow up a synagogue.

Don't these people have any white pride? And don't get me started on the whole "skinhead" thing. What idiot came up with that idea? When everybody's bald, you can't even tell who's blond. Back in the '70s, we combed our hair neatly, wore starched, pressed brown shirts, and polished our jackboots until you could use them as mirrors. We always looked presentable, even when beating up Mexican migrant workers or sending hate mail to Jewish leaders. And if there was an organizational meeting, by golly, you showed up for it. If you were given a task, you did it: Those leaflets didn't pass themselves out. Of course, that was back when being a neo-Nazi still meant something. Evidently, the neo-Nazis of today think that all you need to do to keep the fires of white nationalism burning is to carve a Swastika on your chest or strap an armband around the sleeve of a dingy plaid-flannel shirt.

Breaking bottles, overturning garbage cans, spray-painting racial slurs, cranking out hour after mind-numbing hour of that ridiculous punk-rock music—you call that neo-Nazism? When we wanted to relax after a long day of marching in downtown Skokie, we sang good patriotic German anthems like the Horst Wessel Song.

And the way these kids fight! Where's the skill? Sure, in the glory days of the 1930s, the Nazis doled out their fair share of beatings against the defenseless. But they did it with a little thing called "class." Watching these kids throw drunken punches and thrash around like netted trout in their mosh pits, I'd be shocked if more than three of them could even goose-step in a straight line. They couldn't make a train run on time if their lives depended on it, let alone conceive the V-2 rocket or Zyklon B.

I'll tell you one other thing—we weren't parked on our butts typing away on the Internet all day in some dank room surrounded by empty beer cans. We were at our remote Montana compounds, enjoying the rugged outdoors. We went on nature hikes, built huge bonfires, and held daily target practice so we'd be ready for the coming race war. All these nerds today want to do is make Web videos decrying the Zionist agenda. That reminds me—if you're going to appear online, the least you can do is shave. And if you must tattoo an eagle with an iron cross in its talons across your back, put on a shirt, for crying out loud. Tattoos aren't anything to brag about. Tattoos are for inking numbers on the forearms of Jews.

I also hear that when these kids are in prison, they spend their time sodomizing each other. Why, when we were in prison, we took advantage of our extra time to write manifestos and memorize The Turner Diaries. Buggering was the furthest thing from our mind—we saved our essence for propagating the white race when we got out.

I suppose this new generation will probably call me an old geezer, just because I still believe in putting on a tie before giving the Hitler salute. But damn it, if we can't live up to the values that made Nazism great, we might as well just not have any neo-Nazi movement at all.

In the broad scheme of things a figure, such as the One I am describing, appears when the level of evil, confusion and disorder here on Earth has reached a critical level, and the time is ripe for Him to restore order and righteousness. In modern time the appointed moment for such an appearance was April 20th, 1889 of the current calendar. On that day there came into the world an extraordinary figure, One never before seen by humankind, One who was to remind us of the eternal laws of Nature, which are the laws of Life—which are the laws of a Higher Power. This is the man we are honoring today.

In setting forth those Principles which form the basis for the NEW ORDER, Lincoln Rockwell concluded with this Seventh one. He stated:

"We believe that Adolf Hitler was the gift of an inscrutable Providence to a world on the brink of Jewish-Bolshevik catastrophe, and that only the blazing spirit of this heroic man can give us the strength and inspiration to rise from the depths of persecution and hatred, to bring the world a new birth of radiant idealism, realistic peace, international order, and social justice for all men."

This is the One we are talking about and celebrating. This is our Leader, the One we call Führer. Into a world, which had lost its direction, He came to show the way.

- Into a world of decadence and false values, He came to proclaim great eternal truths.
- Into a world grown cynical and materialistic, He came to bring a new birth of radiant idealism.
- Into a world standing at the abyss, He came to offer hope and salvation for an entire race.

Think about it: SALVATION—for an entire race!

The churches talk about saving individual souls, but they aren't concerned at all about the fate of our race or whether or not it goes to hell. But that's a selfish way of looking at things.

The Whole is greater than any of its parts. Our race—our FOLK—is greater than any one of us. What does it matter what happens to us as individuals, compared to the eternal life of our race? Everything outside of the race is meaningless, worthless. It's the race—the FOLK—that counts.

There can be no salvation of any kind without racial salvation. Or to put it in stark religious language: There is no grace without race!

That's exactly what Adolf Hitler came to bring—not just some selfish sort of so-called personal salvation, but racial salvation.

The self-seeking have no future beyond their own miserable existence. Only those who look beyond their immediate self-interest, and are concerned about the greater good of the Whole, can expect to receive their proper share in a world to come.

Unfortunately, this message of racial salvation was rejected by those who sought to destroy Adolf Hitler, the ones who have given us the ugly, decadent, corrupt, insane world in which we now live.

But know that by rejecting Him and His Cause, this world stands condemned and is doomed. Only those who have accepted Him and embraced His holy Cause can have any hope and any future. For they are the ones called to establish His New Order. All others will pass into the abyss.

A half century ago Lincoln Rockwell raised the Banner anew up out of the rubble and ashes of World War II.

In those early years of the restored National Socialist movement, I had the rare privilege of working beside this man during that very difficult time, just as today I have the honor of heading the organization which this great Hero created, as the singular vehicle for the advancement of Adolf Hitler's Cause.

Just like his Leader, Lincoln Rockwell was rejected by the very ones he sought to save. And so, as a result of the rejection of this man and his Leader, we now see the sorry condition not only of this country, but of the entire Western world.

The good news is that this old world is beginning to fall apart, and people are starting to realize that there's more to life than beer, ball game, boob tube, hoopla, and shopping malls. Some are even starting to ask questions.

"What does it matter what happens to us as individuals, compared to the eternal life of our race?"

For the first time in a half century, a ferment is slowly developing among white people, as the seed which has been sown over these past decades is starting to germinate. And so, our real work is only now beginning.

The great issue of our time is more than one of social or economic collapse. It is nothing less than one of TO-BE-OR-NOT-TO BE for our race.

There is only one way to Aryan survival and salvation, and that is the way shown to us by the incredible Man of Braunau, whose Cause stands above all others as the greatest of all causes.

At this time, as we gather to pay homage to this mighty figure—who stands as the source of our common inspiration and as our immortal symbol before the world—I invite everyone to join with us in building the NEW ORDER as the one single, undivided Movement, which has been created as the instrument for the fulfillment of His will.

I salute you in His immortal name— Heil Hitler!
