AMERICA, THE LIE

By Walter F. Mueller

For most Americans, their country is "God's Country." I can do no wrong. The all powerful, mighty USA. The bringer of peace, liberty and freedom. Rid the world of dictators at all cost. Peace through war, liberty through terror, and freedom through torture.

It was just less than six years ago when being a "patriot" was borderline criminal. I remember having to search for American paraphernalia everywhere. For years, I had a patriotic Christmas tree, and it took us throughout Northern California to find its decoration.

Then Bush happened! 9-11 happened! And suddenly, being a patriot became fashionable. American people had a new scapegoat. The Arabs! American flags popped out like spring flowers. If you didn't fly one, suddenly you were considered un-American. Before all that, California had even lawsuits, trying to prohibit the American flag in homeowners associations.

Not since WWII where the American people this excited. A new dictator had emerged and the American people believe that it is their duty to free the people of Iraq from their "dictator."

Talk to any American on a street corner, and they believe that the USA is the role model for the rest of the world. Coca Cola, Burgers, French Fries and Ball Games made a civilized people of them.

Never in my life have I seen so many "experts". No matter what subject, Americans think their assessment is the right one. Thousands of books have been written about Germany and Hitler by American "experts." None of them has ever met the person or the people they wrote about. America has an opinion about everything. Not that this is bad, but when one thinks that his/her opinion should be the norm of the world, then there is a problem.

Superficial is the right word to describe the American mind. Only the military power that America possesses makes them powerful.

Sure, the USA is paradise for the immigrants of the Third World. Even the smallest of apartments and smallest of cars is paradise for them, compared to where they came from. A people that cannot differentiate between democracy and dictatorship.

For civilized immigrant from Europe, America becomes a nightmare. And if the immigrant so happens to be white, a rough journey is just beginning.

Just like me, quickly to find out that the glamorous propaganda of Hollywood and big city life is just that. The American Dream doesn't exist - it's a propaganda lie! Especially the enormous power of the Jews has made this country a "dictatorship incognito." From the US, the traditional enemy has reached out to all of the Western world and brought them multi-culturism, immigration, and the "holocaust religion." It is in the US, where the Jews rule 100%.

All of the current problems in Europe have emanated from the US. Multi-Culturism is bad in Europe. But it is worst in the US. Let's take a closer look at day-to-day living in "the land of the free and the home of the brave:"

HEALTHCARE: Today, millions of Americans have no health insurance. Millions of Americans can't afford to pay for their prescription drugs. The question of universal healthcare is taboo. Never mind that since 1870, Germany was the leader in healthcare. Von Bismarck was the first. Since then, many civilized nations have adopted universal healthcare - not the US.

But the healthcare crisis only affects the middle class. They have too much to qualify for a subsidy, and too less to afford expensive healthcare. If you are a person of color, and from the Third World, do not worry - you are taken care of.

PUBLIC SAFETY: The "bright flight" has begun. Most US inner cities have been abandoned by the White Middle Class and are now ruled by black, Mexican and Asian gangs. While police has the manpower to arrest innocent Ernst Zundel, they claim they have not enough personnel to get a handle on inner city crimes. Drive-by shootings, murder, and felonies of all kind are rampant. Little pockets of ethnic populations have emerged, and they are all at war with each other. Abandoned cement blocks tell of a failed infrastructure. Today, law enforcement has given up on certain parts of the inner cities, because all the efforts are concentrated on America's new war, the war on terrorism.

If your home gets burglarized or your car gets stolen, don't bother to call the police. Open-air street drug markets are completely ignored by law enforcement, unless it's done by Middle-Easterners. Racial profiling has become a klutz on the foot of law enforcement. The US government, who has declared war on terrorism, cannot curb its own terrorism or provide safety for its own people.

EDUCATION: A once thriving and producing educational system has become one of the worst in the civilized world. Standards have been lowered, so dumb and dumber can graduate! Billions of dollars are wasted to continue an army of incompetent educators to educate those who can't be educated. Statistics tell us that most high school graduates do not know how to fluently read or write. But, forced holocaust education is the law. Never mind that the kids wouldn't know where Auschwitz is located.

ENVIRONMENT: It's probably the worst I have ever seen. To be a reasonable environmentalist is to be declared nuts in the US. While the US borders are unprotected, the immigrants have created a traffic chaos never seen anywhere else. Millions of Third World immigrants pour their car oil and coolant down the storm drain. Major cities have "spare-the-air" days. More and more, wildlife is disappearing, becoming prey of the constant development. The abuse of the environment in the United States of America is a long-ignored danger.

ECONOMY: Now here you have a propaganda campaign, telling all Americans that it is great, wonderful, go spend more money. But reality - it is nothing but a giant Zeppelin that is going to blow any day. Huge companies have moved their headquarters to underdeveloped nations, producing for a nickel and selling it for a dollar.

Small businesses are squeezed out of the market and the middle class has almost disappeared. A huge population of welfare recipients is whaling its body through the artificial economy, representing the buying power of the US. Credit is the magic word. Multi-culturism has forced creditors to give credit even to those who don't even qualify. Home loans, car loans, and I don't know what else.

The Hollywood magic that makes everyone believe that one day they'll strike it rich. In the Black community, all boys and girls believe that they either become a ball player, a rap singer, or an actress. Trust me, today's white kids are not much different. From the Midwest, they come to California by the Thousands, hoping their dream will be fulfilled. They don't realize that the glamour shown and the dream are all a lie.

POLITICS: What can I tell you? One of the most superficial issues in the US. A free people that choose freely their elected officials. The truth is, America doesn't have free elections. Money decides elections. Over the years, political districts have grown so large that it is not possible for Mr. Smith to go to Washington. Even small offices, like Council and school board are impossible to win, because the districts have become so big.

According to the last election, President George W. Bush spent more than $100 million to get re-elected. US Senators and Congressmen are not far behind. Now you guess who are the people with the money! And once you have figured that out, you know who is running this country.

RELIGION: It's always been a touchy subject in the USA. The puritans in their self-righteous mind have messed it pretty much up. Thousands of Christian groups are competing for the pool of new clients.

Denominations exist that I haven't even heard of. The churches look like warehouses and people hysterically shake their whole body, believing that the crooked bible-beater is going to heal them. Most Christian groups support Israel, and believe that the Jews are the Chosen People.

Religion and God is yet another dictatorship which doesn't fit their mold. On the surface, American Christians are compassionate and devoted. Beneath, their puritan mind is the destruction of white culture in the US. The concept of separation of state and church is completely twisted. Hitler's policy that the church should not be involved in politics is considered "evil" today.

George W. Bush's conversations with God in the White House, on the other hand, are a blessing. Go figure! Most Americans pray to an evil God and don't mind letting it show. My God is a friendly God, a social one, a festive one, and a supportive one. Live and let live, a foreign concept to American Christians.

Did I cover all? Did I miss anything? If so, let me know! So, now you know why I don't believe American "historians and experts." Writing history from reading books - what a concept!

Chavez says Venezuela's future not with the USA

Bob Chapman

Venezuelan Pres.
Chavez

Mr. Chavez feels Venezuela's future is certainly not with the USA.

FORECASTER
editor Bob Chapman
writes:

Venezuelan President Hugo Chavez has stressed the importance of a South American union. He said a union is the only answer to stop the USA from "eating us up one by one." He said higher levels of freedom could only be attained via South American integration. That would be achieved through common projects together.

The integration between Brazil and Venezuela should be seen as an example of what can be achieved.

We believe such a union is important to the Americans because it will short circuit US elitists' efforts for FTAA, which the elitists need to eventually amalgamate all of North, Central, South America and Mexico in preparation for a final move to world government. Anything Latin America can do to this end helps the American people.

Last week the US government sent a message to South American countries using the recent Colombian ruse of the Granda affair, to pressure Venezuela to cut its alleged ties with the neighboring country's guerrillas, as reported in the Brazilian press. The US is pretending to stop a crisis they created. The matter is currently being mediated by Brazilian President Luiz Inacio Lula da Silva.

The US government is, of course, supporting Colombia as they prepare Colombia for war against Venezuela.

Colombia said eight rebels are hiding in Venezuela.

So what, we have 18 to 20 million illegal aliens in the US and many of them are from Colombia.

The American government has no business meddling in Venezuela's internal affairs. In addition, we might mention the protection that the American government gives to people involved in terrorist acts, who are wanted by Venezuelan authorities. The Bush administration makes its own laws and anyone who disagrees with them is a terrorist. Thus, regime change has been ordered by George and the neocons. They could not get Mr. Chavez thrown out of office; they could not assassinate him, so now it is political confrontation as a prelude to war via their proxy Colombia.

Now that Venezuela has signed bilateral oil agreements with Iran, Russia and China, Jorge Boosh is seeing red. George takes these sovereign acts as a declaration of war—of open terrorism, as being sufficient evidence to include Venezuela in the coming holocaust of the "axis of evil."

The final stroke will come this year when President Chavez switches to the Petro-Euro, or creates a Latin American currency.

In as much as the US is preparing Colombia to invade Venezuela, the faster Mr. Chavez acts the better. A good time to make the switch would be in June when Iran opens their oil exchange, which we understand will trade oil in dollars and euros. At that point, we believe it would be too late for the US-Colombia to invade either Iran or Venezuela. They could well bring on nuclear war with China and Russia. Mr. Bush is playing chicken with both countries, and we can assure you China and Russia will call Mr. Bush's bluff. Then again, there is nothing normal about George Bush and he may just take the game all the way. If he does, half of the American population will end up as crispy critters.

Venezuela may get a little unexpected help. Warren Buffett and Bill Gates are shorting the dollar and central banks have been shifting out of dollars and will continue to do so for financial preservation. Of course, Venezuela should join them if they have not already.

Do not feel bad for America, they reelected George W. Bush, so they are getting the kind of government they deserve. Seventy percent of central banks are moving out of dollars. Venezuela has every reason to denominate oil and gas in euros.

The time is right and it will preempt an invasion.

As we explained in the last issue, anyone who holds dollars has to contend with a 9-1/2% inflation rate plus depreciation of the dollar. If that isn't lose-lose, we do not know what is. There is no question that the Bush cabal is a criminal enterprise; lies to justify invasion for profit; torture, abuse, ritual rape by perverts from the CIA and the Mossad. The murder of hundreds of thousands of innocent people and tragic loss and maiming of tens of thousands of young American soldiers, so Bush and his cronies can get richer. Hugo Chavez is right.

The US will knock off those who disagree with George one by one. You must keep in mind we do not come from the left side of the political equation, but from the far, far right. We know disaster when we see it. We know what George and the neocons are doing is threatening the very existence of the American people and many other nations.

Venezuela had best move fast or they will become a foot-note of history.

The recent Granda kidnapping was a transparent excuse to start a war. It does not get any more complicated than that. The crisis is calculated not only to embroil Venezuela and Colombia, but all of South America. The Colombian government is doing exactly what George and his elitist neocons have done in Iraq and Afghanistan. Invade any country you want on any pretext and justify it over some flimsy lying excuse.

Deliberate provocation for war.

Mr. Chavez did not take the bait from the US-Colombia to invade or react recklessly. Mr. Bush just might meet up with Chinese and Russian military elements. That would certainly up the anti. Colombian forces are doing exactly as they are being told by US advisers.

Irrespective of Mr. Chavez's politics, we agree that the invasion and occupation of Afghanistan and Iraq was wrong and we oppose the Free Trade of the Americas Pact. These are the same positions Mr. Chavez has taken, and for that stand; Mr. Bush has decided to destroy Venezuela and its democratic government.

For our similar stand, we are marked people by the US government. From Mr. Bush's point of view it is all about guaranteeing Venezuelan oil exclusively for US use and to make sure FTAA is implemented in the next to final step toward world government.

If Venezuela goes down, we will all go down, one at a time.

Colombia is totally under the control of the US government, which finds them totally expendable. In fact, the elitists despise the Colombians.

Venezuelans are willing to fight to keep their government, but they have to be trained ... this means a crash course has to begin soon.

The public, no matter how motivated, cannot defeat a well-trained, well-equipped and well-disciplined army ... the days ahead are going to be very difficult ones, get prepared.

China Seeks To Double Trade with Israel

[WD NOTE: Israel has long been a supporter of Red China diplomatically and with the sale of weapons and technology. While Israel is quite widely known as having supported "Right-wing regimes" and paramilitary units in South and Central America, for e.g. and played a typically duplicitous role in its relations with White South Africa; what is not so well known is Israel's link with regimes such as those of Panama's Noriega, Idi Amin before he turned on Zionism, the communists in Ethiopia and the Khmer Rouge.

What is important to realise is that Israel operates dialectically, and cannot be pigeon holed as "right-wing" or "Left-wing". It will support both simultaneously, just as Jewish intellectual figures have in recent years jumped from Left to "Right", and have redefined "conservatism" to suit Israel's agenda.

By BARBARA OPALL-ROME, TEL AVIV
China hopes to double its trade with Israel over the next three years, from nearly $2.5 billion registered in 2004 to $5 billion or more by 2008, according to Beijing's top diplomat here, who declined to discuss specifics of the two countries' defense trade.

In an April 7 lecture at the Hebrew University of Jerusalem. Ambassador Chen Yonglong noted that Sino-Israeli trade is growing at an annual rate of some 40 percent.

When asked specifically about bilateral defense trade ties, however — and about U.S. claims that Israel is Beijing's second largest supplier of arms and military technology after Russia — Chen demurred from providing additional data.

He insisted, however, that China does not constitute a military threat to the United States, and that pressure from Washington to trample Sino-Israeli defense trade is unjustified.

"In principle, if I do business with you, I don't think others should interfere,"

Chen said.

Intense U.S. government pressure — coupled with veiled threats to curtail the more than $2 billion that Israel receives each year in U.S. military aid — forced Israel to cancel in May 2000 a signed and legally binding contract with China for the sale of aerial early warning aircraft. Israel suffered heavy monetary and political penalties as a result of the contract violation.

Now, U.S. officials are insisting that Israel suspend work associated with a 1997 contract for radar-killing drones sold to the Chinese military. China shipped several systems and related components back to Israel several months ago, ostensibly for repair. U.S. officials, however, suspect the systems were returned to Israel for upgrading, including the incorporation of real-time data transmission capabilities. Until the U.S.-Israeli impasse on the matter is settled, the Harpy systems and related subsystems are being held in storage by Israel Aircraft Industries, prime contractor for both the Phalcon aerial early warning planes and the Harpy anti-radiation drones.

In his April 7 lecture, Chen noted that bilateral trade between China and Israel is “skyrocketing ... Our interests are very complementary, and there is a solid base of cooperation that has been established in a relatively short period.”

Chen said, referring to Beijing’s formal establishment of diplomatic ties with the Jewish state in 1992.

He said the two countries are discussing the establishment of a bilateral research and development fund to encourage more Israeli and Chinese firms to engage in joint development projects. Chen noted that as of 2003, there were 146 Israeli investment projects in China, with a contracted value of some $203 million. “China-Israeli cooperation is leaping to a new stage,” Chen said.

“It’s becoming more mature. Our two countries are joining in a strategic partnership to bring about a brighter tomorrow.”

And while the bilateral trade balance still tilts in favor of Chinese exports to Israel, Chen said China is importing an increasing amount of Israeli products and technologies, principally from the agricultural, telecommunications, aviation, medical and other high-technology market sectors. “In 2004, Israel became China’s seventh largest trade partner, its fifth export market and its 10th import market in the West Asia/North African region,” Chen said.

New York Times Minimizes Palestinian Deaths The Perversions of Daniel Okrent

By ALISON WEIR

contact@ifamericansknew.org

April 25, 2005

Daniel Okrent, NY
Times’ Jewish “Ombudsman”

[WD Note: In recent years there has been much wailing from Zionists and their “Christian” allies that the news media is biased AGAINST Israel. At least this is a complaint that is often seen in letter columns in New Zealand newspapers, despite the large presence of Jews in media ownership, editorship and reporting. The following study shows that The NY Times, the most influential of US newspapers, at least, slants the news in favour of Israel].

A little over a week ago, some members of our organization, If Americans Knew, met with New York Times Public Editor Daniel Okrent to discuss the findings of a detailed study we had completed of two years worth of Times news stories on the Israeli-Palestinian conflict. Okrent was going to be writing a column discussing the paper’s coverage of Israel/Palestine, and we felt our study would be an important resource.

that only Jewish reporters could cover this issue and that, while their reporting would be more accurate if some of them lived in the West Bank or Gaza, they probably wouldn't do this because it would be too dangerous for them (despite the fact that such Jewish Israeli journalists as Amira Haas have lived there for years).

The fact that it could be both possible and valuable to have additional ethnic groups involved in covering this issue, including some without ethnic connection to this ethnic dispute, seemed incomprehensible to him. Finally, we were astounded at his assumption that it would be impossible for the Times to find sufficient numbers of high quality journalists of Muslim or Arab heritage to work on this issue. ...

Soviet pride, shame

Honour Russia's sacrifice but don't forget Stalin's crimes and the Allies' culpability, Eric Margolis writes

By ERIC MARGOLIS,

TORONTO SUN

May 8, 2005

WD NOTE: Eric Margolis is a columnist for the Toronto Sun, Canada. Apparently himself of Jewish descent, independently wealthy and well travelled, Margolis is a columnist of rare insight and courage. He has written many excellent articles on the Israeli-Palestinian conflict, on the true nature of the US-sponsored Northern Alliance in Afghanistan and on American globalist adventurism.

It could be that this article is the most courageous so far. Note in particular that Margolis mentions World War II had much to do with a conflict with the financial systems of Germany and Italy which threatened the world money-lending system.

Emphasis added.

PRESIDENT GEORGE W. Bush is due to attend ceremonies in Moscow tomorrow commemorating the 60th anniversary of the Soviet Union's victory over Germany in 1945. It is both right and wrong that he be there.

Right, because many North Americans and British mistakenly believe their nations alone defeated National Socialist Germany. In fact, Stalin's Soviet Union, not the western democracies, played the decisive role in defeating Adolf Hitler and his European allies. While rightly honouring our own heroic veterans, it's time we also recognize and pay homage to Russia's dauntless courage, endurance and suffering.

-The Soviet Union inflicted 75% of all World War II German casualties in titanic battles involving millions of men. Soviet forces killed 3 million German troops, and lost 11.3 million, with 18.3 million wounded. Twenty million Russian civilians died.

Britain lost 340,000 men, Canada 43,000, and the U.S. about 150,000 in the European Theater. The $11 billion of U.S. military aid to the U.S.S.R. helped Stalin, but was not decisive.

- When Allied forces landed at Normandy, the Wehrmacht's "guts had been ripped out by the Soviets," said Winston Churchill. Had the Allies met 1940's strength and quality German troops, with an intact Luftwaffe, they would have been driven into the English Channel. However battered, the Wehrmacht fought ferociously from 1944 to '45, recalling Churchill's dictum, "You will never know war until you fight Germans."

- The Soviet defeat of Japan's forces in Manchuria has been ignored. In a brilliant, blitzkrieg campaign along a 3,000-km front on Aug. 9, 1945, Soviet Far Eastern armies crushed Japan's weakened 710,000-man Kwantung Army, killing 80,000 and capturing 594,000.

So it's right to honour Russia's valiant soldiers. But it's also wrong to keep on ignoring the Soviet Union's monstrous crimes or the Allies' alliance with the tyrant who committed them.

Nazi concentration camps like Buchenwald and Auschwitz are household names. But who recalls even more murderously prolific Soviet death camps like Kolyma, Vorkuta and Magadan?

Kaganovich, Stalin's Jewish "Himmler"

Stalin told Churchill he had killed 10 million farmers in the early 1930s, and hailed the butcher of 6 million Ukrainians, Commissar Lazar Kaganovich, as "our Himmler." The best current estimate of

Stalin's victims is 20 million murdered before

WWII, and 10 million from 1941 to '53, a total "democide" of 30 million. Hitler's toll was around 12 million after 1941.

[WD NOTE: Kaganovich, "Stalin's Himmler", was Jewish, as were a disproportionate number of Secret Police, and in particular the NKVD chiefs. See "Jews & The Red Terror", Renaissance Press, NZ. Yet while it is illegal in many countries to question the "war guilt" collectively put upon the German people; it is conversely also illegal to mention the role some Jews played in communism and its atrocities].

Nor did German aggression alone begin the war in Europe.

German-Soviet aggression did. We forget Hitler and Stalin jointly invaded, then partitioned Poland under the notorious Molotov-Ribbentrop Pact, that Moscow has never renounced. Seven million Poles died, half of them were Jews. The U.S.S.R. then went on to invade Finland, Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania.

In 1939, Hitler, whose major crimes still lay ahead of him, was seen by many Europeans as a hero who had pulled Germany out of economic collapse, restored national dignity and provided the main bulwark against the very real threat of communist mass murder engulfing western Europe. Yet Britain and the U.S. chose to become war partners with Stalin, by then history's worst mass killer. Churchill and particularly Franklin Roosevelt must share indirect guilt for Stalin's crimes, just as they would had they joined Hitler.

This aspect of the war remains taboo. At Yalta, the left-leaning Roosevelt, besotted by "Uncle Joe" Stalin's power, delivered half of Europe to communist rule, replacing a greater tyranny for a lesser one.

What should the Allies have done? In 1939, the 20th-century's leading military thinker, Maj.-Gen. J.F.C Fuller, urged Britain not to go to war over Poland, but await the inevitable war between Germany and the U.S.S.R. that would destroy them both, then liberate Europe. Otherwise, he warned, Stalin would emerge the victor. Hitler was declared "the supreme evil" and ideological war declared. Fuller was pilloried and ignored.

It's time Canada, the U.S. and Britain face their culpability in abetting Stalin. They should demand Russia come clean over Stalin's crimes and prosecute Soviet officials and police who are still alive. Bush at least took a first step by rebuking the Kremlin for its invasion of the Baltic states. Continuing to beat the drums about Nazi crimes, however horrible, while ignoring egregious communist crimes is profoundly dishonest.

[WD NOTE: Soviet war criminals will never be prosecuted because a large number are Jewish, and some live in Israel which refuses to extradite them to Latvia, Poland and Lithuania where they are indeed wanted for war crimes, while again with a double standard, Israel and World Zionism continue to demand the extradition of European war veterans who fought on the German side, often to liberate their lands from Soviet domination. Unlike Jewish war criminals and NKVD veterans, these European veterans are stripped of their citizenship and extradited often on the basis of perjured testimony, because to doubt the word of an elderly Jewish "survivor" would itself be deemed "anti-Semitism". Hence, Frank Walus, for e.g., a Pole who worked on a German farm when a lad during World War II, had his life and health wrecked trying to prove he was not an SS officer, on the basis of Jewish perjury. Yet why aren't these perjurers prosecuted?].

Too much lingering wartime propaganda still clouds our historical memory. Some other forgotten points:

- Germany's September 1939 invasion of Poland did not begin WWII. It began five months earlier when Fascist Italy invaded little Albania. Or arguably in 1936 when Japan invaded China.

- In the 1920s, Churchill authorized using poison gas against rebellious Kurdish tribesmen in Iraq and on India's northwest frontier. In the '30s, Italy used poison gas and concentration camps to break resistance in Libya.

- As German generals Rommel and Guderian were smashing across the Meuse on May 12-15, 1940, in the epic Battle of France, Hitler remarked that his generals were more eager to march on Berlin than Paris. The failure by Britain and the U.S. to support anti-Nazi Germans in the late 1930s and again in 1944 proved a tragic mistake.

- WWII was not a simple conflict between democracy and tyranny, as we are misinformed, but a clash between imperial powers, ideology and economic systems. Italy's fascism, and Germany's National Socialism, threatened not only Europe but Britain's and America's capitalist system and money-lending financial elites.

In 1939, the British Empire still ruled swathes of Asia and Africa. Germany, Italy and Japan went to war against the British, French, Dutch, Belgian colonial empires and the U.S. Pacific Imperium.

- No sooner were the Netherlands liberated from German occupation by Canada in 1945 than Dutch troops were sent to re-occupy the former Dutch colony, Indonesia, which had proclaimed independence. Dutch and British colonial forces massacred tens of thousands of Indonesians from 1945 to '49, acting with far more brutality than German troops did in Holland.

- At war's end, 15 million ethnic Germans were driven from ancestral homes across Eastern Europe. Two to 3 million Germans were killed. Two million German women were raped by the Red Army.

Nazi 'survivor' admits fiction

From correspondents in Madrid

thetruthisback@yahoo.com).

A SPANISH citizen who was chairman of an association of Spanish Republicans deported from France to Nazi concentration camps during World War II has admitted his tale of surviving the Flossenbuerg camp was a lie.

Enric Marco, 84, chaired the survivors' association right through to the eve of this week's 60th anniversary of the liberation of the Mauthausen camp in Austria, but now says he never set foot in a Nazi camp.

A historian researching the Mauthausen anniversary used the opportunity to look into events at Flossenbuerg and failed to find any trace of Mr Marco ever having been there.

Spain was neutral in World War II following its civil war, which ended in 1939, but thousands of Republicans hostile to the victorious regime of General Francisco Franco fled to France and were interned in camps from which many were later deported to Germany.

Mr Marco was already in Austria for the Mauthausen ceremony when the news of his deception emerged and the association ordered his return.

"I admit I never was interned in the Flossenbuerg camp, though I was in preventative detention accused of plotting against the Third Reich," he said.

He said he was freed and sent back to Spain in 1943.

Mr Marco has given hundreds of conferences in schools about his pretended experiences and wrote a biography called Memory of Hell in 1978.

He was also secretary general of the Communist CNT union and chairman of a pupil-parents federation.

The association's treasurer, Jesus Ruiz, said Mr Marco's deception was a sorry affair.

"This story is a boon for the (Holocaust) deniers," he said.

It was the latest of 25 high ranking Chinese military delegations, led by generals, which have visited NZ as guests of the NZ Defence Force since 1996.

...Chinese embassy spokesman Zhang Wei said military visits had become one of China's main areas of co-operation with NZ.

"Bi-lateral exchanges concerning the military have been quite good in recent years, he said.

"From China's side we want to learn more about training soldiers - NZ is quite good at that." Sunday Star Times, May 1.

Poultry feathers a risk

Poultry feathers imported from China to make products such as pillows could carry the avian flu virus, a British microbiologist says. Prof. Hugh Pennington is urging the British Government to consider banning them. Imports of Chinese poultry meat are already banned in Britain, but duck, chicken and turkey feathers are still being brought in. Prof. Pennington said the virus could survive in faecal material on the feathers. Dominion Post, March 7.

NZ gears up for bird bug epidemic

The Government is boosting supplies of face masks, gloves and gowns to protect health workers and police against a possible outbreak of deadly bird flu...

The World Health Organisation has warned that up to 100 million people could die within weeks, if there is an avian flu pandemic. Dominion Post, March 26.

Asian giants sign agreement

The leaders of China and India announced a "strategic partnership" aimed at strengthening economic and political ties between two Asian giants - and long-time rivals - which together account for nearly 40% of the world's population.

Indian Prime Minister Manmohan Singh and Chinese counterpart Wen Jiabao oversaw the signing of the agreement on border issues, trade and development of energy resources to fuel their booming economies....

"India and China can together reshape the world order," Mr Singh said after a ceremony welcoming Mr Wen to India's presidential palace. Dominion Post, April 13.

Bankers, Farmers & Communism

The following is drawn from the memoirs of Yegor Ligachev, deputy to Gorbachev, who as a hard-liner split with his chief over the reforms that were designed to make the USSR a colony of international finance, as originally intended. Very similar quotes have been made by other personalities such as H G Wells, the Fabian socialist, and eminent American historian and liberal internationalist Prof. C Quigley.

Ligachev recounts merely in passing (and probably quite oblivious to the profundity of the comments) a conversation he had with an American banker which I think is illustrative of the similar nature of communism and capitalism. The whole paragraph follows:

"I recall my conversation with an American banker, John Crystal, from Iowa whom I met in Moscow in 1989. We had only just started exchanging opinions when he asked me right out: 'Mr. Ligachev, you deal with agricultural policy. Tell me, have they really decided to abandon collective and state farms in the USSR and start creating small farms?' I answered his question with a question: 'And how do you view this problem?'. He answered with an expressive 'loco' gesture. 'Whoever wants to break up large farms into small ones is obviously not all there. The process of concentrating, amalgamating, individual farms is rapidly taking place in the whole world, America included. Only large farms can fully utilize the new achievements of agronomy and technology'." Inside Gorbachev's Kremlin, Yegor Ligachev, Pantheon Books 1993.

“Chinese” Communist?....

Israel Epstein on the cover of his memoirs

She was the sister of T V Soong who headed the Sassoon Bank in China. He held various high offices in the Kuomintang Government, becoming premier in 1949. However, he left for the USA when he failed to unite Chiang Kai-shek's nationalists with the Communists. Since the Sassoon banking dynasty only employed Jews, it must be assumed that the Toong dynasty is descended from Chinese Jews, Judaism having been in China since the 3rd Century AD, according to Jewish sources.

The relationship between Israel and Red China has always been friendly. Israel was the only Middle East State to recognise Red China from its foundation. (Western Destiny Note. Emphasis and pictures added).

The following eulogy to Israel Epstein, yet another shadowy leader of Communism of Jewish descent, reveals that even in China the Communist movement had the same influences as that of communism in most other countries. As the article shows, Epstein was among the most influential of advisers and propagandists in China. What Arnold Leese called the "Jewish rotting of China" included the Sassoon dynasty, the so-called "Rothschilds of the East", who controlled the opium trade and who (like their counterparts in South Africa re. the Anglo-Boer War) got the British Empire to do its dirty work (The Opium Wars) in maintaining by military force their nefarious trade when the Chinese sought to free themselves from it. When Sun Yat Sen started China's road to revolution, his principal aide was Morris Cohen (aka Moi Sha). The Soviet Comintern agents Borodin and Joffe were important in establishing communism in China. The head of the Political Department of the Red Army was J B Gamarnik. The second largest supplier of military equipment, including the latest US technology, to China, is Israel. The arms trade with China was headed by the recently deceased MOSSAD-connected Shaul Eisenberg.

As the following article states Epstein worked particularly closely with Soong Ch'ing-ling, Sun Yat-sen's wife. Soong became a vice-chairman of the Communist Government after the 1949 take-over.

Israel Epstein, Prominent Chinese Communist, Dies at 90

By DOUGLAS MARTIN
New York Times, June 2, 2005

Israel Epstein, a journalist, author and propagandist for China whose passion for Communism was fueled in long interviews with Mao in the 1940's and was not dimmed by imprisonment during the Cultural Revolution, died last Thursday at a hospital in Beijing. He was 90.

His death was announced by the official New China News Agency.

Mr. Epstein edited China Today, an English-language Chinese newsmagazine, translated the sayings and writings of Mao and Deng Xiaoping and advised the Chinese government on how to polish its overseas image. He became a Chinese citizen, joined the Communist Party and served on official government and party committees. [Emphasis added].

He and perhaps a dozen other aging foreign-born residents of Beijing were sometimes seen as the last true believers in a revolution that has sometimes seemed blurred by time's passage and China's embrace of free markets and consumerism.

In 1996, The Observer, the London newspaper, said, "Perhaps the most loyal Communists in the country today are foreigners, veteran fellow travelers from a vanished era of idealism."

Mr. Epstein hung Mao's portrait on his bedroom wall; knew the American journalist Edgar Snow well enough to help edit his books; was a protégé of the widow of Sun Yat-sen, the founder of China's first republic; and was able to say the five years he spent in prison on false charges during the Cultural Revolution had helped improve him by shrinking his ego. For decades China's top leaders visited him on his birthdays.

"My basic ideas have not changed," he told The Observer. "I see no reason to change them."

Israel Epstein was born on April 20, 1915, in Warsaw, then under Russian control. His father was imprisoned by the czarist authorities for leading a labor uprising, and his mother was once exiled to Siberia.

"The earliest influence on me came from my socialist parents," Mr. Epstein said in an interview with China Daily in 2003.

After the outbreak of World War I, his father was sent by his company to Japan to develop business in the Pacific region. As the German Army approached Warsaw, his mother, with him in her arms, fled the city and traveled east to be reunited with her husband. After experiencing anti-Jewish sentiment in several places, they settled in Tianjin in north China. He was then 2.

Mr. Epstein began his career as a journalist at 15, working for the Tianjin-based Peking and Tientsin Times, an English-language newspaper. He covered China's struggle against Japanese invaders for United Press and other Western news organizations. In 1941, a short item in The New York Times reported that he had been killed, but it later turned out that he had faked his death to divert the Japanese who were hunting him. He anonymously submerged into a Japanese internment camp for a while.

Mr. Epstein became acquainted with Mr. Snow after his editor assigned him to review one of Mr. Snow's books, and Mr. Snow showed him his classic "Red Star Over China" before it was published. Mr. Snow reciprocated by reading Mr. Epstein's unpublished works.

In Hong Kong, Mr. Epstein worked with Soong Ching Ling, Sun Yat-sen's widow, whom he had met in left-wing political activities in the 1930's. She arranged for him to visit Mao, Zhou Enlai and their revolutionary comrades at their base in China's northwest in 1944, and Mr. Epstein said his conversations in a cave with Mao had changed his life.

In 1944, Mr. Epstein visited Britain, then spent the next five years in the United States, where he published "The Unfinished Revolution in China" to good reviews. Other books he wrote were first published in Chinese and included "From Opium War to Liberation" in 1954, "Tibet Transformed" in 1983 and "Woman in World History: Soong Ching Ling" in 1993.

"Three CPPCC members with foreign origins celebrated their 90th birthday together... on March 8" 2005, states the People's Daily online (March 9). The three are leading propagandists, Israel Epstein, Sidney Shapiro (both born in Poland) and Chen Bidi born in Canada

In 1951, Ms. Soong invited him to return to China to edit China Reconstructs, later renamed China Today. He was editor in chief until his retirement at 70, and then editor emeritus.

His five years in prison during the Cultural Revolution, on charges of plotting against Zhou, ended in 1973 with a personal apology from Zhou and a restoration of his exalted position.

His prominence in China was suggested by the annual talks Mao had with him. Deng attended Mr. Epstein's retirement reception in 1985. On April 17, the Chinese president, Hu Jintao, visited him and praised his "special contributions" to China.

Mr. Epstein first wife, Elsie Fairfax-Cholmeley, died in 1984. He is survived by his wife, Wan Bi, two children and two stepchildren.

He will be buried at the Babaoshan Cemetery for Revolutionaries.
